The misrepresentations and the manner in which the cheating was carried out by the accused were not set out with any precision in the charge against the accused under S. 420, Penal Code. Nor was the accused questioned with regard to the misrepresentations upon which he was convicted.

Held, that although a retrial need not be ordered merely on account of a defect in the charge, the proceedings involved a more serious irregularity and, therefore, a retrial should start from before the framing of the charge and not from before the examination of the accused under S. 342, Criminal Pro. Code. (Davis, C.J.) BHAGWANDAS v. EMPEROR. I.L.R. (1942) Kar 112=202 I.C. 206=15 R. S. 33=43 Cr.L.J. 799=A.I.R 1942 Sind 102.

———Complaint for offence triable under warrant procedure—Complainant absent on day fixed for return of notice—Dismissal of complaint—Fresh complaint—Sustainability.

The petitioner filed a complaint before the Sub-Magistrate charging the accused with certain offences for which the accused could be tried only under the warrant procedure. Notice was ordered to the accused and the case was posted to a certain date for the appearance of the accused. On that day the petitioner was absent and the Magistrate exercised his jurisdiction under S. 259, Cr. P. Code, and discharged the accused. The petitioner thereupon filed another complaint but the Magistrate refused to accept the same, one of the reasons given being that it would be tantamount to a review application, which the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to grant.

Held, in revision, that the Magistrate was bound to entertain the second complaint as the accused had only been discharged and the previous complaint had not been disposed of on the merits. (Horwill, J.) ACHANNA KAMTHI, In re. 55 L.W. 690=1942 M.W.N. 758 (1)=(1942) 2 M.L. J. 554.

CRIMINAL TRIAL.

——Complaint—Part of offence omitted—Omitted part rendering complaint of Civil Court necessary—Jurisdiction of Magistrate—Offence under S. 206, Penal Code—Procedure.

The complainant stated that he had filed a suit in the Civil Court against the first accused with respect to his land, that he had filed an application in the suit for attachment of the standing crops on the land and for distraint of the first accused's cattle and that the petitioner, joining with the first accused, had removed the harvested crops and the cattle to his own field and claimed them as his with the object of preventing the receiver appointed by the Civil Court from taking possession of the property. The petitioner contended that the offence said to be committed was one punishable under S. 206, I. P. Code, which required a complaint by the Civil Court.

Held, that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to entertain the case in the absence of a complaint from the Civil Court. When the offence complained of has relation to a Civil Court and is intended to render fruitless the proceedings of the Court it is against public policy that a Magistrate should take cognizance of the case which the Legislature clearly intended should be taken cognizance of only on the motion of the Civil Court concerned. It is not open to the Magistrate in such a case to entertain the complaint which for purposes of giving jurisdiction ignores part of the offence. ——Conviction—Basing of, on accused's statement alone—Propriety and legality—Statement how to be considered—Duty of Court.

A conviction based solely upon the statement made by an accused person should not be allowed to stand unless there are very strong circumstances and each case must depend upon its own circumstances. Where there is no sufficient evidence for conviction or from vagueness of the prosecution evidence the Court is not prepared to act on it, it should not be open to the Court to supplement the prosecution evidence by selecting out of the statement of the accused person, passages, which might corroborate the prosecution evidence and to reject those passages which go to exonerate the accused person. No general rule can be laid down regarding the use which is to be made of the statement of an accused person in Court. Due consideration must of course be given to every part of the statement but the Court must exercise its judgment and common sense in accepting or rejecting any portion of the statement as true or untrue. Although there is room for suspicion against an accused person charged with murder, it would not be safe to convict the accused in the absence of reliable evidence. In cases of aconite poisoning, the symptoms of numbness of the tongue and so forth in the mouth of the victim come on very quickly, within three to five minutes. Where therefore the evidence is to the effect that there was a longer interval between the taking of the food alleged to contain aconite and the appearance of these symptoms, there are elements of reasonable doubt in the case. A prosecution is not bound to call witnesses irrespective of considerations of number and of reliability, though witnesses essential to the unfolding of the narrative on which the prosecution is based must of course be called. It is not for the prosecutor to discharge the functions both of prosecution and of defence. Evidence of people living in the locality recorded by the Police a week after the occurrence in the course of their investigation in which the police did not leave the place of occurrence for a single moment after they had reached there, must, because of that circumstance alone, be looked upon with great suspicion. A test to assess the credibility of evidence is whether the evidence is inherently probable and whether the conduct of the prosecution witnesses is such as would invest them with any measure of veracity. ———Evidence—Appreciation—Recovery of stolen property—Evidence as to attacked—Matters for consideration.

When the evidence of the recovery of stolen property is attacked, the Court has to examine the evidence in the light of the following alternative hypothesis:—(1) The complainant might have been persuaded by the police to state in the first information report that property which in fact was not stolen had been stolen and to hand over such property to the police to be used in fabricating recoveries from the accused persons. This assumes a conspiracy between the informant and the police from the very start. (2) The police might have obtained property similar to the stolen property from the complainant or some one else and used it for the purpose of fabricating the recoveries. (3) The police might have suppressed some of the stolen property recovered from an accused person and utilized in inventing a recovery from another accused person. The object of preliminary inquiry and of putting questions to the child witness is only to prevent waste of time of the Court, if, as a result of such inquiry, it is found that the child is neither intelligent nor able to give evidence which may be acceptable. The absence of such an inquiry will not in any way prejudice the accused in a criminal trial, if the same result is obtained in the course of the examination of the witness in the trial itself, especially in a trial with the aid of a jury, who may form their own estimate from the demeanour of the child witness. The holding of a preliminary inquiry is only a rule of prudence and is not a legal obligation upon the judge. The evidence of the child witness will disclose whether he is capable of giving intelligible testimony or not. There is no doubt that the normal sentence on a conviction for murder, is death and under S. 367, Cr. P. Code, if the Court imposes any other sentence it has to give reasons for not passing a sentence of death. S. 22 of the Madras Children Act provides that no "child" or "young person" (that is, a person under 14 or one who is 14 but under 16 years of age) shall be sentenced to death. There is no provision of law that a sentence of death shall not be passed on a person of or above 16, but not more than 18 years of age. A sentence of death cannot be commuted in the absence of mitigating circumstances purely on the ground of the young age of the accused. To do so would be to extend the Children Act beyond the age contemplated by the Legislature. The prerogative of mercy lies with the Provincial Government and it is for the Legislature to amend the Children Act if it thinks fit so as to fix the age below which a sentence of death shall hot be passed at a higher level. CRIMINAL TRIAL.

Criminal Court is, within certain limits, within the discretion of the trial Court, and it is in many cases one of the most delicate matters with which Criminal Courts have to deal. While it is desirable to avoid sending a first offender to prison, where a man has shown from his past actions that he intends to adopt a criminal career, the Court should bear in mind, first, that it is necessary to pass a sentence upon the accused which will make him realize that a life of crime becomes increasingly hard and does not pay; secondly, that the sentence should serve as a warning to others who may be thinking of adopting a criminal career; and thirdly that the public must be protected against people who show they are going to ignore the rules framed for the protection of society. In the case of old offenders the sentence cannot be determined by any rule of thumb. In each case the circumstances have to be considered. The number of past convictions, the interval of time which has elapsed between one conviction and another and especially since the last conviction, and of course, the nature of the offences previously proved are all matters to be looked at. The effect of S. 10 (2) of the Criminal Tribes Act is that where a member of a criminal tribe goes from one district of one Province to another district of another Province, the provisions of the Act and rules apply to him in the new district of the new Province as if he had been registered in pursuance of a direction, made under S. 4 of the Local Government of the new Province, and the notifications issued affecting him, issued by the Government of the Province he has left, are deemed to have been issued under S. 3 and S. 10 (1) of the Act by the Local Government of the new Province to which he has gone. Before such a person can be convicted of the offence of failure to give daily hazuri, it must be proved that the notification issued by the Local Government of his old Province under S. 10 (1) required him to give daily hazuri. If that is not proved, he cannot be convicted of the offence under S. 22 (2) (a) of the Act even if he pleads guilty. Where a plaintiff sues for ejectment and possession of a house site on its transfer contrary to an alleged custom of non-transferability, it is his bounden duty to prove not only that there was a custom of non-transferability of the sites in the village but it is further obligatory on him to show that the custom was continuous. Whether the custom was continuous or whether its continuity was broken and the custom was not enforced by the plaintiff for a long period of time is a question which has to be decided from the proved facts of each case. This is no doubt a question of law. Where during a long course of years it was found that the occupiers of village sites in a particular area were transferring their rights from time to time involving a change of possession, and no action was taken on behalf of the talugdar to prevent disturbance of, and interference with, the alleged custom of non-transferability, it was held, that the essential element of continuity was not established and that hence there was no custom of non-transferability of house sites in the village. Where it is sought to establish a local custom by which the residents or any section of them of a particular district, city, village or place are entitled to commit on land not belonging to or occupied by them, acts which, if there was no such custom, would be acts of trespass, the Court should not decide that such custom exists, unless the Court is satisfied of its reasonableness and its certainty as to extent and application, and is further satisfied by the evidence that the enjoyment of the right was not by leave granted or by stealth or by force, and that it had been openly enjoyed for such a length of time as suggests that originally, by agreement or otherwise, the usage had become a customary law of the place in respect of the persons and things which is concerned. There was a close connection between the wajib-ul-arz of village C and that of village B and the wajib-ul-arz of the latter was the first to be prepared in that ilaqa. If the custom in village C was the same as in village B the wajib-ul-arz of the former instead of setting forth the custom in full merely referred to the provisions of the wajib-ul-arz of village B. While the wajib-ul-arz of village C, referred to the custom recorded in the wajib-ul-arz of village B with regard to scattered trees and tenant's rights therein, it stated that there were no tenant's groves. But it had recorded two cases of escheat of such groves on the ground of abandonment. On a question whether there was custom of escheat of groves to landlord on abandonment existed in village C it was held, that the two wajib-ul-arz must be read together and that in view of the custom as to scattered trees and the general identity of custom in the two villages; and the fact that there were two instances of escheat on the ground of abandonment recorded in the wajib-ul-arz of village C, the custom of escheat of groves on abandonment by tenants was proved by documentary evidence to exist in the village C. The most cogent evidence of custom is not that which is afforded by the expression of opinion as to the existence but by the enumeration of instances in which the alleged custom has been acted upon, and by the proof afforded by judicial or revenue records or private accounts and receipts that the custom has been enforced. No value can therefore be attached to the broad general statements made by the witness who assert the alleged custom but do not enumerate instances in support of their assertion. ——(Punjab)—Applicability—Brahmans—Presumption—Brahmans of Batura village in Tahsil of Phillaur.

In the case of high caste Hindus—and the Brahmans occupy the topmost place in the Hindu social hierarchy —where nothing else is known, the presumption is that they are governed by their own personal law and not by custom. This presumption is, however, rebuttable and may be rebutted by proof to the contrary. Where the Brahmans of a certain village were its original founders and they still form a compact section of the village community, depend for their livelihood almost exclusively on agriculture and do not carry on any trade, business or priestly functions or take to service, and further they follow the same customs as are followed by the agricultural tribes of the province, these facts are sufficient to dislodge the initial presumption in favour of the application of personal law to them and to shift the onus of proving that they are not governed by custom on the party which relies on personal law. Where the Brahmans are governed by the general agricultural custom of the province, the burden of proving that in matters of alienation they are not governed by the general custom rests on the party who asserts it. The Brahmans of village Batura in the Tahsil of Phillaur in Jullundur district do not follow their personal law in matters of alienation but the general agricultural custom of the province according to which ancestral property cannot be alienated except for necessity or with the consent of the descendants of the alienor. DEED—Binding nature—Duty of Courts as to construction of.

Where adults put their names to documents they are bound by those documents unless they are able to give convincing proof that truth is otherwise, and it would make, in the long run, for justice if that burden is generally appreciated and generally applied. Courts in India often appear to go out of their way to guess what must have been the truth behind a mass of formal documents. But it is one thing to be, in law, able to go behind the document when there is convincing evidence admissible under the Evidence Act and another thing to arrive at the conclusion, that a document does not mean what it says by a series of brilliant guesses founded on nothing in particular excepting the ingenuity of counsel and the Judge's mind. ——Construction—Contract—Considerations—Antecedent, surrounding and contemporaneous circumstances —Reference to, if permissible.

When the words used in a contract are plain, no extraneous considerations are permissible ; neither antecedent correspondence, nor surrounding circumstances nor subsequent conduct. When a formal contract has been entered into, that must be construed according to its own terms and not be explained or interpreted by the antecedent communings which led up to it. The latter could only show what parties meant to do but cannot show what they did. Though when the terms of an agreement are ambiguous the surrounding and contemporaneous circumstances (not subsequent conduct) can be looked to, the rule has to be applied with the greatest care even in the rare cases to which it is applicable. Where one of parties thought there was a completed contract while the other insisted that there was not and the contemporaneous circumstances were that both the parties dealt in the commodities in question and that both were negotiating, one for the purchase and the other for the sale, of the goods in question and the circumstances fitted equally well with the existence or non-existence of a completed contract, it was held that it was not a case in which all the parties concerned had for years acted along a given set of lines which could only fit one case and not the other and that hence that it was not legitimate to try and correlate the meaning of the words used to existing facts, that is to say, to facts existing at the time of the dispute. (Bose, J.) MARKANDELAL v. SITAMBHARNATH. 203 I.C. 341=1942 N.L.J. 481.

——Construction—Lease or sale.

Where an under-proprietor transfers to another transferable and heritable rights for a premium reserving for himself a certain rent and malikana dues and continues to be recorded as under proprietor, the status of the transferee cannot be that of an under-proprietor as the simultaneous existence of two under-proprietary rights in the land is inconceivable and the transfer can only be a lease and not a sale; an under proprietor can only transfer such rights by a sale in which he reserves no interest for himself. He cannot transfer them and at the same time reserve some interest for himself. A distinction must be drawn between deeds of this nature executed by superior proprietors and similar deeds executed by under-proprietors. The position of the parties is in the one case consistent with a sale, in the other it is not. (Bennet, J.) SRI NATH v. RAM NARAIN. 204 I.C. 85=1942 A.W.R. ———Construction—Rules governing—Object.

It is a well-recognised rule of construction of deeds that the object of all interpretations is to discover the intention of the parties and that intention must be gathered from the written instrument itself. The Court has to ascertain what the parties meant by the words they have used and to give effect to the intention which is expressed by the words used by the parties themselves. Hence in the first instance endeavour must be made to deduce the intention from the actual words used in the instrument and it is only when the words are ambiguous and do not yield clear meaning that the extraneous evidence of surrounding circumstances may be looked into. The sense and the meaning of the parties in any particular part of an instument may be collected ex antecedentibus et consequentibus. ———Execution—Agreement to sell—Not signed by one of vendors—If can be enforced against others.

DEED.

The question whether an agreement to sell which is not signed by one of the vendors is operative or not depends upon the intention of the parties. If the intention of the parties in the document was that nobody would agree to sell his share unless all the others also agreed to sell their shares, it cannot be held that where one of them had failed to sign the document, the document was a complete document, on the other hand, if the sales were not interdependent in the sense that each vendor might well have sold his share of the property without reference to the sale by others, and what really should have been a number of separate sale deeds were rolled into one because of convenience, then the fact that in the agreement to sell one of the vendors had not joined would not affect the question of specific performance as between the vendee and the vendors who had signed the agreement to sell. fact that it did not arrive at its destination could not alter the fact that it was sent,

Held R. 26 did not empower the Government to call upon the suspected person to report his presence periodically, and it would not be possible to interpret sub-R. ——R. 34 (vi) (e), (f) and (g)—Applicability—Speech in respect of trade or industrial dispute—Offence—Several convictions in respect of same speech—Legality.

Though it is ordinarily unfair to apply the Defence of India Act to a speech made for the purpose of promoting the welfare of the workers in a trade or industrial dispute, where a speech by a person tends to endanger the public safety and hinder the defence of British India and is likely to influence, adversely to the war effort, his listeners and his fellow-workers, the Act can properly be applied. An objectionable remark in a speech cannot constitute several prejudicial acts merely because it is a prejudicial act in several ways. Nor can an objectionble remark be deemed a prejudicial act unless taken with the rest of the speech, which forms the back ground against which the remark must be viewed. A person cannot therefore be convicted three times for the same speech on the ground that it offended against the provisions of R. 34 (vi) (e), (f) and (g) of the rules under the Act. R. 34 (6) (e) of the Defence of India Rules though analogous to S. 124-A, I. P. Code, is wider in scope and includes not only acts which are "intended" but also acts which are "likely to" bring into hatred or contempt or excite disaffection and the explanations attached to S. 124-A are also omitted. ——R. 34 (6) (e)—'Prejudicial act'—Law of sedition as defined in I. P. Code—If applicable.

Sedition is none the less sedition because it is described by a less offensive name and the law relating to the offence of sedition as defined in the Penal Code is equally applicable to the prejudicial act defined in the Defence of India Rules. The omission in the Rules of the three "Explanations" appended to S. 124 A, I. P Code, does not affect the matter. These are added to remove any doubt as to the true meaning of the Legislature; they do not add to or subtract from the section itself; and the words used in the rules ought to be interpreted as if they had been explained in the same way. Intention is not a necessary ingredient of a prejudicial act as contemplated by R. 34 (6), (f) and (g) of the Defence of India Rules. A person who brings about a strike by mill-workers engaged in a war industry with the object of impeding the war effort would be guilty of an offence under R. 35 (4) read with R. 38 (5) of the Defence of India Rules. But where the notice for calling the strike is to remedy the real or supposed grievances of the workers resulting from an arbitrary exercise of the employer's power of dismissal without a fair inquiry or reasonable warning there is a lawful excuse for the strike and the person calling the strike would not be guilty, even though he knows that as a result of the strike essential war work would be impeded. It is difficult to say what "exercise, movement, evolution or drill" is not of a military character. Where the object of certain exercises made by a body of persons, about 150 in number, 75 of whom are armed with lathis about four to six feet long, is found to be to enable a large body of men to respond immediately to a word of command so that it would be possible for one man in charge of a large body of persons to make them execute his will without the need for any elaborate explanations or directions, it must be held that the exercises are of a military nature, and the organisers as well as the instructor of such exercises are guilty of the offence under R. 58 (1) of the Defence of India Rules, 1939. Where the charge against the petitioner was that he organised meetings at which intending satyagrahis made anti-war speeches, introduced them to the audience, made appreciative references to their speeches at the close of the meetings, and thereby abetted the satyagrahis in infringing the Defence of India Act and Rules, it was contended that as the principal offender had determined to commit an offence the petitioner committed no offence in merely announcing to the public that the principal offender intended to commit an offence.

Held, that the offence committed by the principal could not be committed in the absence of the public, and by bringing the principal who intended to commit an offence into contact with the public, the petitioner himself committed the offence of abetment within the meaning of R. 121. In applying S. 10 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act the Courts must be satisfied that in substance the suit falls within Chap. II of the Act, and the fact that relief of a subsidiary nature which falls within Chap. II is sought would not make the suit one falling under the Chapter within the meaning of S. 10. If it be necessary for a plaintiff to obtain some substantive relief before he can get the account which brings the suit within the Chapter, S. 10 will not apply. A suit by an agriculturist in a Subordinate Judge's Court claiming a declaration that the suit sale-deed is in the nature of a mortgage and that accounts should be taken on that basis, comes under S. 3 (a) in Chap. II of the Act, and hence no appeal lies from the decree in such suit in view of S. 10. (Beaumont, C.J. and Wadia, J.) CHUNILAL KEWALRAM v. RAMCHANDRA YESAJI. I.L.R. S. 71 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act enables an adjustment of a decree to be proved in a manner in which it could not be proved apart from that section, but that can only be done in a proceeding under the Act. S. 71 applies only to a decree passed in a proceeding under the Act. It is not open to a defendant to rely on an uncertified adjustment of a decree not passed in a proceeding under the Act, by showing that he has become an agriculturist since the date of the decree. S. 2 (vii) cannot be construed as allowing a woman who has been given in marriage by her father before he attained the age of puberty to repudiate the marriage n the same way as if she had been given in marriage by her uncle. All that S. 2 (vii) provides is that if a woman who has been given in marriage by her father before she has attained the age of 15 years repudiates he marriage before she attains the age of 18 years, she s entitled to obtain a decree for dissolution of the mar riage. It does not say that until she has obtained such a decree, she has the right of repudiation, that she has the right of dissolving her first marriage by repudiation. Until she has obtained a decree that the marriage has been dissolved, the marriage must be regarded as subsisting. Where the woman concerned has not obtained a decree for the dissolution of marriage, she is not under the Mahomedan law as it stands, since she was given in marriage by her father, entitled to repudiate the marriage as if she had been given in marriage by her uncle. The words the portions of the G. state occupied by the 'G. I. P. ——S. 3 (1)—'Reside'—Meaning.

The marriage between A, a Mahomedan girl and B, who had his home in the Punjab but was residing for his studies at Calcutta was solemnised under the Special Marriage Act on 23rd May, 1939, at Calcutta. A was a resident of Calcutta but the parties never resided together nor was the marriage consummated nor did the parties set up any matrimonial home at Calcutta. On 25th August, 1939, A presented a petition in the Calcutta High Court, for the dissolution of her marriage with B. Although prior to marriage B had resided for a considerable time at Calcutta for studies, after the marriage he went away to his home in the Punjab as the College was closed for holidays and was seen at Calcutta in the months of September, October and November, 1939. There was no evidence as to the whereabouts of B on the date of the petition by A,

Held, that even if B was absent from Calcutta on 25th August, 1939, when the petition for dissolution of marriage was filed, his absence was merely temporary and he must be deemed to be still residing within the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court within the meaning of the Act. R. 44 of Chap. 35-A of the Original Side Rules of the Calcutta High Court framed under S. 62 of the Divorce Act applies to all applications for transfer made under S. 8 of that Act, whether under the first or second part of that section. Consequently, a Judge sitting singly on the Original Side, duly empowered in this behalf by the Chief Justice, has jurisdiction to transfer a divorce suit from one District Court to another and an application need not be made to a Bench on the appellate side. S. 24, C. P. Code, has no application to the case. The same Judge has also jurisdiction to issue a writ of commission authorising the District Court before which the suit was pending to examine witnesses and his order would be governed by the rules relating to commissions contained in Chap. 22 of the Original Side Rules. —When can be dispensed with—Leave to dispense with presence of co-respondent—Procedure.

S. 11 of the Divorce Act makes it obligatory on a husband when he petitions for dissolution of marriage on the ground of adultery to make the alleged adulterer a co-respondent, unles he is excused from doing so on one of three grounds. The section excuses him from doing this when his wife is leading the life of a prostitute and also when the alleged adulterer is dead. The third case in which he can be excused is 'when the name of the alleged adulterer is unknown to the petitioner, although he has made due efforts to discover it'. A suit without the co-respondent cannot proceed until leave to dispense with his presence has actually been obtained. It is not sufficient merely to apply for leave at the trial A formal application has to be made before the trial and it has to be supported by proper evidence that the conditions of S. 11 of the Act have been complied with. The emoluments paid under S. 11 (e) of Act XXIII of 1936, to the hereditary cooks concerned for services rendered were fixed originally in firman relating thereto. It was fixed in perpetuity and was granted to cooks and menials themselves for performing the labour of cooking. There was no mention of any kind of grant to the families of such cooks. EASEMENT—Acquisition of—Efflux of time—If sufficient.

An easement is acquired by a suit being brought and 20 years prior user as an easement being proved. ———Customary easement—Proof of, requisites—Village pathway.

Proof of a customary easement is immensely more difficult than proof of an easement under S. 26 of the Limitation Act. The persons who rely on custom must prove that it was ancient, continuous, peaceable, certain and compulsory. Indiscriminate miscellaneous user of village land cannot establish the fact that such user had become a customary law of the place in respect of the persons and things which it concerned. The enjoyment is of too fugitive and patently permissive a kind to afford any support to it. Hence the taking of rubbish by some villagers over certain plots in their carts cannot make it a village pathway. Under S. 13 (b) read with S. 5 of the Easements Act, a right of way, though apparent, if it is formed way, is a discontinuous easement, and therefore it does not fall under S. 13 (b); it cannot be regarded as an easement of qualified necessity, or a quasi easement. There is no warrant for holding that a formed way must be regarded as a continuous easement. Having regard to the provisions of the Indian Easements Act it is not open in India in cases where the Easements Act applies to follow the English decisions subsequent to the Act and to hold that a formed and metalled pathway would be an apparent and continuous easement for the purpose of determining the rights of parties under S. 13 (b) which also applies to a continuous easement. Even if it be a formed way, it does not pass an easement of qualified necessity under S. 13; it can only pass as an easement of absolute necessity. that is to say, where it is not possible to have any other way for passage. Where before the expiry of the period of twenty years the plaintiff files a suit which is contested by the defendant and decided against the plaintiff, his inchoate right comes to an end, and no period subsequent to the filing of that suit can be added to the period before the filing of that suit to make up the period of 20 years of peaceable enjoyment without interruption. The last paragraph of S. 15 of the Easements Act gives a personal privilege to the Government when the Government is a party in the suit just in the same way as Art. 149 of the Limitation Act confers a privilege on Government. The result is that once a plaintiff established that he had exercised his rights as an easement against the predecessor in interest of the defendant whether the predecessor in interest was the Government or not, his rights at the time when they are claimed in a suit against a private person becomes absolute since that private person could not claim the privilege which is the personal privilege of the Government. Whether a structure is of a permanent character has to be decided on two considerations: (1) the material used and (2) the purpose for which the building is erected. The material used may be granite stone, marble, cement, concrete, bricks, or clay, or mud. There can be no absolute standard as regards the material for judging whether the structure is permanent or temporary. A candidate may lawfully pay either an association of persons or an individual to work for him at an election, but he may only pay what is a reasonable sum for the particular work done. Where that payment is to a voter it may, however, amount to a bribe if the payment is out of all proportion to the work done or agreed to be done. Whether any particular payment by a candidate is or is not a bribe must always fall to be decided upon the particular facts of each case. Money paid to a club to pay off its debt and to repair its club premises with the object of inducing those of its members who are voters to record their votes in favour of a candidate is bribe. EVIDENCE ACT (I OF 1872)—Interpretation—English decision—Application of—Need for caution.

The Indian Evidence Act, 1872, is no doubt mainly based upon the English Law; but it is by no means an exact reproduction of it. The English Law of evidence also has never been codified, and judicial decisions may well have developed or expanded some of its principles since 1872. Caution is therefore necessary in the application of English authorities on the subject in an Indian Court. (*Gwyer, C. ———S. 6—Res gestae—Conditions necessary.

The declarations in order that they might be admissible as res gestae should be contemporaneous with the transaction in issue, that is, the interval should not be such as to give time or opportunity for fabrication and they should not amount to a mere narrative of a past occurrence. They are admitted when they appear to have been made under the immediate influence of some principal transaction relevant to the issue and are so connected with it as to characterise or explain it. The bare statement of a complainant made sometime after the occurrence is not admissible in evidence. (Agarwal, J.) NOOR MOHAMMAD v. IMTIAZ AHMAD. 197 I. C. 839=14 R. O. 363=1942 A. Cr. ———Ss. 7 and 45—Scope—Footprints—Evidence of tracker—Relevancy.

Evidence that there were footprints at or near a scene of offence or that the footprints came from a particular place or led to a particular place, is relevant evidence under S. 7 and statements as to these facts made by person skilled in identifying footprints are not excluded by S. 45 The words 'science' or 'art' in S. 45 are to be construed widely. The amendment relating to finger impressions is made to meet particular decisions which had been given by the Courts. The amendment does not operate to limit in any way the wide meanings which should be given to the expressions 'science' or 'art'. Whether a particular tracker called upon to assist, is or is not an expert in this art or science, is of course a matter to be decided by the Judge or Magistrate, before reliance can be placed upon his evidence. But if it is established to the satisfaction of the Court that the tracker is a person capable of distinguishing and identifying footprints, there is no reason why his evidence should not be given such consideration as it may deserve. A judgment in a previous criminal case in which the plaintiff asserted his possession of the land in dispute and possession was held to be with him is not admissible in evidence against the defendant who was not a party to the criminal proceeding to prove the plaintiff's possession at that time. The mental capacity of a party cannot be said to be irrelevant when upon the contractual relations entered into by the party, his property is sought to be made liable and the contract is in English, a language of which the party is said to be ignorant; and, when he is shown to be lacking in mental capacity, it is incumbent upon the party attaching liability to establish that the party liable has signed the contract with an understanding mind. ——S. 15—Criminal acts other than those covered by indictment—When admissible.

Evidence tending to show that the accused has been guilty of criminal acts other than those covered by the indictment is not admissible unless upon the issue whether the acts charged against the accused were designed or accidental, or unless to rebut a defence otherwise open to him. Where the charge against the accused is that he administered dhatura to a certain person at a certain place with intent to rob him, evidence of other incidents may be admissible with a view to rebutting any defence that the administration of dhatura at that place was accidental. But before such evidence is admissible the presence of the accused at that place has to be established. The fact that he had dhatura in his possession months afterwards can in no way help the prosecution, because it cannot be possibly inferred from that fact that he was in possession of dhatura when he was at that place on the date of occurrence. The question whether or not a person is entitled to succeed as the heir of a deseased person is a question of law and there can be no legal admission about it. Where a landholder acquiesces in a person continuing to remain in possession of a holding under the impression that he was the heir of the deceased tenant, if it is later on found that he was not the heir, the acquiescence in his possession would only operate as a licence which can be revoked at will and the landholder would not be estopped from ejecting him. It cannot be stated as a proposition of law that no statement made on oath can be a voluntary statement that would be admissible under S. 24 of the Evidence Act. S. 24 says nothing about voluntary statements. A statement made on oath may be said in certain cases to be made as the result of the holding out of a threat; but that is a question of fact. ——S. 24—Retracted confession—Evidentiary value against maker and co-accused.

A retracted confession, if believed to be true, may form the basis of a conviction against the maker, but as a rule of caution, it is unsafe to base even his conviction on a retracted confession alone without some independent corroboration. As against the co-accused, a retracted confession may be taken into consideration subject, however, to the rule which is now firmly established that it cannot form the basis of a conviction without substantial and independent corroboration both as to the crime and the criminal. Further, a higher standard of corroboration in regard to a retracted confession must be demanded than in the case of the testimony of an approver because the testimony of an approver can be tested by cross-examination whereas the confession of an accused cannot be subjected to such a test. ——S. 27—Confession falling under—If admissible in entirety.

——S. 27—Retracted confession—Value of—Conviction—If can be based on.

The ground on which the information received from an accused person is admitted in evidence under S. 27 of the Evidence Act is that the fact discovered thereby is to some degree, which will vary with the circumstances of each case and the nature of the fact discovered, a guarantee of the truth of the information. Where on the basis of an alleged statement by an accused (charged with murder), an aruval which is not blood-stained and a cloth which is blood-stained to some extent are discovered in the house of the accused, but the accused in his statement at the trial denies that the aruval or the cloth are his, and states that he knows nothing about the offence, the accused cannot be convicted because in effect the case against him rests on a retracted confession which is not materially corroborated. ——S. 27—Scope and applicability—"Fact thereby discovered"—Interpretation.

Per Pal, J.—Obiter: The word "thereby" in 'fact thereby discovered" in S. 27 of the Evidence Act refers to that portion of the information only which may be held to be the proximate cause of the discovery. For this to be admissible against the accused under the S. (1) the information must be the one given by the accused—the statement conveying the information must be his own statement in his own language, and then (2) only so much of the information as is necessary and sufficient to cause the discovery will be admissible. Where the information given by the accused was to the effect "I had thrown the opium on the road side at Sukhanpukhuri" and the fact discovered was "a gunny bag containing opium at Sukhanpukhuri under water."

Held, that the portion of the statement which purported to ascribe the authorship of the "act of throwing" to the accused himself was not admissible in evidence under S. 27 of the Evidence Act, and that the admissible portion of the information must, therefore, be to the effect that "gunny bag was thrown into Sukhanpukhuri".

——S. 30—Confession of co-accused—Admissibility and use of.

It is not the law that the confession of one accused must be corroborated by other evidence before it can be accepted against a co-accused; the correct position is that there must be a basis of substantial evidence to which the confessional statement may be added. Evidence otherwise inadmissible cannot be made admissible by consent of parties. Unless a party can be found to have been estopped from objecting to the admissibility of a particular piece of evidence, it cannot be said that evidence not otherwise admissible, or evidence which would have been liable to rejection were objection taken to it, may be perfectly good evidence if admitted by the consent of parties. Therefore, copies of depositions of persons dead at the time they are tendered in evidence and recorded in a prior litigation to which a party to a subsequent litigation was not a party, and as such not falling within the ambit of S. 33 of the Evidence Act, are inadmissible in the subsequent suit even if admitted with the consent of parties. An entry in the order-sheet recording that a notice of a proceeding had been served is admissible under S. 35 of the Evidence Act as evidence of the fact of service of the notice. It is no doubt only one item of evidence. But whether from that item of direct evidence the Court will be justified in holding that the fact of the services of the notice has been sufficiently proved will depend upon the facts and circumstances of the particular case. Such an entry does not raise a presumption under S. 114 of the Evidence Act that a notice had in fact been served but it raises a presumption under that section about the regularity of the service, when the fact of service of the notice is proved. The negative opinion, or the opinion as to the non-existence of the relationship may not be relevant. Under the section, the opinion of a person is only a relevant piece of evidence. The presumption under S. 110 of the Evidence Act would apply only if the possession of the claimant (plaintiff) is prima facie not wrongful, and if the title of the defendant is not proved. It is necessary for the plaintiff to prove that his possession was of such a character as to lead to the presumption of title and not such a sort of possession as would be regarded as wrongful in its origin. ——S. 112—Presumption of legitimacy—Effect of proof of 'access'—Distinction between married woman and widow or spinster living as mistress of somebody—'Access'—Meaning.

When once the 'access' of the husband is proved the law does not permit evidence to prove the paternity of the child being other than the husband of its mother. The case of a married woman stands on a different footing from that of a spinster or a widow who may be living as a mistress with somebody. For a mistress it may be open to prove that the real father of the child born during the period of her concubinage is different from her paramour. In such a case the presumption which would naturally arise in respect of paternity of the child in favour of the paramour is capable of being rebutted. But the presumption of legitimacy arising in favour of a child born during the continuance of a vaid marriage, when the parties to the marriage could have access to each other at any time when the child could have been begotten, cannot be rebutted as laid down in S. 112 of the Evidence Act. The word 'access' in S. 112 means no more than opportunity of intercourse. (Niyogi, J.) MAINA UKARDA GAWARI v. DEORAO SONAJI KUNBI.

When an accused has given a satisfactory account for his possession the question of the application of S. 114 of the Evidence Act no longer arises, and then it is necessary to show by evidence, direct or circumstantial, that there was some collusion between the thief and the receiver or that the receiver had real reason to believe that the property which he had purchased was stolen. ——S. 114, Ill. (a)—Scope and effect—If shifts onus of proof on to accused in case under S. 411, I. P. Code—Nature of presumption to be made—Accused giving reasonable explanation—Right to acquittal.

The onus of establishing the guilt of an accused person always rests on the prosecution. When an accused person charged under S. 411, I. P. Code, is found to be in possession of property recently stolen, the Court can presume, by reason of illustration (a) to S. 114 of the Evidence Act, that be was the thief or that he received the property knowing it to be stolen. But that is only a presumption which can be rebutted by the accused giving a reasonable explanation of his possession of the property in question. But that cannot have the effect of throwing the onus upon the accused of proving affirmatively that he had no knowledge of the property being stolen property. By reason of the illustration (a) to S. 114, the accused must give a reasonable explanation of his possession and an explanation which may well be true, when the Court is bound to acquit the accused, even if it is not satisfied affirmatively that it is true. The production of stolen property as a result of pressure or inducement by the Police does not stand on the same footing as an improperly obtained confession. When an involuntary confession leads to the recovery of stolen property, the recovery as regards its admissibility stands on the same footing as a recovery without an accompanying voluntary or involuntary confession and the absence of an explanation by the possessor is subject to the presumption that the possessor is either the thief or a knowing receiver if the production is shortly after the theft. Estoppel under S. 115 of the Evidence Act consists not in putting forward a particular view of the law, but in making a particular representation on a point of fact. It is only when there has been one representation on a question of fact that a party is estopped from putting forward a contrary representation on the same question of fact. In a suit for arrears of rent in a Revenue Court the defendants pleaded that, on the allegations in the plaint, the plaintiff had not established that the property formed part of an estate, and, therefore, no suit lay in the Revenue Court. This plea was upheld by the Court which returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. The plaintiff then filed the suit in the Civil Court and the defendants now contended that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had not made out that the land on which the rent was due was a portion of an estate.

Held, that there was no question of estoppel in the case at all and the defendants were not estopped from contending that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction. (King, J.) SUMITRAMMA v. SUBBADU. 55 L.W. 396=A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 22=(1942) 2 M.L.J 97.

A statement in an application for a certificate that the debtor against whom it is applied owed the applicant arrears of rent for certain years does not amount to a representation that the debtor was still in possession of the disputed land so as to entitle the purchaser in the certificate proceedings to plead an estoppel against the applicant for certificate or a person acquiring title from the applicant prior to the certificate proceedings. Nor can a notice in such proceedings addressed to the debtor and not specifying any particular property, but merely prohibiting the debtor from transferring any of his immovable property situated in the district, be held to contain any trace of a representation or statement by the applicant to the effect that the debtor was still in possession of the disputed land. S. 133 of the Evidence Act contains the rule of law regarding the testimony of an accomplice and S. 114 Ill. (b) is merely a guide to assist the Courts. There is therefore no bar to the conviction of an accused person even on the uncorroborated testimony of an approver if the Court is fully satisfied about its truth. If any corroboration is required its extent will however vary with the circumstances of each case. Corroboration need not be by direct evidence that the accused committed the crime. It is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime and in such a case it should sufficiently implicate the accused—circumstances which have no criminal significance or which are susceptible of explanation are not sufficient corroboration against the accused. ——S. 133—Accomplice—Who is—Test—Onus of proof as to.

The word 'accomplice' has not been defined by the Act and should therefore be presumed to have been used in its ordinary sense. An accomplice means a guilty associate or partner in crime, or who, in some way or other, is connected with the offence in question, or who makes admissions of facts showing that he had conscious hand in the offence. An accomplice confesses himself a criminal who has been concerned in the commission of a crime, particeps criminis whether he is concerned in the strict legal sense as principal in the first or second degree, or merely as accessory before or after the fact. Persons to be accomplices must participate in the commission of the same crime as the accused persons in a trial are charged. Ordinarily the burden of proving that a witness is an accomplice is upon the body alleging it, namely, the accused, though it is the duty of the prosecution to bring the accomplice character of the evidence to the notice of the Court. The practice of tendering witnesses for cross-examination in a criminal trial is inconsistent with S. 133 of the Evidence Act, and ought not to be employed in the case of a witness whose evidence is not merely formal such a practice leads to confusion and does not induce to the discovery of the truth (Beaumont, C.J., Wadia and Sen, JJ.) EMPEROR v. KASAMALLI MIRZALLI. I.L.R. S. 145 appears to be included in S. 155 of the Evidence Act. S. 145 enables a witness to be cross-examined and contradicted with reference to previous statements made by him. This is one method of impeaching the credit of a witness. S. 155 deals generally with the impeaching of the credit of a witness and enumerates different methods of contradicting a witness. One of the methods mentioned in S. 155 of impeaching the credit of a witness is by proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted and in this sense the whole of the ground covered by S. 145 is included in S. 155. The expression "precautions against fire" in S. 22 of the Factories Act mean precautions against the occurrence or outbreak of fire and would not cover precautions against the consequences of fire. S. 23 deals expressly with precautions against the consequences of fire by providing means of escape. Reading the two Ss. 22 and 23 together, it is clear that the intention of the legislature was that in the case of precautions against the occurrence of fire, the matter should be dealt with by rules which would govern all factories, but that, in dealing with precautions against the consequences of fire, it was recognised that all factories could not be dealt with in like manner, and S. 23 therefore contains a general provision that provision shall be made for such means of escape as can be reasonably required in the circumstances of each factory, and then leaves it to the Inspector to determine whether such precautions have been taken, and if he thinks that the necessary provisions have not been made, he is given power to serve on the manager of a factory a notice, breach of which would amount to an offence under S. 60 (a) (iii) of the Factories Act. There is no power under S. 22 to make general rules covering the subject of means of escape against fire which is dealt with by S. 23; and S. 22 is not to be enforced by means of rules. R. 37 of the rules under the Act is therefore ultra vires, as it deals with a matter which does not fall under S. 22 or under S. 32, which is the rule making section, but deals with a matter falling under S. 23 which does not enable rules to be made. Breach of R. 37 is not therefore an offence for which there can be a conviction. (Beaumont, C. J. and Wassoodew, J.) EMPEROR v. HASSIM IBRAHIM. 44 Bom.L.R. 810=A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 5.

——S. 60—Owners and occupiers of factory—If can escape liability for contravening provisions of the Act by leaving the affairs of the factory in the hands of a manager—"Manager"—If 'occupier' of the factory.

The owners and occupiers of a factory cannot relieve themselves of their responsibilities regarding compliance with the requirements of the Factories Act by appointing a manager; they must see that the manager carries out his duties. It is only when the manager has acted in express disobedience of their order and they have done their best to see that the provisions of the Act are complied with, that they can themselves escape liability. S. 60 makes it clear that both the manager and occupier are liable. A manager is not a 'managing agent' within the meaning of that expression as used in the proviso to the definition of 'occupier' and hence cannot be deemed to be the occupier of the factory. The fact that the "occupiers" were ignorant persons who trusted to the knowledge and good sense of their manager may be a ground for awarding a smaller punishment but not for acquitting them. Failure to produce the register on demand would be a breach of Ss. 11 and 63 but it would not be a breach of any rule made under S. 41 (2) since the availability of the register cannot possibly be brought within the words "the manner in which it shall be maintained" occurring in S. 41 (2). The words in R. 71 "the register shall always be kept available during working hours for immediate inspection" are thus not ultra vires of the Act but these words are ultra vires of any rule made under S. 41. Consequently the owner and occupier of the factory who was not present himself and from whom no demand for the production of the register was made cannot be made liable under S. 60 (c) of the Act which relates to ss. 39, 40, 41, 44 and 47 only. The breach in question is one punishable under S. 63 of the Act which deals with wilful obstruction of an Inspector or failure to produce on demand any register in the custody of the person from whom the demand for inspection is made. The correct person to prosecute is not the owner but the person from whom the demand is made. (Grille, J.) ALIBHAI v. EMPEROR. 203 I.C. 476 =44 Cr.L.J. 69=1942 N.L.J. 518.

There is nothing peculiar to a family arrangement except that the Courts favour them and view broadly the consideration which supports them. In so far as they are not considered to be transfers they need not be written. In so far as they are in writing and require registration they are affected by the Registration Act. When a family arrangement or settlement is acted upon, though it is not exactly a partition the corporate life of the family comes to an end, when the different members live separately and there is no joint family property left. The increments or promotions spoken of in R. 49 (ii) of the Civil Services Rules made under S. 96-B (2). Government of India Act, mean increments and promotion which a member of a service is entitled in the ordinary course by the mere fact of his having been in the service for a certain number of years or of his having come to occupy, as the result of retirements, deaths, etc., a certain place in the list of those who are in the service, and not an increase in salary or the acquisition of a higher official position which would be the result of a selection for appointment to a special grade or to a particular post. Hence, a decision that a particular officer does not deserve inclusion in the selection grade mentioned in R. 10 of the U. P. The expression "Act of Parliament" is used in S. 108 (2) (a) of the Government of India Act in the sense of enactments actually passed by Parliament and not of laws passed by a subordinate legislative body under power conferred upon it by an Act of Parliament. The Bengal Permanent Settlement Regulation (I of 1793) is not, therefore, an "Act of Parliament" within the meaning of the section. ——S. 205—Disposal of appeal under—Case remanded to be tried on merits—Decree after remand—Whether appeal lies to Federal Court against decree in absence of fresh certificate.

In an appeal under S. 205 of the Constitution Act, the Federal Court held that the plaintiff was entitled to a declaration that he had not been effectively dismissed from his office, and remanded the case to be tried on the merits. On remand the trial Court passed a decree for arrears of pay and gave certain directions as to payment of costs, Court-fee, etc. This decree was confirmed by the Judicial Commissioner's Court with some modifications in the plaintiff's favour. The plaintiff, being dissatisfied with the decree passed by the Judicial Commissioner's Court, filed an application under O. XLIII of the Federal Court Rules praying that in exercise of the inherent powers of the Federal Court the decree of the Judicial Commissioner's Court should be varied in certain particulars.

Held, that the appeal preferred under S. 205 of the Constitution Act had been finally disposed of so far as the Federal Court was concerned and any complaint against the decree passed by the Judicial Commissioner's Court after the remand could be entertained by the Federal Court only on an independent appeal under S. 205, and such an appeal must satisfy the requirements of that section. In the absence of that certificate under that section, the Federal Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the application. When the Federal Court is properly seized of an appeal on a certificate granted under S. 205 of the Constitution Act, it will also have jurisdiction to deal with other questions arising in the case; and in dealing with an appeal properly before it, it may have certain inherent powers. But before these powers can be exercised there must be an appeal validly instituted before it. A certificate under S. 205 of the Government of India Act can be given only when a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of the Government of India Act, 1935 or any order in council made thereunder is involved. It was held that the question whether the Defence of India Act (1939) and the rules made under it are ultra vires the present Indian Legislature had already been finally decided by the Federal Court in the negative and that hence such a question of law is not a ground for granting a certificate. GOVT. OF INDIA ACT (1935), S. 208.

No appeal lies to the Federal Court in the absence of the certificate prescribed in S. 205 of the Government of India Act, and the refusal of a High Court to grant a certificate cannot be questioned by the Federal Court, nor can the reasons which prompted the refusal be investigated by it. The jurisdiction of the Federal Court is limited by statute and cannot be extended by a High Court acting even perversely or maliciously in withholding the certificate. The Court cannot do indirectly what it cannot do directly. Proceedings by way of contempt can ever be the appropriate remedy against a High Court even if it has acted perversely or maliciously. ——S. 208 (b)—Leave to appeal to Privy Council —Grant of—Practice—Status of Federal Court.

Since the primary responsibility for determining constitutional cases lies upon the Federal Court, it ought not without grave reason grant under S. 208 (b) of the Government of India Act leave to appeal to Privy Council against its decision. It will treat each case on its own merits and will grant leave sparingly and only in exceptional cases. Even if, therefore, a decision affects a large number of persons and substantial interests, and also involves important questions of law, this does not by itself justify the granting of leave. The Federal Court is the first Court sitting on Indian soil whose jurisdiction, although limited, extends to the whole of British India. Its establishment marked a new stage in India's constitutional evolution; and the evolution of Indian political thought after its inception has served only to increase and emphasize the significance of its authority It is not subordinate to any other Court; and this conception of its status was present in the minds of those who framed the Indian Constitution Act of 1935, when they gave to the Court itself the right to say whether it would permit any cases which came before it on appeal to be reviewed elsewhere. The ancient prerogative right of His Majesty to grant special leave to appeal, though it has now been made statutory by S. 208 (b), does not affect this aspect of the matter. A suit for damages for wrongful dismissal by a Government servant is not maintainable owing to the provisions of S. 240 of the Government of India Act. Where the plaintiff, a clerk in a subordinate Court of justice,

Held, that the duties carried out by the plaintiff and by his superior officers were part of the machinery for carrying on the administration of justice in exercise of sovereign powers and therefore the suit was not maintainable. (2) of S. 240, if affected by S. 243—Dismissal of departmental appeal by the superior authority—If amounts to a dismissal from office by the superior authority.*

A Sub-Inspector of Police appointed by I.G. of Police was dismissed by the Deputy I. G. of Police. After an unsuccessful appeal against such dismissal to the I. G. and the Provincial Government the dismissed officer filed a suit to declare his dismissal void on the ground among others that his dismissal by authority subordinate to that which appointed him was opposed to S. 240 (2) of the Government of India Act. On a preliminary issue it was held that the plaintiff had no remedy by civil action and it was upheld by the appellate Court. On appeal to the Federal Court, it was held, that sub-S. (2) of S 240 contained a statutory prohibition to the effect that no office-holder shall be dismissed from service by any authority subordinate to that by which he was appointed, and that the section had been enacted in unqualified terms and the protection thus afforded could not be qualified or taken away by statutory rules.

Held, further, that the plaintiff was entitled to invoke the aid of S. 240 (2) and that S. 243 had not the effect of depriving him of the benefit of sub S. (2) of S. 240. It was also held that the dismissal by the I. G. of the appeal against the order of dismissal by the Deputy I.G. was not equivalent to a dismissal from office by the I. G. Under the circumstances their Lordships thought it best to say, that the plaintiff was at least entitled to a declaration that the order of dismissal passed against him was void and inoperative and that the Courts below were not justified in dismissing the suit as wholly unsustainable (Gwyer, C.J., Varadachariar and Zafrulla Khan, JJ.) SURAJ NARAIN ANAND v N.-W. ——S. 270—Applicability—Income-tax Officers—Suit against for damages—Allegation of trespass and taking away books of accounts as officers—Maintainability of suit without consent of Governor-General.

S. 270 of the Government of India Act is intended to protect public servants for acts committed before the relevant date in respect of which proceedings may be started against them. The motive with which the acts are done is immaterial. What has to be looked at is that the offence must be in respect of an act done or purported to be done in execution of a duty, i.e., in the discharge of an official duty. Plaintiff brought a suit claiming damages against two defendants who were Income-tax Officers, the 1st defendant being the superior officer of the 2nd defendant, alleging that the 2nd defendant purporting to act under the orders of the 1st defendant trespassed into the plaintiff's premises and took away all the plaintiff's account books wrongfully against his will and consent. The defendants raised a preliminary point that the suit was not maintainable without the consent of the Governor-General under S. 270 of the Government of India Act,

Held, that the acts alleged against the defendants were so closely connected with their position as Income-tax Officers as to make it impossible to say that they were not the kind of acts which are contemplated under the section, and S. 270 of the Government of India Act operated as a bar to suit in the absence of the consent of the Governor-General. Government cannot be held liable for damages either when an officer takes an action in pursuance of a statutory duty or when the act committed by him happens to be in excess of his authority unless in the latter case the act is either done by the Government's express orders or is subsequently ratified and adopted by it. Nor can any action be maintained against the Government for a tort committed by its servants if in passing the order in the performance of which the tort is committed the Government was discharging its Governmental functions as a sovereign. The first and second plaintiffs, who were the wife and daughter of the Ex-Maharaja of Nabha filed a suit for damages for wrongful restraint against the Province of Madras represented by the Collector of Madura, and four Police Officials, viz., the District Superintendent of Police, Madura, the Sub-Inspector of the Government Railway Police at Madura Railway Station, the head constable of the Railway Police at Kodaikanal Road Railway Station, and a constable at that station, on the allegations that on the arrival at Kodaikanal Road Station of the train by which they intended to leave for Madras, they were prevented by Sub-Inspector of Police acting under the orders of the District Superintendent from boarding the train, that the gate and the iron fencing at the Railway Station were closed by the Sub-Inspector and constables were posted near the gates which resulted in the wrongful confinement of the plaintiffs and that the Sub-Inspector of Police prevented the plaintiffs from boarding the train on receipt of a telephonic message from the District Superintendent of Police. It appeared, however, that the Police Officers had intended to detain the ex-Maharaja of Nabha and not the plaintiffs, and that the plaintiffs were prevented from boarding the train owing to a misunderstanding of a telephonic message from the District Superintendent to the Sub-Inspector. The plaintiffs were, however, subsequently allowed to take train and reach their destination. The plaintiffs claimed damages for the suffering, both mental and physical, and for the pecuniary loss caused to them. They averred that the acts of defendants, in detaining them, were done by them in their official capacity. Some of the defendants pleaded that the suit was not maintainable without the consent of the Governor of Madras under S. 270, Government of India Act, and that the suit was also barred by S. 53 of the Madras District Police Act.

GOVT. OF INDIA ACT (1935), S. 270.

Held, (1) that on the facts it could not be said that the plaintiffs were actually confined in the Railway Station or the Railway compound at the Kodaikanal Road Station; (2) that the offences of wrongful restraint or wrongful confinement could not be said to be committed if a person were not restrained or confined himself, but only the liberty of going in a conveyance in which he wished to go, or taking the article which he wished to carry and without which he was not willing to proceed, was denied to him; (3) that had the plaintiffs or their Secretary requested the Sub-Inspector or the constables to be allowed to go out of the Railway compound and had any obstruction been created, it would have been a different matter; (4) that the acts complained of were done by the defendants in the performance of their duty and the suit was therefore not maintainable without the consent of the Governor under S. 270 (1) of the Government of India Act, 1935; and as the said acts were done by them in good faith the suit was liable to be dismissed under S. 270 (2) of the Government of India Act, the onus of proving want of good faith being on the plaintiffs; (5) that the suit was governed by Art. 2 of the Limitation Act as defendants 2 to 5 were acting under S. 54, Cr. P. Code and S. 21 of the Madras District Police Act, and time should be computed from the date of the occurrence and not from any subsequent date when the plaintiffs might have suffered physical injury consequent on their detention; (6) that the suit was barred by limitation also under S. 53 of the Madras District Police Act as defendants 2 to 5 purported to act in the discharge of their duty under the Police Act; (7) that the first defendant, the Province of Madras, could not be proceeded against in respect of the acts of defendants 2 to 5 done in the discharge of the duty imposed on them by statute. ——— S. 297 (1)—Scope of—Nature of the law open to objection under—Measures of price control, marketing, etc., if per se interfere with free trade clauses in the Constitution Act.

The law which is open to objection under S. 297 (1) of the Constitution Act is a law made by Provincial Legislature substantially by virtue of the entry relating to trade and commerce or by virtue of the entry relating to production, supply and distribution of commodities And if a law is made substantially by virtue of the entry relating to agriculture or of entry relating to development of industry it is not open to objection under this section. Further the law contemplated by this section is a law which prohibits or restricts entry into or export from the province of goods directly and a law which does not deal directly and in substance with prohibition or restriction of export or import of goods but which deals with other needs of the province and provides for them, though incidentally, the effect of the provision is that in some measure export or import is restricted, such a law is not within the meaning of the section. It follows from the above that the prohibition or restriction contemplated by the section is a prohibition or restriction on the act of export or import and so long as the goods remain the property of the province and are a stock of the province and before they have become the subject of interprovince or foreign trade, the province has every right to expropriate goods or to put any restriction upon them which it considers necessary for the needs of the province All measures of price control, collective marketing and expropriation of goods do not per se and as a matter of course interfere with free trade clauses in a constitution, and the interference contemplated by the consritution is a direct interference and not an indirect interference. ——Sch. VII, List I, No. 34—'Federal law'—Meaning—Competency of local legislature to repeal Sugarcane Act (1934) of the Central Legislature.

'Federal law' as used in entry No. 34 of List 1 of Sch VII of the Constitution Act, is either a law made by the Federal Legislature after it has come into existence or a law made by the Indian Legislature during the transitional period, that is, between the enactment of the Constitution Act and till Federal Legislature comes into existence, but other existing Indian Laws which were enacted before the Constitution Act could not fall within the meaning of the 'Federal law' as used in the Constitution Act. It may be that prior to the enactment of the Constitution Act, sugar and sugarcane were regarded as central subjects and the Indian Legislature had made laws about sugar and sugarcane. But the position changed with the passing of the Constitution Act, sugarcane agriculture and sugar industry then became Provincial subjects and an express declaration became necessary to bring the sugar industry under Federal Control by an Act of Indian Legislature passed after the Constitution Act came into force. No such declaration has till now been made. Hence as sugarcane as an agriculture and sugar manufacture as an industry are entirely provincial subjects the Provincial Legislature is competent to repeal the Sugarcane Act (1934) and to make its own laws about sugarcane and sugar as also about sugar factories. ——Sch. VII, List I, No. 45—Excise duty—Sale tax and cess on entry of goods—Distinction between—"Excise duty", if raised in the British sense of the word.

The true distinction between an excise duty, sale tax and a cess on entry of goods as used in the Constitution Act does not consist in the fact that the tax is on goods or that the tax is payable by manufacturer or producer but it consists in the fact whether the tax is on the act of production or on the act of sale or on the act of introducing goods in a particular area. Two conclusions follow from this that a tax on consumption of goods or a tax on purchase of goods whatever else it may be, cannot be an excise duty. And a tax on raw produce required by the manufacturer for his manufacture may be an excise duty or may be a general tax or may be a special tax, and the fact whether it is one or the other will depend upon the true nature of the tax in the light of surrounding circumstances of each case. The expression "excise duty" in entry No. 45 of list 1 in Sch. VII, Constitution Act, is used in a restricted sense so as to allow provinces to exercise powers under sales tax and cesses on goods without making those taxes excise duties in the British sense of the word. Fees and cesses are two forms of special taxation which a Provincial Legislature (provided it is given authority to do so) is entitled to resort to in order to recoup itself for any special expenditure which it has incurred for the benefit of a special class of persons against that special class. And the Provincial Legislature may recover the whole of this expenditure either by levying a fee which may be partly recurring and partly non-recurring and recurring portion may be based on monthly payment measured on the consumption of goods by the payer of fee or by levying a cess or partly by levying a fee and partly by levying a cess at its option. The imposition of a cess under Cl. (2) of S. 29 of the U. P. Sugar Factories Control Act is in the first instance a cess within the meaning of Entry No. 49 of List II and not a duty of excise within the meaning of Entry No. 45 of List I and if there be any difficulty in regarding it as a cess it can also be treated as a fee under Entry No. 54 of List II and Entry No. 36 of List III. As the expression "agricultural land" has not been defined in the Government of India Act, it must be understood in the sense which it ordinarily bears in the English language.

Quaere.—Whether for the purposes of the relevant entries in Lists II and III of the Government of India Act it will not be right to take into account the general character of the land (as agricultural land) and not the use to which it may be put at a particular point of time. It is difficult to impute to Parliament the intention that a piece of land should, so long as it is used to produce certain things, be governed by and descend according to laws framed under List II, but that when the same parcel of land is used to produce something else (as often happens in this country), it should be governed by and descend according to laws framed under List III. Though an infringement by a village officer of the Rules would amount to misconduct which is punishable, that does not mean that every act which is the subject of misconduct is null and void. An inam grant in respect of two parcels of land was made in the time of the Karnatic Rajas, and the service to be performed was the guarding of the Sikaram of the Madura temple. The inamdars were required to provide four men as watchers throughout the day and night. The original grant was not forthcoming. A statement presented by the inamdars to the Inam Commission, when it was sitting, contained in a column an entry to the effect that "the land was given to our ancestors by the Rajas of Karnatic for watching the tower of the aforesaid temple and they were watching the tower of the said Meenakshi Amman temple and enjoying the said manyam land and now we are watching the said Meenakshi Amman temple and enjoying the inam land." The total income from the lands granted was small, amounting to no more than Rs. 136 per annum.

Held, that the words used in the statement implied a gift of the soil to the inamdars who were therefore entitled to both the melvaram and the kudivaram. *(Leach, C. Where lands in a Dharmasasanam village (village granted to Brahmins) are granted as inam by the Mahajans owning the village, to a person as emoluments for rendering service in the temples in the village, the grant is a service grant; and the mere fact that the grantor is the Mahajans, and not a zamindar, would not make the grant any the less a service grant. An alienation of such lands is invalid as opposed to public policy. Alienation of land granted for service in temples is invalid; this principle applies not only to sales but also to mortgages. The test is whether the alienation in effect places the income from the lands beyond the disposal of the holder of the office and prevents him from enjoying the emoluments which were intended to go to the holder of the office in order to enable him to discharge his duties properly. (Kuppuswami Ayyar, J.) CHELLIAH v. RANGASWAMI AYYANGAR. 1942 M.W.N. 691=

GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT (VIII OF 1890), Ss. 7 and 39—Applicant for guardianship of property—It should be resident of district.

Under the Guardians and Wards Act, it is not essential that a person who applies for being appointed guardian of the property of a minor should be a resident of the district in which the property is situated. The power of the Court under S. 39 of the Act to remove a guardian who is not residing in the district within which the property is situated is discretionary and it cannot reasonably be inferred therefrom that the applicant must necessarily be a resident of the district in which the property is situated (Bhide, J.) GHULAM QADAR v. ALLAH DIN. 201 I.C. 137 = 15 R.L. 32 = 44 P.L.R. 203 = A.I.R. 1942 Lah. 162 (1).

Under the Mahomedan law, in the case of a male minor child of over 9 years, his consanguine brother, who is male paternal relation has a preferential right to the custody over the minor's mother. But this right is not unqualified but is conditional upon the Court being satisfied that the male paternal relation is a fit and proper person to be appointed guardian. According to the proper interpretation of S. 17 of the Guardians and Wards Act, in the case of a Mahomedan guardian to be appointed in the order of relations with preferential rights, the appointment can be made only of a relation who in the opinion of the Court is a fit and proper person. The paramount consideration in an appointment under S. 17 is the interest of the child, consistently with the law to which the minor is subject. S. 17 cannot be construed as laying down that once it is shown that there is a relation alive in the order of relations entitled, according to the Mahomedan law, to the guardianship of the child that relation must be appointed. The Mahomedan law does not require that such a relation should be appointed if the Court considers that he is not a fit and proper person to be appointed guardian. The Court, if that relation is not a fit and proper person, must then look, down the list for some other relation, and if there is no other relation, then, under the Mahomedan law, a stranger may be appointed guardian. ——S. 17—Appointment of guardian— Primary consideration—Prospective order—Propriety.

The primary consideration in appointing a guardian under the Act is the welfare of the minor provided that the appointment is not inconsistent with the law to which the minor is subject. After the death of her Hindu husband leaving a young daughter, the wife embraced the Mahomedan religion and married a Mahomedan. The grandmother (mother's mother) and the mother were persons competing for the guardianship. The lower Court held taking into consideration the age, sex and circumstances of the parties, etc., that the mother was the proper guardian but that as the child should be brought up in the religion of her father, the grandmother should be the guardian when the child reaches the age of ten.

Held, that as the child while very young was not likely to have any convictions on question of religion, the mother was entitled to the custody in preference to the grandmother if she was otherwise a suitable guardian.

Held, further, that the order directing that the grandmother should be the guardian after the child became ten years old was not proper. If subsequently the child was brought up in any religion other than Hindu—which was her father's religion and in which she should be brought up—the grandmother could then make an application for getting herself appointed guardian. ——Ss. 41 and 45—Scope—Powers of Court—Order directing ex-guardian to deposit money in Court—Executability as decree or executable order—Proper procedure for enforcement.

There is no provision in the Guardians and Wards Act which authorises the execution of an order passed by the District Judge in a proceeding under that Act, directing an ex-guardian to deposit into Court a certain sum of money. Though the Court has ample powers to enforce obedience of its orders by proceeding under S. 45 of the Act, the Act nowhere provides that an order may be executed as if it were a decree or an executable order of a Civil Court within the meaning of S. 36, C. P. Code. It is, however, open to the District Judge to proceed under S. 45 or direct the institution of a regular suit against ex-guardian so that the amount which is ultimately found to be realisable from him may be realised from the properties given by him as security under a security bond executed by him in favour of the Court. A guardian or ex-guardian can be directed to bring in the money which is found due from him upon a proper scrutiny of the accounts and not merely of so much of the money as he admits to be due from him, and in case of his failure to do so, he can be proceeded against under S. 45 of the Act to enforce that order. Such an order cannot be executed as if it were a decree of a Civil Court. HIGHWAY—Dedication—Long user—Presumption from—If and when may arise.

Dedication of a public right of way can be presumed from long user. To support the inference of dedication, the user must be by the public generally and not by a section of it. Such user, again, must be as of right, that is to say, it must purport to be in exercise of a public right of way, and acquiesced in as such by or on behalf of the owner of the land against whom the presumption of dedication is to be made. As regards the length of public user, the period is material only as one element from which the intention to dedicate may be inferred. There is neither a fixed minimum period which must be proved in order to justify an inference of dedication, nor a fixed maximum period which must compel such an inference. If the user is sufficient to raise a presumption of dedication, it is not necessary that the evidence of user must go back to the date of dedication. Although proof of open, uninterrupted and continuous user may give rise to a presumption of dedication, the presumption is still one of fact, and not of law. It must not be supposed, therefore, that if there is no evidence in rebuttal, the Court shall be bound to give effect to the presumption and hold dedication proved as a matter of course. Whether the obstruction is caused by the Municipal Committee or by the Government is immaterial. HINDU LAW—Adoption—Capacity to make—Boy below fifteen years—Adoption by—Validity—Law in Bombay

According to the Bombay view there is no hard and fast rule that an adoption by a youth or girl who has not completed the age of fifteen years is necessarily invalid. The Court has regarded the question of the possession of the necessary understanding and discretion as a question of fact to be determined on the evidence in the particular case. Though an adopter is aged only 14 years, if it is found that he had sufficient maturity of understanding to comprehend the nature of the act of adoption and its consequences, the adoption must be held to be valid. ———Adoption—Partition of joint family property prior to adoption—Adopted son's right to re-open partition and claim share.

The head of a joint Hindu family died in 1929, leaving him surviving two sons and the widows of two predeceased sons. In 1936, there was a partition of the family properties between the sons and some time later the widows of the predeceased sons adopted each a son. In a suit by one of the adopted sons for the recovery of a fourth share of the properties,

Held, that the adopted son occupies the same position as a posthumous son and has all the rights of an aurasa son for the purpose of succession in the adoptive family though he will take the estate subject to the dispositions made within the competency of the persons entitled to hold such estate till his adoption. Partition does not however stand on the same footing as an alienation of joint family property. Accordingly, the fact that the adoption took place subsequent to the partition does not bar the right of the adopted son to claim his legitimate share as appertaining to his adoptive father in the family property held by the members of the family and not validly disposed of. ———Adoption—Right of adopted son—Partition effected before adoption by coparcener's widow—Right of adoptee to re-open partition.

Under the Hindu law where property is taken by survivorship the power of the widow of a coparcener to adopt is not affected. Adoption dates back to the date of the death of the adoptive father, and it is to that date that regard must be had for the purpose of determining the rights of the adopted son. The existence of coparcenary at the date of the adoption is therefore not material. A son adopted to a deceased coparcener is therefore entitled to re-open a partition of family property effected by the surviving coparceners before the adoption took place. The adoption restores the position so far as the adopted son is concerned subject to lawful alienation in the meantime. A partition does not amount to an alienation of family properties. (*Leach, C. vested in widow of another gotraja sapinda—If divested—Right of adopted son to sue in respect of.

An adoption made by a widow when the co parcenary is at an end cannot divest property which has already vested in or through the heir of the last male holder. A widow of a gotraja sapinda who succeeds to property as such cannot, by an adoption, alter after her own death the devolution of that property to which she became entitled as the widow of a gotraja sapinda, and deprive the reversioner of his rights, whether vested or contingent. The adoptive son does not take the life estate of his adoptive mother; such a theory is entirely unknown to Hindu Law. The estate which an adopted son acquires on adoption is an absolute estate and any suit that he brings with respect to the property claimed must be brought on that footing. When he has been adopted by the widow of a gotraja sapinda he cannot bring a suit on that footing, because the adoption by the widow will not alter the order of inheritance of the property. It is not therefore open to the adopted son to sue at all in respect of property which has gone to his adoptive mother as the widow of a gotraja sapinda. HINDU LAW—Alienation.

———Alienation — Father —Mortgage— Validity—Antecedent debt—Mortgage for payment of balance of price for property purchased immediately before—If for necessity or antecedent debt—Sons—If bound.

A Hindu father executed a mortgage deed on 18—3—1927 for Rs. 1,000, which he borrowed for the purpose of enabling him to pay the balance of sale price due in respect of a property purchased by him under a sale deed dated 9—2—1927 and registered on 6-4-1927. In a suit on a mortgage, the mortgagor's son pleaded that the mortgage was not binding upon him as it was not for necessity or antecedent debts. It was found that the two transactions, sale and mortgage were part of the same transaction.

Held, that the fact that the mortgage-deed was executed between the execution of the sale deed and the date of its registration together with the payment of the balance of sale price (which was the amount borrowed under the mortgage-deed) indicated that the two transactions were closely connected and were not independent and the debt was not therefore an antecedent debt which would justify the mortgage so as to bind the mortgagor's son. The mortgage could therefore be enforced only against the father's share in the mortgaged property, and the son was entitled to resist the suit though he was in enjoyment of the property purchased by the father with the aid of the mortgage money. ———Alienation—Father—Powers of—Self-acquired and joint property.

It is now settled law that the father has unrestricted power in respect of his self-acquisitions, both movable and immovable. The passage in the Mitakshara prohibiting the alienation of his self-acquired immovable property by the father without the assent of the sons has been construed as laying down a rule founded merely on moral and religious considerations, carrying with it no legal obligation. As regards the joint family property, the power of the father to make a binding loan and the power to dispose of the property are not co-extensive. The validating occasion for a loan made by the father is much wider than that for creating a right in rem in respect of the joint family property. After the institution of a foreclosure mortgage suit one of the defendants died and his son who was born some 7½ months after his death, was brought on record in the father's place as his legal representative.

Held, that the after born son had a dual capacity. In his own right he could not challenge the mortgage, but in so far as he was the legal representative of his father he could take any plea which was open to his father and could continue to defend the suit on grounds which his father had already raised unless of course the right to contest died with the deceased (Stone, C.J. and Bose, J.) BAHADUR SINGH v. GIRDHARI LAL. I.L.R. and continues to prosper so that a comparatively poor family is raised to affluence within the course of a few years. In such circumstances minor members of the family, while retaining all the benefits of the new prosperity, cannot challenge the alienati n which made it possible. The borrowing could not be justified on the ground of "necessity" in such a case, but it could, and would, on the ground of "benefit to the estate." The grounds of "necessity" and "benefit" to the estate are separate and distinct. (Stone, C.J. and Bose, J.) BAHADUR SINGH v. GIRDHARILAL. I.L.R. ——Alienation—Limited owner—Powers of—Legatee under will.

The principles of Hindu law governing the right of a limited owner to alienate for legal necessity do not apply to the case of a legatee whose title depends on the terms of a will. Consequently, the alienation by a widow which is directly contrary to the devolution of the property provided by the will of her husband under which she holds the estate is not merely voidable but void. ——Alienation—Manager—Legal necessity or benefit—Mortgage for acquiring property for benefit of one member—If supported by necessity or benefit.

A karta of a Hindu joint family is not entitled to burden the whole of the family property to acquire property which would prove of no benefit whatsoever to the members of the family as such, although it may be of benefit to one individual member thereof. ——Alienation—Manager—Powers of—Mitakshara Law.

Per Pal, J.—The power defined in Chapter I, section 1, paras. 27, 28 and 29 of the Mitakshara is now taken to be the power of the manager of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara Law to alienate immovable property belonging to the family. The power conferred by these verses is wide enough to include the case of expenditure made "in the interest and for the benefit" of the joint family.

HINDU LAW—Alienation.

Per Nasim Ali, J.—The answer to the question as to whether an alienation by the karta of a joint family is "for the sake of the family" or "for the benefit of the estate" or "for family interests" will depend on the facts of each particular case. Where the money borrowed by the karta on the mortgage of a tea garden belonging to the joint family was spent for the requirements of that garden which was a source of income to the family, the expenditure was justified by the interests of the family and, therefore, all the members of the joint family, including the minor members are bound by the mortgage. Where in a joint Hindu family consisting of brothers, there is a manager in existence, e.g., when the eldest brother is an adult, the mother of the brothers has no right or place at all to act on behalf of the family and her dealings would not bind the family or any member thereof except herself. If the mother makes any alienation by way of mortgage, purporting to do so on behalf of and as guardian of her sons, one of whom is found to be a major on that date, that must be held to be invalid and will not bind any of the sons. ——Alienation—Widow—Alienation—Advancing of her own money—Right to recoup.

There may be circumstances in which a Hindu widow might pledge her own credit, or use her own money, for the payment of debts binding on the estate. In such a case it would have to be made clear that she intended to advance her own money to the estate with the intention ultimately of recovering the money from the estate. ——Alienation — Widow — Alienation — Binding nature—Debt incurred on the personal responsibility of the widow.

The question whether a debt incurred by a Hindu widow on her personal responsibility in order to pay a debt binding on the estate is itself binding on the estate is really one of fact. If in the circumstances of a particular case a person advancing the money is led to believe and quite reasonably concludes that the widow is acting on behalf of the estate, the estate would be bound, while, on the other hand if it appears that the advance was made personally to the widow and there was no suggestion that she was borrowing on behalf of the estate, the widow alone would be bound and the creditor would have no remedy against the estate. Where the widow in so many words says that she is hypothecating her personal life estate, the mortgagee could not be under any misapprehension that he is advancing the money to the widow as the representative of the estate. Such a mortgagee having accepted the security of the life estate, could not possibly afterwards turn round and allege that he had any right to hold the property against the reversioners till such time as the mortgage was redeemed. In the case of an alienation by a Hindu widow, the burden of proof must remain on the person who alleges necessity and to say that a suit by a reversioner to recover property alienated by a Hindu widow must fail in the absence of any evidence about the necessity of the loan would be in effect to abrogate the rule of limitation that he is entitled to institute a suit for the recovery of the property within 12 years of the date of the death of the limited owner. Where there is nothing to lead to the conclusion that there was any necessity for the loan except the passage of time and possibly the allegation that the widow was not well off, the alienation will not be binding on the reversioner. It is not very safe to assume that when a reversioner signs a document of transfer by the widow as a witness he must necessarily know its contents and must have approved of the transaction. It is true that the consent of the reversioner as a person who may naturally be supposed to have been likely to object to an alienation by the widow if there was ground for objection, may lead in the absence of other evidence to an inference that the property has been alienated for legal necessity but it does not necessarily follow that any consent by a reversioner leads to a definite presumption that the property must have been alienated for legal necessity. In a suit against two Hindu brothers and their sons on a promissory note executed by the two brothers for joint family necessity, there was a decree against the makers personally, and against their sons, limited so far as the latter were concerned to their interests in the family properties. The creditor had attached the family properties before judgment. A year later the brothers were adjudicated insolvents on their application. The decree-holder unsuccessfully tried to implead in execution proceedings the Official Receiver as representing the two brothers who had executed the note and he had therefore to limit his application for execution to the interests of the sons in the attached properties. The sons' interests in the properties were sold and purchased by the decree-holder and another; and the proceeds of the sale were distributed rateably under S. 73, C. P. Code, to the attaching decree-holder and five other creditors. The purchasers subsequently filed suits individually for partition of the shares of the sons which they had purchased, the estate being then in the hands of the Official Receiver. The lower Courts held that the purchasers were entitled to their shares of the sons subject only to the payment of other family debts.

Held, although the normal rule was that a person acquiring the interest of a Hindu coparcener in the family properties should, when he wished to enforce his rights, institute a suit for partition of all the assets of the family, and the value of the share acquired would be only arrived at after making provision for payment of all the family debts, yet in view of the fact that the proceeds of the sale of the sons' shares had been already paid out to creditors rateably, the condition imposed by the lower Courts that the purchasers could take the sons' shares only subject to the liability for the remaining debts of the family would amount to a direction that the same properties be sold twice over for the purpose; that was a position which no Court of equity could ever contemplate. It was in consonance both with natural justice and with the spirit of Hindu Law to hold that a sale for the satisfaction of a family debt was capable of conveying a good title to the purchaser in the circumstances. The diligent creditors having already received their shares from the proceeds of the sale of the sons' shares in the properties, there was no justification for the condition imposed, and the creditors who were still unpaid could resort to the sale proceeds of the interests of the father in the properties in the hands of the Official Receiver. There is no warrant for laying it down as an established universal proposition of Hindu law that whenever the manager or father in a joint Hindu family is sued, the members of the family or the sons, as the case may be, must be deemed to be represented by him. Whether they are or are not so represented is a question of fact depending upon many things, the nature of the claim, the language of the plaint, the subject-matter of the suit and the issues which require decision before the decree can be given. Where in a suit on a promissory note executed by a Hindu father for money borrowed "for family expenses" it was asserted in the plaint that the money was borrowed for family expenses as recited in the promissory note, but the sons were not impleaded and the plaintiff did not ask for any adjudication which would necessarily have the effect of binding the sons; but merely relied on the doctrine of pious obligation.

Held, that the assertion that the money was borrowed for family expenses was an unnecessary assertion the truth of which was not put in issue, and it was impossible to say that in the circumstances the father was ever sued as representative of his family, still less that he in fact represented it. Further, when the sons were separated from their father when execution of such a decree was sought, the remedy of the decree-holder seeking to proceed against the sons' shares lay not in execution but in the filing of a separate suit. A sale by a Hindu father of joint family property for no justifiable purpose does not amount to a breach of trust. Where a sale by the father is set aside during his lifetime on the ground of want of justifiable necessity, the vendee has an enforceable claim against him for the return of a proportionate part of the purchase consideration, and a liability of this nature comes within the pious obligation rule as against his sons. If the transaction is set aside after the father's death, the vendee has a claim against his estate and the situation is the same. Where a mortgage of ancestral property is executed to pay the unpaid consideration in respect of a sale obtained a couple of months earlier there is no disso ciation and no real antecedency in fact between the two transactions, for under such circumstances it is reasonable to infer that the vendee must have had the later mortgage in contemplation at the time of the sale. When a debt is incurred by a manager of a joint Hindu family he is personally liable because he is a party to the contract. The others are not ordinarily personally liable and all that a creditor can do in such cases is to proceed against their interest in the joint family assets provided the debt is one which binds them. But if they themselves are parties to the contract, or if they subsequently ratify the contract then they are personally liable and their separate estate can be proceeded against. The manager is not an agent in the ordinary sense of the word but he does represent the family. Also he is not tied down to his status qua manager and when other members chose to associate themselves personally with him, they are also bound. They are consequently at liberty to accept his actions at a later date and to ratify them. If they do so they are as much bound as if they had contracted liability in the beginning. ———Debts—Joint family—Manager—Money lending business—Borrowings—Liability of other members—Facts to be proved—Ancestral family business.

There is a broad distinction between a banking business and a money lending business. The essential function to enable a person, firm or institution to be regarded as a banker, or a bank is that of receiving current deposits against which withdrawals could be made by cheque or any other means. Hence where on the strength of promissory notes amounts are given to a money-lender manager, the transaction is a loan and not a deposit with a banker. In order to make the other members of the family of the money lender liable in respect of such a transaction it must be shown that it was one justified by legal necessity. It has to be found that there was a family business or rather an ancestral family business of money-lending involving both borrowing and lending. The business of money-lending by no means invariably involves the assumption that the money-lender is himself in the habit of taking loans. From the mere fact that a person like his father before him did some money-lending business, it cannot be inferred that it is an ancestral family business. ——— Joint family—Business—Nature of—Individual or joint—Burden of proof.

Whether or not it can be said that if a joint family is possessed of some joint property, there is a presumption that any property in the hands of an individual member is not his separate individual property but joint property, no such presumption can be applied to a business. A member of joint undivided family can make separate acquisition of property for his own benefit and unless it can be shown that the business grew from joint family property, or that the earnings were blended with joint family estate, they remain free and separate. The question whether the business was begun or carried on with the assistance of joint family property or as a family business is a question of fact upon which the initial burden of proof lies upon those who claim a share in the business. It is intelligible that a junior member minded to commence a business might well be told that the family do not want to engage in the particular venture proposed or to be responsible for the debts incurred in connection therewith, but that a certain sum could be provided on loan to enable the venture to be carried on by the junior on his own account. Such an instance serves to show how wrong it would be to jump to the conclusion that what appears to be a loan is not in truth a loan because there is a joint business or some other joint property. In such cases the junior member upon a partition will be entitled to his share in the assets of the joint business which made the loan including the debt due from or money recovered from himself. There is no more paradox in this than already lies in the fact of the family or firm having made him a loan. On the insolvency of a Hindu father, the power of the father to sell his son's share in the joint family property for his own debts vests in the receiver. Where there is an attachment of the family property in execution of decrees against the father before the insolvency, it is not open to the son to take advantage of the attachment and claim that the receiver has no power to sell the property It is only by S. 64, C. P. Code that certain disabilities are imposed upon the father when the son's interest is attached. S. 64 does not put an end to the power of sale. Its only effect is that such transferees cannot prejudice the rights of the attaching creditor. So long as there is no dispute raised by the attaching creditor regarding the sale by the receiver it does not lie in the mouth of the son to question the sales. The power of the father to sell does not come to an end by virtue of the attachment; it is only qualified by the attachment. It is only the attaching creditor that may insist upon his rights being worked out. The son has no right to rely on it. Moreover if he questions all the debts of the father he cannot take advantage of the attachment of the decree holders and at the same time challenge their debts. He would not be enforcing a claim under the attachment within the meaning of S. 64. C. P Code. (Grille, C.J. and Puranik, J.) LAXMINARAYAN v. DINKAR SHANKER RAO. 1942 N.L.J. 599.

The deposit by a Hindu of his own money in a bank in the joint names of himself and his wife, and on the terms that it is to be payable to his wife after his death, does not constitute a gift by him to his wife; there is a resulting trust in favour of the husband in the absence of proof of a contrary intention, there being no presumption of an intended advancement in favour of the wife. The ownership of the money deposited depends upon the source from which it came. The fact that there is a provision that it is payable to the wife after the husband's death obviously indicates a bequest rather than a gift of the money, but a Hindu father has no power to make a will in respect of joint family property which will bind his son. A Hindu joint family consisted of one T, his wife B D, and his son K. On 30—4—1932, T deposited a sum of Rs. 5,000 with a limited company in the joint names of himself and his wife, and the receipt given by the company stated, "T is the owner of the money. After his lifetime, B D is to get the same." T died on 20—9—1932, and disputes arose between the widow and the son of T as to the money, each claiming it to the exclusion of the other.

Held (1) that the mere fact that the deposit was made in the name of B D also did not show that a gift to her was intended; (2) that as B D had no interest in the money at the time it was deposited it must be held to be either T's property or the joint family property of himself and his son K; (3) that though a bequest was intended in favour of B D, it was invalid as a Hindu father had no power to make a will of joint family property; (4) that to constitute a legal and valid gift, there must be a transfer of the ownership to the donee during the lifetime of the owner under Ss. 122 and 123, T. ——Joint family—Joint family and ancestral property—Distinction.

The Mitakshara gives the sons a right by birth in all joint family property whether ancestral or otherwise and makes it clear that they succeed by survivorship and not by inheritance in both cases, but there is a difference between joint family property and ancestral joint family property. Although the son has a right by birth in his father's and in his grandfather's property still, since he is dependent on his father in regard to the paternal estate and since the father has a predominant interest as it was acquired by himself, the son must acquiesce in the father's disposal of his own acquired property; but, since both have indiscriminately a right in the grand father's estate, the son has a power of interdiction. ———Maintenance—Widow— Quantum — Considerations—Burden of proof as to income—Consequences of failure to produce account books.

Courts should not go into minute details in maintenance cases but should rather view things broadly. A maintenance holder is not entitled to an exact percentage of the total income and persons in possession of only a limited estate should have something to form a sinking fund against bad times. In the case of a tonsured widow, she does not require a great deal of money either for her clothes or jewels or for her entertainment She is entitled to live in the style that she ought to have been living in the time of her husband. Liberty could always be given to either party to apply for a variation on change of circumstances. If people who defend maintenance suits do not exhibit their account books or go into the witness-box to prove how much the income is, the Court can draw an inference from such a reticence and they would have to thank only themselves, if the suit results in a decree for more maintenance than should have been awarded if they had produced all the available evidence. ———Partition—Lunatic—Rights.

A person who has become a lunatic is debarred from claiming his share by partition and is not entitled to claim a share when the coparcenary estate is partitioned; but his right is not extinguished, and he succeeds by survivorship if he finds himself the last coparcener. A lunatic cannot claim his share even through a guardian or manager as a guardian or manager cannot obtain for him what he is not qualified to obtain for himself under Hindu law. Hence decrees obtained by the manager of a lunatic coparcener against other coparceners do not operate as a partition on behalf of the lunatic, as the lunatic was debarred from participation by his personal law. There is nothing to prohibit a lunatic coparcener from receiving property in lieu of maintenance and he can receive what would have amounted to his share if he were under no disability, if the other coparcener or coparceners choose to let him have it, e.g., the sane brother disclaiming or renouncing his claim over lunatic's share.

Per Allsop, J.—Where exclusion depends upon unsoundness of mind it is clear that there can be no absolute criterion by which to Judge whether a person is liable to be excluded. In each case it would be necessary to decide whether unsoundness of mind was of such a character as would justify exclusion. It is a question of degree and the members of a family who were of sound mind at the time of a partition might well in some circumstances hesitate whether the person of unsound mind was in such a condition that exclusion was justifiable. It would surely not be right, if they gave him a share, afterwards to allow them to resile from their position and to allege that the share should not have been given and that the partition was liable to be avoided. There might also be cases where the members of sound mind might consider it more convenient to allow the person of unsound mind a share rather than to render themselves liable for his maintenance after the partition. Therefore, it cannot be laid down as an absolute rule that there can be no partition between a brother of sound mind and one of unsound mind. Where there is no definite information regarding partition, the evidence of acts and conduct of the several members becomes relevant for consideration. Thus the question whether there was a partition or not becomes a matter of inference from evidence on record. (Niyogi, J.) WASANT NILKANTH POTEY v. BALWANT RAO. 1942 N.L.J. 478.

A re-union as understood in the Hindu Law is completed not by the union of the coparceners alone, but by the union of their wealth. Its effect on the present ownership of the parties, on a possible second partition and on the rule of succession in case one dies while still re united, is determined by special texts. A member of a joint Hindu family who is ordinarily entitled to disrupt the family at will cannot be deprived of that right merely because the result would be that he could take the whole family property as a result of the disruption and leave to the other member only a right to be maintained. It is possible for members of a joint family to divide the property up among themselves for the purpose of more convenient enjoyment or management without the intention of making a partition which would sever the title so that some might be full proprietors of certain of the original properties and some absolute proprietors of others. That would, of course, be a matter of intention, but the intention can only be gathered from the conduct of the members of the family. No Court can consider alleged mental reservations. On this view the shebait becomes for all practical purposes the de facto owner of the deity's estate. Though he may not be a trustee he by virtue of his office becomes the administrator of the property attached to the temple. The shebait is a sentient representative of the deity and as such has all the rights of an owner of the property subject of course to the limitation that the property and its income is to be devoted entirely for the purposes of the deity. ——Religious Endowment—Shebaits—Suit by some—Maintainability—Suit for ejectment by some shebaits impleading others as defendants—Ejectment notice issued by plaintiffs alone—Suit, if maintainable.

A suit instituted on behalf of a deity by some of the shebaits only is maintainable when the others who were unwilling to be joined as co plaintiffs have been impleaded as defendants. The underlying principle with reference to the procedure to be followed when a deity sues through some only of its shebaits is that all the shebaits must be impleaded whether as plaintiffs or as defendants in order to ensure that, in adjudicating upon the matter before it, the Court will not overlook some aspect of the case which may affect the interests of the endowment. It is, however, difficult to apply this principle in matters affecting the general management of an endowment before a suit with reference thereto is actually instituted. A notice of ejectment issued by some of the shebaits is not valid and the fact that the others did not wish to be associated with it would not alone be sufficient to validate it. A suit for ejectment brought by some of the shebaits impleading the others as defendants is not maintainable when the suit is based on an ejectment notice issued by the plaintiffs alone. It is arguable that circumstances might possibly arise in connection with the administration of debutter property, in which in the interests of the deity some of the shebaits might properly act without the consent of the others, for instance, when the other shebaits had either disqualified themselves from acting in that capacity or had done something which was detrimental to the best interests of the estate. ———Widow—Acquisition—Property acquired out of income—If stridhan or accretion to husband's estate—Test.

It is now well settled that a widow has absolute power of disposition over the income of her husband's property and she is not bound to save a single farthing. If however, she chooses not to spend the entire income and invests a portion thereof in the acquisition of immovable properties, the question arises as to whether such properties are to be treated as an accretion to the husband's estate or are to be regarded as stridhan properties of her own. In such suits, the true test is to ascertain the intention of the widow. If she evinces an intention to appropriate the property to herself and separate it from the corpus of the estate, it would certainly be her absolute property. But if she deals with it in the same way as the rest of her husband's property it would follow the estate from whence it came. If a Hindu widow invests the accumulations from the deceased husband's estate, prima facie it is her intention that they should be regarded as accretions thereto, and not as a separate estate descendible in a different line of succession. Where a twelve annas share of a putni property was acquired by her husband during his life-time, the subsequent purchase of the remaining four annas share by the widow is in the nature of an acquisition which has the effect of enlarging the original nucleus particularly when the accounts of the sixteen annas putni are kept together and rents are realised similarly and the whole thing is treated as one integral property throughout the life-time of the widow. S, a Hindu, died on 27—5—1899, leaving a will which provided, inter alia: (1) I bequeath to the following persons for life the interest of the sums of money set forth against his or her name, namely . . . . . and I direct the executors to invest these several sums in some good security in their names as trustees thereof and to pay interest accruing thereon to each of these persons respectively from time to time during his or her lifetime and until the said sums are invested, the executors shall pay to each of these persons interest out of my estate at the rate of 4 per cent. from the date of my death till the date of such investments. On the death of any of these persons, such interest shall be paid to the sons or son of the deceased person during their or his lifetime. Thereafter half the amount of such interest be paid to the widow of such deceased person, if alive, and to the daughters of such persons, if alive, and the remaining half shall form part of my trust fund . . . . . (2) I declare that this will deals with my self-acquired properties and the same have been acquired by me without any aid from the family fund which is distinct from my self-acquired property and which is in charge of my brother M; and I direct that if any of my brothers raises any dispute regarding my sole right to the same and regarding any of the provisions of this will and refuses to acknowledge my right to make this will, he shall forfeit any benefit given him by this will. The will was dated 26th March, 1899, and the executors named in the will obtained probate thereof on 22nd March, 1900. In 1905, M, the eldest brother of S, brought a suit alleging that the property disposed of by S in his will was joint family property, and S having been a member of an undivided Hindu family, the will was invalid and a nullity. The sons of M, including G, were also parties to this suit, which was ultimately dismissed by the Privy Council who held that the property disposed of by the will was the self-acquired property of S except as to one item, a dwelling house, which was joint family property. M died in 1916 leaving five sons, including G. of these five sons, the last T was born only in 1909, long after the death of S. In 1937, G, one of the sons of M, brought the present suit against the trustees of the estate of S for recovery from them of Rs. 9,426 1-3, which the plaintiff claimed as due to him under the first clause above mentioned, partly as one of the heirs of his father M, and partly in his own right, or alternatively in his own right only.

Held, (1) that S. 121 of the Succession Act of 1865 (S 134 of Act XXXIX of 1925), did not apply to the case as S was a Hindu, and as the will was executed on 26th March, 1899; (2) that there was nothing in the forfeiture clause (2) read with the 1st clause of the will repugnant to the Hindu law and therefore, in the absence of any rule of Hindu law applicable in such a case, the validity and binding force of the forfeiture clause in the will of a Hindu must be determined according to the principles of S. 121 of the Succession Act of 1865, (3) that S. 121 (S. 134 of the Act of 1935) was a departure from the English law, and the forfeiture clause could not therefore be regarded as one in terrorem, and therefore M must be held to have incurred a forfeiture when he instituted the suit in 1905 contesting the will of S under the forfeiture clause; (4) that the forfeiture, incurred by M, did not, however, affect the present plaintiff or the other sons of M. though they were parties to the suit of M; (5) that the forfeiture incurred by M did not accelerate the legacy to the son or sons of M, including G, and the legacy in respect of the sons of M, became payable only in 1916 on the death of M; (6) that the legacy in favour of the son or sons of M was not void, because one of them, T, the last, was not born till 1909; the legacy was void only so far as T was concerned, but it was a valid legacy so far as the plaintiff and the other three sons of M were concerned; (7) that where a gift or bequest was made to two or more persons who were members of a coparcenary they nevertheless took as tenants in-common and not as joint tenants or co-parceners, unless a contrary intention appeared from the grant; that in this case, as the testator indicated a "contrary intention" by the use of the words "sons or son", it must be held it was the intention of the testator that the sons of M should take the interest as joint tenants with survivorship and they took accordingly ; (8) and that the 4 sons of M including G, became entitled to the legacy in their own right and not through their father. HINDU WIDOWS' REMARRIAGE ACT (XV OF 1856), S. 3—Appointment of guardian—Duty of Court.

S. 3 of the Hindu Widows' Re-marriage Act in no way makes it incumbent upon the Court to appoint a guardian nor does it provide in every case where a Hindu widow remarries, some one should be appointed in her place. The scheme of the section is to allow any one of the relations named to apply to the Court in case of re-marriage of a widow, to be appointed guardian of the child, so that the Court may consider the position and if it thinks fit, appoint some person other than the mother, preferably from among the named relations in the order given as guardian of the child. If the mother as the result of her second marriage should have renounced her position as guardian, then the paternal grandfather may be appointed, but if when an application has been made, the Court is of the opinion that it is in the best interests of the minor for the time-being to remain with the mother, there is nothing in the section which compels it to appoint a guardian of the child. HINDU WOMEN'S RIGHTS TO PROPERTY ACT (XVIII OF 1937) (as amended by Act II of 1938)—Applicability—Both agricultural and non-agricultural property left by deceased..

As the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act as amended by Act II of 1938 is ultra vires of the Indian Legislature and does not operate to regulate succession to agricultural land in the Governor's Provinces but operates only to regulate devolution by survivorship of property other than agricultural land, where the property left by the deceased is both agricultural and non-agricultural, the widow would have no right under the Act to succeed her husband even to a limited interest so far as the agricultural property is concerned. The Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act of 1937 and the amendment Act of 1938 do not operate to regulate succession to agricultural land in the Governor's Provinces. Succession to a maliki or proprietary right is without doubt a succession to agricultural land or to rights in or over land including the relation of landlord and tenant. A zamindar or landlord in Bihar clearly has rights in and over land, is concerned with the collection of rents and is a party to the relation of landlord and tenant. Succession to a proprietary interest is therefore governed not by Act XVIII of 1937 and Act XI of 1938, but by the ordinary Hindu Law of inheritance. A Hindu widow who is given a right under S. 3 of the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act does not obtain such right by survivorship; she was not a coparcener before her husband's death and is not one after that. It does not, however, follow that she obtains it by inheritance, so as to make it obligatory on her to obtain a succession certificate under S. 21 of the Succession Act in a suit on a promissory note in her deceased husband's favour. As the widow does not inherit no succession certificate is necessary. The effect of S. 3 (2) and (3) of the Act (XVIII of 1937), is a survival of the husband's persona in the wife, giving her the same rights as her husband had except that she can alienate the property only under certain circumstances. tural income" was exhausted and therefore when the residue, after satisfying the prior trusts, was appropriated by the assessee in his secondary capacity as beneficiary, it has ceased to be "agricultural income" and had lost the protection of S. 4 (3) (viii):

Held, that so long as the services were and are performed the assessee was and will be, beneficially interested in the surplus income of the properties and was, and will be, a beneficiary in respect of that surplus under the trusts of waqf. And the agricultural income which he received as mutwalli did not change its character when he received the residue as beneficiary.

Held, further, that in determining the amount of the agricultural income in such residue which would be exempt from assessment, the principle to be applied was that the prior charges on the mixed income fund should be apportioned between the component parts thereof rateably and in consequence the surplus which remains should be rateably attributed to agricultural and non-agricultural income. Therefore the method to apply was to treat the residue in the hands of the assessee as being composed of agricultural and non-agricultural income in the same ratio as the total of these two classes of income bore to each other at the time when they passed into the common fund. They were not registered as a firm and were therefore assessed on the business and on the income from the deposit as an association of individuals. They claimed that so far as their profits in Bombay from the deposit were concerned, they should be regarded as individuals receiving an income in Bombay and that the income should not be assessed together with their income from business as an association of persons.

Held, that in view of a decision of the High Court holding that the assessees did not form a joint Hindu family, the question whether their property in Bombay was their stridhan or not was immaterial, and the income from the deposit belonged to them as an association of individuals and the Income-tax department was therefore justified in assessing them as an association of individuals. The assessee succeeded to a raj on the death of his predecessor after a protracted civil litigation against the widows of the late Raja who claimed the entire estate on the ground that the assessee was not a member of the joint family with the deceased and that there was no male member in the family. The assessee claimed that he was a member of a joint Hindu family with the late Raja and was therefore entitled to the estate by survivorship and by the custom of lineal primogeniture. The assessee's contention was upheld, but the decree awarded maintenance to the widows of the late Raja and made the arrears of maintenance a charge on the estate. The assessee paid the widows in the year of assessment 1937-1938 a sum of Rs. 19,587, as maintenance allowance under the decree and claimed deduction but the Income-tax authorities treated it as part of his income and included the same in the assessable income of the assessee.

Held, that the amount paid by the assessee to the widows of his predecessor was not a part of his income, but was the amount received by him for and on account of the widows and therefore was an admissible deduction and no tax was payable by him on that amount. It was not the case of the assessee applying part of his income in a particular way; it was rather an allocation of a sum out of his revenue before it became income in his hands. The assessee obtained a decree against them on 26—2—1934 for Rs. 31,682 being the principal amount together with Rs. 6,579 interest and Rs. 3,000 costs. The decree provided for future interest at 6 per cent. The assessee started execution on 12—6—1937, and pending the same he entered into an agreement with one of the judgment-debtors in 1938-1939, under which the latter was discharged from all liability on his paying the assessee a sum of Rs. 21,000 in payment of half the decree debt. The assessee did not appropriate this sum in his books in any particular manner, but the Income-tax Authorities appropriated Rs. 3,000 towards costs, Rs. 13,977 towards interest and Rs. 4,023 towards principal.

The assessee who was the proprietor of a big zamindari estate was assessed to income-tax in 1937-1938 on his income from different sources comprising among others royalties received from various lessees for working the coal mines located on his estate. The leases were granted, at a time when he was a minor, by the Court of Wards who administered his estate at that time. Upon the assessee attaining majority he took charge of his estate during the previous year of account 1937-1938. was still a minor, and he paid Rs. 88,756, in the latter part of 1937-1938 when the assessee had himself assumed charge of his estate. In the return filed by the assessee for the assessment year 1938-1939, the assessee showed and included only the sum of Rs. 5,00,209 14-3, paid by this lessee but not the sum of Rs. 88,756, the assessee's contention being that he had kept this sum in a suspense account on the ground that there was a dispute between him and the lessee in question with regard to the correct amount of the royalty payable and also with regard to the validity of the lease itself because he intended to repudiate the leases granted by the Court of Wards, that, therefore, he had never received the sum in question and was not bound to pay income tax on that amount. The lessee in question was in the habit of paying the royalty from time to time to the credit of the assessee in his account in the Imperial Bank of Calcutta under the arrangement with the Court of Wards and he paid in this sum of Rs. 88,756 also to the account of the assessee in that Bank. It was found, however, that the assessee had operated upon this sum by agreeing to have it mixed up with the other amounts to his credit in the Bank, but the account was operated upon not in the previous year but in the following year (i.e. 1938-1939).

Held, that the assessee received the amount in question as income and it was mixed up with the other sums to his credit in the Bank over which he had complete control, and that that amount was therefore assessable to income-tax in the year 1938-1939. ——Ss. 4 (3) (1) and 41 (1), proviso—Applicability—Trust for political purposes or national purposes—If charitable—Exemption—Assessment—Maximum rate—If leviable.

"Charitable purposes" in S. 4 (3) of the Income-tax Act would include relief of the poor, education, medical relief and the advancement of any other object of general public utility. Trusts for the benefit of the inhabitants of a particular locality are regarded as charitable, but trusts for the benefit of a particular political party or for the advancement of particular political purposes or opinions are not regarded as charitable. A gift for such purposes as a particular individual or individuals may consider to be charitable is not a good charitable purpose although a gift for such charitable purposes as the managing committee of a trust may think fit would be good, because the committee would be bound to keep within the ambit of charity, and if they go beyond the legal boundary, they can be controlled by the Court. The objects of a trust created by a deed were (1) the advancement of any purpose which might in the controlled opinion of the managing committee be national or of national importance for the inhabitants of British India by any means which in the like opinion of the managing committee be constitutional; (2) the political advancement of India having for its goal the acquisition of complete autonomy or "swarajya" to be attained by all constitutional agitation and means; (3) the diffusion of political education and knowledge as to the political affairs of India and propoganda work both in India as well as in any part of the world outside India having for its aim the acquisition of complete national autonomy or "swarajya" as aforesaid; (4) any object which may conduce to any of the aforesaid objects.

Held, (1) that the objects specified in the four clauses were clearly distributive and since the whole of the trust fund could be applied for any one or more of the objects specified, the trust could not be regarded as charitable if any of those objects did not fall within the term "charity"; (2) that clauses (1) and (2) went too far, and the gift was for a political purpose; (3) that the trust for a national or political purpose could not be regarded as charitable so as to fall within the purview of S. 4 (3) (i) of the Income-tax Act; (4) that the case fell within the first proviso to S. 41 (1) of the Income-tax Act and the maximum rate of income-tax was leviable. ——S. 7 (1)—Applicability—Deferred salary—Provident Fund not recognised under Act—Employer's contribution and interest thereon—Withdrawal of amount by employee in service—Income not assessable.

The assessee, an employee in the Tata Iron and Steel Works Ltd., Jamshedpur, was drawing a salary of over Rs. 200 per mensem. The assessee was subscribing to the Provident Fund maintained by the company and the employer company also contributed a similar sum. These subscriptions together with 6 per cent. interest were placed to the credit of the assessee who in the year previous to the year of assessment withdrew a sum of Rs. 6,214, which consisted of the contributions made by the employer to the Provident Fund Rs.3,445 and the accumulated interest thereon Rs. 1,319. The assessee contended that these two amounting to Rs. 4,764 could not be assessed to income-tax as it was not received by him as his salary but as a capital voluntary payment. The Income-tax authorities contended that the amount was in the nature of a deferred salary. The Provident Fund was not a recognised fund under Ch. IX-A of the Income-tax Act. Under the rules of the Fund, the sums which are allotted by the company could not be withdrawn by the assessee at the end of each year, but only after he had served completely and satisfactorily for a period of 12 years.

Held, that the allotments made by the Fund in the name of the assessee were not in the nature of salary for current services, but were merely the measure of a sum or sums which the company volunteered to pay to him on the termination of his service upon a certain percentage basis if the service terminated after three years and more and upon another percentage when he had served 12 years satisfactorily. The sum in question was not therefore "income" assessable in the hands of the assessee under S. 7 (1) of the Act. (Harries, C.J. and Manohar Lall, J.) S. R. MITTRA, In re. 1942 I.T.R. 259.

After C's death, the company paid this commission to his widow as his legal representative during the financial year, 1938-39 without any deduction of income-tax. The Income tax Department assessed the widow under S. 24-B of the Income-tax Act for the year 1939-40 on the income of the deceased for the previous year 1938-39 and included in that income the total sum due to him for commission at the date of his death.

Held, that by virtue of S. 7 of the Income-tax Act as amended in 1939, the Commission earned by the deceased which remained undrawn down to the time of his death remained salary at all material times and that by reason of S. 24-B of the Act the widow as his legal representative was liable to pay the tax which would have been paid by the deceased on that salary if he had not died. The assessee, a Provincial Co-operative Bank, Limited, registered under the Co-operative Societies Act of 1912 and the Madras Co-operative Societies Act of 1932, received in the year of account, 1938-1939, the sum of Rs. 69,975 as interest on tax-free securities. The assessee was entitled under the second proviso to S. 8 of the Income-tax Act to deduct this sum when calculating the amount of income for purposes of income-tax. The assessee, however, claimed a further reduction of Rs. 26,729 being the interest which was paid in the year of account on moneys borrowed for the purpose of buying tax-free securities. The assessee had invested money in debentures issued by the Madras Co-operative Central Land Mortgage Bank and these debentures were bought by the assessee in the open market. The assessee claimed exemption from tax in respect of the interest paid on these debentures, on the plea that the debentures represented loans to the Madras Co-operative Central Land Mortgage Bank and therefore represented transactions which were part of the ordinary business of the assessee.

Held, (1) that the assessee was entitled to the benefit of the first proviso to S. 8 of the Income-tax Act (as amended in 1939), in respect of interest received from securities which were not tax-free and to the benefit of the second proviso in respect of tax-free securities, but was not entitled to a double exemption in respect of the tax free securities; the assessee therefore could not get exemption in respect of the amount of Rs. 26,729; (2) that the fact that the assessee went into the open market to purchase the securities (debentures of the Madras Co-operative Central Land Mortgage Bank) showed that the object was investment, and the interest paid on the debentures represented taxable income as interest on investments. S. 26 (2) of the Income-tax Act is not confined to cases of succession inter vivos, but applies equally to the business of a deceased carried on by the heir-successors.

INCOME-TAX ACT (1922), S. 10.

But before a person can be assessed as a successor of a deceased money-lender, there must be evidence to show that the business of money-lending was actually carried on by the successor of the deceased money lender. H, a money-lender, died in November, 1936, leaving three sons and a widow. For the assessment year 1935 1936, the sons were assessed as an association of individuals under S. 3 of the Income-tax Act, and they did not object to that course. For the year 1937-1938, they objected to their assessment as an association of individuals and also to the assessment on income from business for the whole year under S. 26 (2) of the Act on the ground that they had not carried on the business on the death of their father. It was found that after the death of H his sons had retained joint management of his property, jointly received the rents in the form of property income, jointly recorded the same in the cash book for recording interest income, and that no fresh rent deeds were executed in the names of the sons severally after the death of H. It was also found that H had been lending out money on interest for many years before his death, that he had been assessed under S 10 and that he had large outstanding amounts when he died. The assessees had not dealt with those loans in any way and there was no evidence to show that they carried on the business of money-lending,

Held, (1) that there was evidence, though slight, on which the Income-tax authorities could find that the assessees were an association of individuals and therefore they were correctly assessed as such in respect of the rents realized jointly and recorded jointly in the books, (2) that in respect of the income derived from the money-lending business of H, the assessees could not be assessed under S. 10, but must be assessed under S. 12 of the Act, in which case S. 26 (2) would not apply. The assessee who carried on a money-lending business and dealt in groundnuts, and was running an oil mill, also speculated in cotton. In 1922, he entered into certain forward contracts for the purchase and sale of cotton. These resulted in losses which he could not meet. He was therefore sued in respect of these losses and ultimately a decree was passed against him on a compromise for Rs. 33,500 in May, 1935. The assessee paid the amount to the decree-holder in the Diwali year 1934-1935, i.e., the next accounting year. In defending the suit, the assessee incurred legal expenses amounting to Rs. 2,382, which he claimed to deduct from his income as a business expenditure in the assessment year of 1935-1936.

Held, (1) that the expenditure incurred by the assessee in avoiding a business liability was an allowable expenditure under S. 10 (2) (ix) of the Income-tax Act in the year in which expenditure was actually incurred, and the legal expenses should therefore be allowed to be deducted under S. 10 (2) (ix); (2) that the Income-tax authorities should in law make allowance for "expenditure incurred" in the period 28—10—1933 to 7—11—1934, that being found to be the year in respect of which arose the income, profits and gains forming the basis of the assessment; what figure that amounted to was a matter of fact to be dealt with by the income-tax authorities. The assessee who was carrying on money-lending business filed a return for 1935—1936, showing an income of Rs. 2,584 and produced a cash book and a ledger, which were admitted to have been written not daily but only fortnightly. The balances of the debtor's accounts and the names of the debtors were not brought forward from the previous year to the account year, and the accounts for year only showed such transactions as pertained to that year alone. The Income-tax Officer, holding that it was not possible to find out the correct income of the assessee from the accounts, took recourse to the proviso to S. 13 of the Income-tax Act, and made the assessment estimating the income at Rs. 1,50,000 as against Rs. 1,00,000 substituted by the assessee. The Assistant Commissioner, in appeal, further scrutinised the accounts and held that they had been rightly rejected by the Income-tax Officer. The Commissioner refused to state a case.

Held, (1) that the Income-tax Officer properly proceeded under S. 13 of the Income-tax Act, and his computation had been scrutinised; (2) that the material supplied by the assessee having been unreliable and there having been no arbitrary action on the part of the Income-tax authorities, no question of law arose in the case under S. 66 (3) of the Act. The assessee's husband and his brother constituted a joint Hindu family. The assessee's husband died in 1922, leaving his widow, the assessee, and two daughters. The family property passed by survivorship to the brother of the assessee's husband and his sons. The assessee, claiming that her husband had separated from his brother before his death, brought a suit for partition and for recovery of a half-share in the family properties. The suit was ultimately compromised and a compromise decree was passed under which the widow (assessee) admitted that her husband died undivided and that she was entitled to claim maintenance at the rate of Rs. 1,500 per mensem until her death. There were other provisions for payment of further sums to the assessee and her daughters and for their residence. In the assessment year 1939-1940, the Income-tax authorities assessed the sum of Rs. 18,000 which the assessee received from the joint family as her maintenance for one year at the rate of Rs. 1,500 per mensem. The assessee claimed exemption under S. 14 (1) of the Income-tax Act on the ground that she received it in her capacity as a member of a joint Hindu family.

Held, that the assessee was still a member of the joint family, though she did not live with the other members of the family and that she received the maintenance amount of Rs. 18,000 as a member of the joint family within the meaning of S. 14 (1) and the amount was therefore exempt from taxation. S. 16 (3) (iii) of the Income-tax Act, as amended in 1937, is not concerned with the date of the transfer; it is concerned with the income arising from the property and chargeable to income-tax for any year commencing on or after the 1st April, 1937. The section is wide enough to apply to income arising from transfers affected before the passing of the amending Act unless the income is chargeable for a year ending before 1st April, 1937. The assessee and his wife were associated with a school in Cawnpore. Two houses in Cawnpore were transferred by purchase from a third party to the assessee's wife by an instrument of transfer dated 27th February, 1922. The purchase price was paid by the assessee. Between 1922 and 1929, the wife started the school and carried it on in a room of the two houses, where the rest of the premises were let out on rent. By a trust deed of 30th September, 1929, executed by the wife, she settled the two houses on trust; she appointed six persons, including her husband, as trustees. She herself was to be a Dharmakarta (trustee) during her life and was to manage the affairs of the trust, while her husband the assessee, was to be her agent for collecting rents, filing suits, etc. For these services the assessee was to be paid out of the income of the trust property Rs. 100 per mensem; a subsequent clause provided that the wife was to be paid Rs. 50 per month. In the assessment year 1937-1938, the Income-tax authorities assessed to income-tax in the hands of the assessee the sum of Rs. 600 (which the wife got under the trust deed at Rs. 50 per mensem) under S. 16 (3) (iii) of the Income tax Act. The assessee claimed that it was salary for employment.

Held, that the amount of Rs. 600 was computable as part of the total income of the assessee (husband) under S. 16 (3) (iii) of the Income tax Act, and liable to tax, and was not salary arising out of employment.

notice under S. 23 (2)—Effect—Failure to produce accounts.

The assessee was assessed for 1934—1935, on 28--5—1935 on a total income of Rs. 4,534. During the assessment for 1935—1936, the income-tax officer found thatthe assessee's income had partially escaped assessment during 1934—35 and issued a notice under S. 34 read with S. 22 (2) of the Income-tax Act. This was served on the assessee on 15—8 -1935. After some adjournments the assessee on 3—1—1936 filed a printed return duly signed and verified but he did not set forth the total income of the previous year 1934—1935. In the space provided for filling in the income from different sources, the assessee wrote "No income escaped assessment. Notice issued is barred by time." In the place meant for showing the total income he entered the word "nil." The Income-tax Officer did not treat this as a proper and valid return and did not issue a notice under S. 23 (2). On 27—1—1936, the assessee was assessed under S. 23 (4) for non-compliance with the notice under S. 34 read with S. 22 (2). It also appeared that a notice under S. 22 (4) was issued to the assessee requiring him to produce his accounts, but they were not produced on the plea that the accounts for the period were stolen.

Held, (1) that in the peculiar circumstances of the case the return submitted by the assessee was a valid return; (2) that in the circumstances a notice under S. 23 (2) was not necessary and the assessment under S. 23 (4) was not illegal as the assessee had failed to produce the accounts; (3) that since some income escaped assessment, S. 34 of the Act applied and a notice was therefore called for. The Income tax Act is a highly technical Act; the Income-tax authorities should, when sending a notice under S. 34 read with S. 22, emphasise the fact that a return duly setting forth the total income is required and a mere reference to the former income would not be treated as valid. He cannot refuse relief on the ground that he is not bound to exclude the income unless he is made aware of the discontinuance of the business, profession or vacation, etc. If the Income-tax Officer has before him material which should have put him on inquiry as to whether the assessee was entitled to relief under S. 25 (3), he is bound to give relief. The word "discontinuance" in S. 25 (3) of the Income-tax Act covers discontinuance either by cessation or by disposal; it is wide enough to include the contingency of a transfer under the amended Act as it exists now. The assessee was carrying on business in coffee, butter, etc., which had been in existence whilst the Income-tax of 1918 was in force. On 1—1—1939, he assigned his business to a limited company, the amended Income-tax Act came into force on 1—4—1939. The assessee who had paid income-tax in respect of his business under the Act of 1918 claimed in the year 1939—1940, that he was entitled to the benefit of S. 25 (3) of the Income-tax, Act as amended in 1939.

Held, (1) that if the income of 1938 was to be deemed to be the income of a period which did not exist and in respect of which no tax was to be charged it was correct to say that the assessee was not liable for any tax; (2) that the word "discontinued" in S. 25 (3) covered a discontinuance by disposal; (3) that the assessee was entitled to the benefit of S. 25 (3) of the Income tax Act as amended in 1939; (4) that no tax was therefore payable by the assessee in respect of his income from his business for the calendar year 1938 liable to assessment in respect of the financial year 1939—1940 (Beaumont, C.J. and Kania, J.) POLSON, In re. I.L.R. ——S. 25-A—Scope and applicability.

S. 25-A of the Income-tax Act contains no warrant for any prohibition against members of undivided Hindu family entering into a partnership in respect of the joint property which they have partitioned among themselves. It has no reference at all to any case in which the Hindu undivided family remains in existence at the time of assessment. No difficulty whatever in the assessment of a Hindu undivided family is caused—or was ever thought to be caused—by the facts that in one year it has certain assets and certain income therefrom and that in the next year it is found to have parted with one asset and to be no longer in receipt of the same income. The same assessee has a different income in each year—that is all. It matters nothing whether the particular asset no longer possessed by the undivided family has become the separate property of a member or belongs to a stranger. S. 25-A is directed to the difficulty which arose when an undivided family had received income in the year of account but was no longer in existence as such at the time of assessment. The difficulty was the more acute by reason of the provision contained in

INCOME-TAX ACT (1922), S. 25-A.

S. 14 (1). S. 25-A deals with the difficulty in two ways which are explained by the rule applicable to families governed by the Mitakshara, that by a mere claim of partition a division of interest may be effected among coparceners so as to disrupt the family and put an end to all rights of succession by survivorship. S. 25-A provides that if it be found that the family property has been partitioned in definite portions, assessment may be made, notwithstanding S. 14 (1), on each individual or group in respect of his or its share of the profits made by the undivided family, while holding all the members jointly and severally liable for the total tax. If, however, though the joint Hindu family has come to an end it be found that its property has not been partitioned in definite portions then the family is to be deemed to continue—that is to be an existent Hindu family upon which assessment can be made on its gains of the previous year. The pre-requisites of a successful application under S. 26-A of the Income-tax Act are the existence of a firm and an instrument of partnership. The firm further must have been constituted under an instrument of partnership. There must therefore be a firm constituted under an instrument of partnership before an application under S. 26-A can succeed. The sharing of profits alone will not obviously result in a partnership; there must be an agreement between the persons concerned. There can be no agreement of partnership between a person and minors represented by that person as their guardian for purposes of S. 26-A. He cannot be allowed to have the dual capacity of entering into such relationship, that is, for himself and as guardian of the minors. R. 2 of the Income-tax Rules framed under S. 26-A of the Income-tax Act is not ultra vires. Where on the death of a partner his widow is taken in as a partner and his minor children, three sons and three daughters, are admitted to the benefits of the partnership as a body and not as individuals, and an application is made under S. 26-A of the Act for registration of the new firm, stating that the widow is entitled to a six annas share, though under the deed her share is really only two annas, the remaining four annas being intended for the benefit of the minor children who are admitted to the benefits of the partnership in a body, it cannot be said that the shares of the minors are specified with certainty so as to comply with S. 26-A of the Act. ——S. 27—Sufficient "cause"—What amounts to—Question as to—If one of law—S. 66 and 66 (3).

It is clear that in the majority of cases the question whether the assessee was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing or from complying with the terms of a notice issued under the Act would be a question of fact; in some cases it is possible to say that if the reasons issued is an illegal notice or an invalid notice, the assessee can very well refuse to comply with that notice and can subsequently say that he was prevented by sufficient cause from complying with the notice. The assessee was served with a notice under S. 22 (2) and filed a return. The case was subsequently transferred to another Income-tax Officer who issued a second notice under S. 22 (2), and a return was filed before him. The case was again re-transferred to the Income-tax Officer who originally dealt with the case, and he started proceedings on the return which was filed before him and which had been subsequently filed before the officer to whom it was transferred. The assessee did not raise any objection to the effect that a fresh notice should have been issued to him under S 22 (2) after the re-transfer, and he was assessed under S 23 (a).

Held, that the assessee had not "sufficient cause" within the meaning of S. 27 of the Act, that he was not prejudiced in any way, and he could not call in question the validity of the proceedings on the ground of the absence of a fresh notice after the re transfer. No question of law arose in the case under S. 66 (2).

Although a Commissioner of Income-tax has no option but to obey departmental orders of the Central Board of Revenue, it cannot be said that his discretion under S. 33 of the Income-tax Act can be "legally" controlled by the Central Board of Revenue, because the discretion is vested in him by statute and there is no statutory control of such discretion. An assessee desired to appeal to the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal against an order of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner, dated the 24th November, 1940. The Income-tax Appellate Tribunal was constituted as from the 25th January, 1941, by notification published in the Gazette of India of that date. S. 33 of the Income-tax Act as now amended requires that an appeal to the Appellate Tribunal shall be presented within sixty days from the date on which the appellant was served with the notice of the order. Rules regulating procedure had not been framed and were not in fact notified until the 1st February, 1941. Rule 14 of the Rules provides that an appeal to the Tribunal shall be presented in person or by a representative to the Registrar at New Delhi or some other officer authorised in this behalf by the Registrar and a proviso follows to the effect that an appeal which is received in the office of the Registrar by post within the prescribed period of limitation shall be deemed to have been validly presented. Forms indicating the location of the office of the Tribunal were published on the 25th January, 1941, in New Delhi and therefore were not available to the appellant who was in a village in the Ramnad District. Having no information with regard to the procedure the assessee drafted a petition of appeal and posted it to the office of the Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras, with the request that it should be forwarded to the Tribunal. The petition was received by the Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras, on the 31st January, 1941 and posted by him to the Tribunal three days later, which was still in time. The period of sixty days expired on the 2nd February. That day being a Sunday the period was extended to 3rd February. The petition was received in the office of the Tribunal only on the 10th February. The Tribunal held that the petition was barred by limitation. On the reference, held, (i) The appeal was filed within the period of limitation in the only office which was then open to the assessee and in the circumstances the appeal should have been heard on its merits. (ii) There is nothing in the Income-tax Act which would entitle the assessee to a refund of the deposit of Rs. 100 if the plea of limitation raised by the Income-tax authorities were sound. ——S. 54—Scope and effect of—Prohibition against production of documents—If absolute and extends to officers other than income-tax officers—Documents seized by police officer—Admissibility in evidence.

S. 54 of the Income tax Act does not in so many words say that the public officer is prohibited from producing any such document as is specified, but as the production is made punishable as an offence, there is an implied prohibition against its production by a public servant. There is nothing in S. 54 to justify the extreme view that all the documents referred to in that section are made inadmissible in evidence. The section provides, first of all, that the documents specified shall be treated as confidential, and, secondly that no Court shall require a public servant to produce them. The Legislature only meant that they are to be treated as confidential by the income-tax authorities and not that the documents are confidential in whosoever's hands they may be. The main operative part of the section is that the Court cannot require any public servant to produce these documents. There is no justification for extending the operation of the words beyond their natural and proper meaning. If a document can be given in evidence, without requiring a public servant to produce it, there is nothing in the section to preclude that from being done. There is nothing to prevent a police officer from producing a document lawfully seized from the income-tax authorities which those authorities themselves would not be able to produce. The assessee, a contractor for the supply of materials to Government departments, maintained a workshop for that purpose at Cawnpore and payments in respect of these contracts were made to him generally through the Indian Stores Department of the Government of India. In 1936 the Income-tax Officer, Delhi, got information from the Income-tax Officer, Nagpur, that the assessee whose address was given as being in Delhi, had received a commission of Rs. 6,168-12-3 during the year ending 31—3—1935 from a Mill at Nagpur for goods supplied on his account to the Indian stores department. After some inquiries, the Income-tax Officer, Delhi, issued a notice to the assessee on 23—1—1937 under S. 34 read with S. 22 (2) of the Income tax Act, asking him to file a return in the prescribed form of his income from all sources liable to assessment in 1935-36. The assessee on 17—2—1937, replied stating that he was being already assessed by the Income-tax Officer of Cawnpore where he had a factory. The Income-tax Officer, Delhi, thereupon transferred the file of the assessee to the Income-tax Officer, Cawnpore for necessary action in respect of 1935-36. The latter, on receipt of the file, found that no return had been filed by the assessee in compliance with the notice under S. 33 read with S. 22 (2) dated 23—1—1937, issued by the Income-tax Officer, Delhi, and asked the assessee by a notice under S. 22 (4) to produce all his books of account, and on default, made an assessment under S. 23 (4).

Held, (1) that the Income-tax Officer, Delhi, had jurisdiction to issue a notice to the assessee under S. 34 read with S. 22 (2) for assessing his income for the year, 1935—1936; (2) that the transfer of the file of the assessee by the Income-tax Officer, Delhi, to the Income-tax Officer, Cawnpore, was in accordance with law; and (3) that the assessment made by the Income-tax Officer, Cawnpore, under S. 23 (4), on the basis of the notice issued by the Delhi Officer, without a fresh notice by himself under S. 34/22 (2) was in law, a valid assessment. The combined effect of S. 64 (1) and (4) of the Income-tax Act is that where two or more Income tax Officers have territorial jurisdiction in respect of the same income, they exercise concurrent jurisdiction in the matter of issuing notices to the assessee, and where notices have been issued by one officer it is unnecessary for the other officer to issue the same notices again after the case has been transferred to him by the former.

——S. 66 (2), first proviso—Scope and effect of—Right of assessee to ask for reference—Order of Commissioner confirming order of Assistant Commissioner—If "prejudicial" to assessee.

It is clear from the first proviso to S. 66 (2) of the Income-tax Act that the assessee will have a right to ask for the opinion of the High Court only upon a question of law which arises out of that order itself but not on a question of law which arises out of a previous order under S. 31. A question of law which is common to both the Assistant Commissioner's and Commissioner's order is not a proper subject-matter of a reference unless the question of law is raised on a reference from the decision of the Assistant Commissioner.

Quaere: Whether an order passed by the Commissioner under S. 33 which merely affirms the order passed by the subordinate Income-tax authorities is an order otherwise prejudicial to the assessee. ——S. 66 (3)—Costs—Application dismissed with costs—Right of applicant to claim that costs should come out of deposit of Rs. 100 under S. 66 (2).

When an application under S. 66 (3) of the Income-tax Act is dismissed as having no substance in it, the applicant is not entitled to ask that the costs of the reference which he is ordered to bear must come out of the deposit of Rs. 100 made by him under S. 66 (2). ——S. 66 (3)—Deposit under S. 66 (2) withdrawn by assessee—Application under S. 66 (3)—Competency.

Under the second proviso in S. 66 (2) of the Income-tax Act it is clear that a refund of the fee of Rs. 100 will only be made if the application is withdrawn, and when the assessee applies for refund of the money, the only logical inference is that he intends to withdraw his application. Where an applicant has withdrawn his deposit of Rs. 100, it must be held that an application under S. 66 (3) is incompetent. ——S. 66 (3)—Ground for application under—Refusal to review order permitting withdrawal of application under S. 66 (2).

The only ground upon which an application under S. 66 (3) of the Income-tax Act lies is where the Commissioner refuses to state a case on the ground that no question of law arose. But where the Commissioner only dismisses an application in effect for the review of a prior order of his permitting the applicant to with draw his application under S. 66 (2) of the Act, it is not a refusal to state a case as contemplated by Cl. (3) of S. 66 and as such an application under that clause would be incompetent. ——S. 66 (3) and (5)—Powers of High Court—Power to direct reference on question which the Commissioner was not asked to refer—Finding of fact—Conclusive character of.

The jurisdiction of the High Court in income-tax matters is very limited. The High Court can call upon the Commissioner under S. 66 (3) of the Income-tax Act to state a case upon a particular question if the latter has refused to do. But where the Commissioner has never been asked to state a case upon any question and has not refused to do so, the High Court cannot call upon him to state such a case. Where there is no question before the High Court relating to a particular point, the High Court has no power to deal with that point; it can only deal with the question which was framed upon which the case has been stated. The High Court is bound by the findings of the Income-tax authorities on questions of fact, viz., whether there was any loss in business during a particular period. The question whether the assessee had another set of account books, than those produced before the Income-tax Officer, which he did not produce before the Income-tax Officer is a pure question of fact, and no case can be referred to the High Court under S. 66 (3) of the the Income-tax Act. The matter is pre-eminently one within the discretion of the Income-tax Officer. (Collister and Bajpai, JJ.) RAHOMAL KANNAMAL v. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME-TAX, U. P. 1942 I.T.R. 386.

The presumption that a remittance made to an assessee in British India from his foreign business is a remittance out of foreign profits is rebuttable. But whether the evidence on record is sufficient to rebut that presumption is a question of fact and not of law. The High Court will not therefore direct the Income-tax Commissioner under S. 66 (3) of the Income-tax Act to make a reference or to state a case on such question. ——S. 66 (3)—Question of law—Question of estoppel—Discretion of High Court—Order for reference—When to be made.

Although a question of estoppel may be said to be a question of law, yet when it is a point of law to which the answers appear to be quite evident, the High Court would properly exercise the discretion granted to it under S. 66 (3) of the Income-tax Act, by declining to direct the Commissioner to make a reference on the point. B was a partner in a firm H. B. with a share of nine annas in the rupee and this firm was registered by the Income-tax Officer on an application for registration. The partners were, however, ordered to be separately assessed, when investigating the case of B, the Income-tax Officer found that although B was a partner in the firm H. B., he was so by reason of his utilization of capital belonging to the joint family of which B was a member, The Income-tax Officer did not therefore assess B but assessed the joint Hindu family of which B was a member on the shares of profits received in the business of H.B. It was contended that by registering the firm of H. B., the Income-tax authorities were estopped from any further inquiry into the identity of the persons who actually received the profits in the share of B or from taxing the joint family which actually received the profits of the firm.

Held, that the answer to the point of law suggested was so evident that the High Court should decline to direct a reference on it. (Davis, C.J. and Weston, J.) KIRPALDAS MOTANDAS v. COMMISSIONER OF INCOME-TAX, BOMBAY. I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 541=(1942) I.T.R. 505=A.I.R. 1943 Sind 64.

——S. 66 (3)—Question of law—Receipt for foreign remittance—Presumption—Rebuttal—Assessee producing no evidence—Effect—Reference—Order for—If can be made.

Although the income of each year has to be considered separately when assessing an assessee for a particular year, the Income-tax Officers are entitled to take note of properties or businesses which the assessments of previous years show have been owned by the assessee and which have furnished him with income on which tax has previously been assessed. There is no obligation on the Income-tax authorities to trace with meticulous accuracy a remittance of foreign income, found proved to have been received, to its precise source. Where the assessee produces no evidence there could be no question of any rebuttal by the assessee of the presumption that a receipt of a sum of money is income and not a capital receipt. The question whether in such circumstances the assessee has not rebutted the presumption is not a question of law which can be made the subject of a reference under S. 66 (3) of the Income-tax Act. ———Life Policy—Untrue statement made by assured in proposal—Insurer's right to avoid policy—Waiver of such right—What constitutes.

According to a term of a policy of life insurance, the proposal and declaration made by the assured were to form the basis of the policy and any untrue statement wilfully made in the proposal was to render the policy void and of no effect. The assured wilfully made an untrue statement in the proposal that no proposal for an insurance on his life had ever been declined by any Insurance Company. It was argued on behalf of the representatives of the assured that the insurer had, at the time the policy was issued, the knowledge or, at any rate the means of knowledge that the assured had made the untrue statement in question, and since in spite of that the insurer went on accepting the premiums till the time the assured died it must be taken to have waived its right to avoid the policy.

Held, that if the plea of waiver was to succeed in the case it must be shown that the premiums were taken intentionally with knowledge of the untrue statement in the proposal and that mere possession of the means of knowledge would not be sufficient to constitute waiver by the insurer. INSURANCE ACT (IV OF 1938) S. 9—Order for refund in respect of discontinued business—Condition precedent.

———Ss. 9 and 7—Insurer carrying on combined business depositing only portion of amount—Right to obtain refund on discontinuing one class of business.

It is not necessary that an insurer should deposit the full amount as is required under S. 7 (1) of the Insurance Act before he can present an application for refund under S. 9 of the Act in respect of a certain class of insurance business that has been discontinued by him. Under S. 7 (1) of the Act, the amount to be deposited by an insurer is rupees two lacs, if the business carried on by him is purely life insurance business. If on the other hand, miscellaneous insurance business is combined by him with life insurance, the deposit is increased to rupees three lacs, out of which rupees two lacs should be regarded as deposit for life insurance business. Under sub-S. (3) of the section the insurer has the right to deposit this amount in certain instalments. As the entire deposit of rupees three lacs as required under S. 7 (1) is to be divided into two parts the instalments permitted under sub-S. (3) are susceptible of similar division and it would be quite proper to allocate one-third of such instalments to the miscellaneous insurance business and the remaining two-thirds to the Life Insurance. If the insurer discontinues the former class of business, he can under S. 9 of the Act obtain refund of so much of the instalments of deposit as do not relate to the life insurance which he continues to carry on. It would be extremely unreasonable to hold that although he has discontinued one class of business, he will still be bound to make deposits in respect of both classes of business and unless and until the full amount is deposited no separation of funds is permissible. If any doubt arises from the terms employed by the Legislature, it has always been held a safe means of collecting the intention to call in aid the ground and cause of making the statute, and to have recourse to the preamble. But it is very doubtful whether a preamble retrospectively inserted in 1940 in an Act passed 25 years before can be looked at by the Court for the purpose of discovering what the true intention of the Legislature was at the earlier date. ———Tank irrigating lands from time immemorial—Lands remaining submerged for several weeks in the year when tank reached full capacity—Tenants of such lands putting up bunds to prevent submersion—Right of ayacutdars to restrain putting up of bunds.

Where as the result of the construction of a tank generations ago, the ryots of the ayacut have become entitled to have their lands irrigated from it, any one who interferes with their customary supply of water interferes with rights recognised by law and is therefore subject to the injunction of the Court. The appellants were tenants of lands which from time immemorial had been submerged for several weeks in the year after the tank had filled as the result of the rains. The appellants had accepted tenancies knowing that the lands would be completely submerged for part of the year. The appellants erected bunds to prevent submersion, which caused some of the water in the tank to escape over the weir and lessened the supply which the ryots in the ayacut, including the respondents, were accustomed to receive. It was found that the respondents suffered material diminution in their customary supply of water in consequence of the action of the appellants.

Held, that since it could not be denied that if the appellant were allowed to prevent the tank reaching its full capacity during the rains, the respondents and other ryots in the ayacut would suffer because the water which would otherwise spread over the appellant's lands would be forced over the weir and lost so far as the ayacut was concerned, the action of the appellants in reality amounted to interference with the bed of the tank and the respondents were therefore entitled to restrain the appellants from interfering with the spread of the water in the tank and to a mandatory injunction requiring the appellants to remove the bunds they had erected. The plea that the appellants in erecting these bunds were merely protecting their own property could not be accepted. Where the mortgagor himself is in possession at the time of the execution of the mortgage-deed, his right to possession determines as soon as he executes the mortgage-deed under the terms of which he says that possession has been given to the mortgagee though, as a matter of fact, actual possession has not been delivered. In the absence of an agreement to the contrary, a mortgagee is entitled to possession (as against the mortgagor) immediately upon the execution of the mortgage-deed although the deed is not registered, and time will, therefore, run from the date of the execution of the deed and not from the date of its registration. Having regard to the provisions of the article, the Court has no necessity to consider the question as to whether or not there has been a valid transfer made by the mortgagor. The mortgage may not be enforcible on account of the non-registration of the deed for some time but that has absolutely nothing to do with the point in issue. The function of the Court in awarding compensation under the Land Acquisition Act is to ascertain the market value of the land at date of the notification under S. 4 (1). The number of years' purchase which should be adopted in a given case must vary with individual cases and must be decided upon the material placed before the Court. Where definite material is not forthcoming either in the shape of sales of neighbouring land at or about the date of the notification or otherwise and the Court can only proceed to do the best it can under the circumstance. In a land acquisition proceeding the owner of the land acquired is entitled to rely on a sale deed relating to land in the vicinity of his land executed a day after the notification in the Gazette, when it is proved that the deed was executed in pursuance of an agreement entered into before the notification and that earnest money was paid by the vendee in pursuance of the agreement to sell. Such a deed is not only relevant but is good evidence of the market value of the land on the date on which the notification was issued. interest in the land sought to be acquired (he being a lessee under a lease from Government for 99 years), together with the prospect of having the land converted into a ryotwari tenure at the end of the period of the lease, and there is no reason to believe that the Government would not grant the lessee a ryotwari tenure at the end of his period or during it if he applied therefor, the market value of his interest, for the purpose of assessing compensation should be based on all the rights which the lessee has and on his potential rights. If the holding of the land under a ryotwari tenure had a value that value must increase the market value of the lessee's interest and that factor must therefore be considered in fixing the value of the lessee's right in the land. ——S. 23—Market value—Meaning of.

The market value referred to in S. 23 of the Land Acquisition Act means the market value of the concrete piece of land to which the notification under S. 4 of the Act applies and not separate interests in it. The normal method is to take the market value of the land and then to apportion that amongst the different interests; but the Act does not lay down any hard and fast rule and in special cases it may be desirable to adopt a different method by valuing separately each interest in the land. ——S. 23—Scope—If exhaustive—Power of Court to take into consideration matters not enumerated—Land subject to easement or restrictive covenants—Procedure.

S. 23 of the Land Acquisition Act is not exhaustive. It does not direct that no other matters than those specified in the section may be taken into account. In special cases the Court may take other matters into consideration. If the owner of an easement claims compensation for the acquisition of the easement, he is clearly entitled to compensation under the Act and the compensation is the value of the easement to him. If it happens that the easement is of no great value, then Government may acquire both the servient tenement and the easement at a price which is less than the market value of the land free from the easement. The value of the whole is greater than the combined value of the parts, and the increased value arising from the union of interests necessarily belongs to Government in whose hands the union takes place. Easements or restrictive covenants must prejudicially affect the value of the land, and it is impossible to say that the existence of those covenants though they may be of no benefit to the person entitled to enforce them, depreciates the land by only a nominal sum. There is nothing in the Act to suggest that any person interested is to be paid for anything except the interest which he possesses. (*Beaumont C. ——S. 27—Costs—Principle governing—Refusal on sentimental grounds—Legality.

A claimant for compensation in a land acquisition matter is in the position of a plaintiff who has instituted a suit to recover a sum of money and when it is found that he is not ntitled to success under the provisions of the law relating to the subject, there is no ground upon which the tribunal hearing the claim could deprive the opposite party, the Secretary of State, of the costs to which he would be entitled under the ordinary provisions of the law. There is no justification for refusing such costs on sentimental grounds. (Verma and Yorke, JJ.) DEBI DIN v. SECRETARY OF STATE. 200 I.C. 634=15 R.A. 20=1942 O.W.N 131=1942 A.W R. ——S. 30—Order of Land Acquisition Officer directing claimant to approach Civil Court to get compensation money—If amounts to reference to District Judge.

An order of the Land Acquisition Officer directing a claimant to approach the Civil Court within a fixed period to get the compensation money or share in it does not amount to a reference to the District Judge and hence the District Judge has no jurisdiction to entertain an application for compensation by the claimant. No appeal also lies from an order of the District Judge rejecting that application. (Almond, J.C. and Mahomed Ibrahim, J.) SIKANDER SHAH v. CHAN BIBI. 202 I.C. 155=15 R. In the case of a reference by the Collector under S. 30 a "person interested" within the meaning of S. 3 (b) of the Act can apply to the Court to be joined as a party to the reference made by the Collector, although his name does not appear in the reference made, provided the question raised by him is in essence the dispute referred. ——S 31—Proper mode of apportionment—Landlord and tenants.

The proper procedure in every case of apportionment of compensation is, first to determine the market value of the land and then to apportion that among the various persons interested, having regard to the interest each possesses. The landlord is to be paid 1/4 of the sum ascertained as market value and the 3/4 has to be paid to the tenant. (Bose J.) SADASHEORAO KRISHNA RAO BUTI v. COLLECTOR, NAGPUR. I.L. R. ———Contract of tenancy—Stipulation to pay fee on transfer—Validity—Such stipulation binding on representatives of parties also—Mortgage by conditional sale executed by transferee from tenant—Mortgagee obtaining decree for foreclosure—If liable to pay transfer fee.

A kabuliyat contained a stipulation that if the tenant made a gift or sale or otherwise transferred the lands, he and the transferee would be bound to pay to the landlord as chouth one-fourth of the price, and if that was not paid the transfer would not be valid and the landlord would be entitled to take Khas possession of the lands. A clause in the Kabuliyat laid down that all its terms and incidents would hold good as between the parties themselves and their respective heirs, successors and representatives.

Held, (1) that the stipulation was perfectly valid and legal and was binding on all persons deriving title through or from any of the original parties; (2) that a mortgage by conditional sale executed by a transferee from the tenant, followed by a decree for foreclosure obtained by the mortgagee and the taking of possession thereunder by him, constituted such a transfer as was contemplated by the Kabuliyat, and the mortgagee could not escape liability for payment of the chouth which accrued on the date the foreclosure decree was made. But unless the tenant has acquired by grant or by adverse possession a right of ownership in the subsoil, the digging of earth for making bricks to be taken away from the area of the tenure and to be disposed of to stranger is an appropriation of the corpus of the grant which a tenant in India is not entitled to make. ———Lessee erecting permanent structure—Knowledge of landlord—Acquiescence—Test—Acquiescence while erection in progress and submission after erection—Distinction—Relative effect.

Mere erection by the tenant of a permanent structure upon the land let to him within the knowledge of the lessor would not be sufficient to raise an equitable estoppel against lessor precluding him from suing for ejectment. The principle underlying the above statement is that when a party pleading acquiescence is himself aware of his limited rights it is not enough for him to show abstinence from interference by the lessor but that he should snow something more, viz., that by implication the lessor granted the superior right claimed by the lessee. In order to create an estoppel there must be a duty owing by the person estopped to speak or to act which he has failed to perform. There is a distinction between acquiescence in an act which is still in progress and submission to it when it has been completed. In the first case it may operate as an estoppel if it could have induced action infringing a right. In the second case, submission could not change the past. An inference of permanent tenancy can be drawn only where the facts proved point irresistably to such a conclusion; where the facts are equally consistent with permanency or a tenancy at will, then permanency cannot be inferred. Where the facts found are (1) that the original tenant (a non-agriculturist) took a settlement of the land for building purposes about 45 years ago, built a pucca house upon it, and remained in possession till his death, and was succeeded by his widow who continued to live in the house built by her husband till it fell down and then in 1930 sold the land to one G., the ancestor of the present tenants, (2) that the rent was five annas six pies per annum which was the rent paid both by the original tenant and his widow after him, (3) that the possession of the original tenant and his widow extended to about 35 years and the ejectment suit was brought in the year 1935 and there was no registered lease,

Held, that the facts found were quite insufficient in the case of the tenancy admittedly created after the T. P. There may be several tenants of a particular holding, but if they allow the holding to be represented by one of themselves in the landlord's sharista, the landlord would be entitled to bring a suit for rent only against that tenant who represents the holding, and the decree obtained by him in such a suit would be a rent decree and not a money decree. Where the father in a joint Hindu family of himself and his sons is alone recorded in the landlord's sharista as the tenant of a holding belonging to the family, if a suit is brought against him and his sons but a decree is passed against him alone as karta of the family, the decree must be held to be a rent decree and not a money decree, although the suit as against the sons is dismissed on the ground that they are not necessary parties to the suit. P. Code, O. 21, Rr. 58 and 100—Failure to object—Effect.*

Five annas share in a Tauzi was recorded in Register D. in the names of three idols through M and J, who were respectively the mutawali (manager) and shebait of the idols. The applicant having obtained a decree in the Civil Court against the two sons of M, put up 3 as 15 gandas share in the property for sale and purchased the same himself in the execution sale. Neither the idols nor the shebait were made parties to the suit. The sale certificate recited that the debottar character of the property was a farzi (benami) transaction, but there was no finding to this effect by the Civil Court. The applicant's application for registration of the property in his name was rejected by the Land Registration Deputy Collector on the ground that his purchase and dakhal-dehani had no effect against the recorded proprietor, the idols. The applicant pleaded that it was clearly stated in the execution proceedings that the entry in Register D. was collusive and benami and that the shebait should have objected under O. 21, Rr. 58 and 100. The applicant did not receive any rent since he got delivery of possession after purchase.

Held, (1) that the allegation of farzi in the execution proceeding was nothing more than a statement by a party and could not bind the idols; (2) that Rr. 58 and 100 of O. 21, C. P. Code, were not relevant, as they merely provided an optional remedy in case of dispossession, and there having been no dispossession in the case, the rules did not apply at all; (3) and therefore the applicant was not entitled to have his name registered. Except for the brief period between 1865 and 1867, when only 360 permanent settlement of Noabad lands were made, Noabad lands had been settled temporarily in Chittagong. Three things are apparent from the revenue history of Noabad lands of Chittagong, namely, (1) that the settlements were not proprietary ones, (2) that the settlements were temporary—for terms of years, and (3) that the settlement-holder had no right to those portions of land which had not been brought under cultivation by him within the period of his settlement. Between 1842 and 1848 and between 1875 and 1882 settlements were made for terms of years which were to expire by 1898. LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT (1879), S. 12.

It is difficult to lay down any hard and fast rule as to what expressions a lawyer can use with impunity while addressing the Court and what should ordinarily be tolerated by it. Hyper-sensitiveness on the one side or rudeness on the other must be avoided at all costs. An over-subservient Bar would be one of the greatest misfortunes that could happen to the administration of justice. At the same time, a lawyer is under obligation to do nothing that shall detract from the dignity of the Court, of which he is himself a sworn officer and assistant. He should at all times pay deferential respect to the judge, and scrupulously observe the decorum of the Court room. ——S. 12—Disciplinary action under—Power of High Court—Conviction under Defence of India Rules

In order to see whether disciplinary action under S. 12 of the Legal Practitioners Act should be taken against a pleader who has been convicted under R. 38 read with R. 34 (6) (e) of the Defence of India Rules, 1939 the Court must not merely accept the fact that he has been convicted but must consider the material upon which he has been convicted. Where the speech for which he has been convicted incites others to break the law which it is the duty of the Courts to administer, and to do acts tending to subvert order, the Court is entitled to take disciplinary action against him. ——S. 13—Letters addressed by pleader to Governor of the province relating to orders passed by a District Munsiff and making false accusations against him—"Misconduct".

A first grade pleader practising at Markapur wrote a letter as "the leader of the Bar at Markapur" to the Governor of Madras in which he accused the local District Munsiff of being a sympathiser with the satyagraha movement and that on a particular day he granted an application of an advocate for adjournment of a case made on the ground that he desired to go to another town to see a friend offering satyagraha. It was found on inquiry that the statements were false and that the action of the pleader in making the communication was the result of animosity towards the District Munsiff.

Held, as the letter related to orders passed by the District Munsiff and the accusations were made by the pleader as the "leader of the local Bar" it was idle for him to suggest that his misconduct should be regarded as being entirely dissociated from his status as a legal practitioner. In the circumstances, there was "reasonable cause" for taking disciplinary action against him. A pleader in India, like an Advocate, combines the functions of the solicitor and the Barrister in England. As he fulfils both roles he is subject to the disabilities of both. It would be manifestly improper for him to advance money to a client for the purpose of a litigation in which he is engaged. The safe rule to lay down is that a pleader or an advocate should not lend money to his client at any time for the purpose of an action in which he is engaged. (*Leach, C.J. ———(Calcutta) Cl. 12—Jurisdiction and discretion of High Court—Suit by wife for declaration of dissolution of Christian marriage—Wife embracing Islam—Parties not domiciled in India—Husband a non-resident foreigner—Specific Relief Act, S. 42.

Per Derbyshire, C.J., and Ameer Ali, J.—Where the parties to a marriage are not domiciled in India and the husband is a non-resident foreigner, the High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit brought by the wife under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent for a declaration under S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act that her Christian marriage with the defendant has been dissolved as a result of her conversion to Islam and the refusal of the defendant to embrace Islam when presented to him.

Per Derbyshire, C.J.—Even the submission of the defendant to the jurisdiction of the Court will not avail the plaintiff.

Per Ameer Ali, J.—The decision as to the want of jurisdiction of the High Court is subject to the following reservations :—(1) It does not affect the jurisdiction of that Court in the ordinary case—a case not of status—where a part of the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction and leave has been granted. (2) The High Court has general power to grant declaration of a matrimonial character in cases of non-Christian marriages. (3) The question of cause or ground for divorce should be distinguished from the question of jurisdiction. The English Courts do appear to recognise a decree of a foreign Court, with jurisdiction made upon a ground not recognised by English law. (4) The English Courts might recognise as good for India a divorce granted in India, without jurisdiction according to English principles, but where the Indian Courts have assumed jurisdiction.

Per Nasim Ali, J.—As there is no statute law by which the Courts in India are bound to acknowledge the validity of divorce according to the religious law of the plaintiff who is not domiciled in India and as the defendant is a non-resident foreigner who has not submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the Court, the declaration sought for by the plaintiff will not put a stop to the dispute between the parties and it is, therefore, not a fit case in which the Court in its discretion should pass a decree under S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act that the marriage of the plaintiff with the defendant has dissolved. Obiter.—A Judge having an application praying for leave to file an appeal under S. 15 of Letters Patent has no jurisdiction to entertain an application for the extension of the period of limitation under S. 5 of the Limitation Act for filing the appeal. That would be a matter for the Division Bench that may be constituted by the Chief Justice for the purpose of hearing Letters Patent Appeals and if there is no such Bench, it will be for the Chief Justice to constitute a Division Bench to deal with the application for extension of time. LIFE ESTATE—Duty of life-tenant—Protection of property—Right of remainderman.

A life-tenant has the right to possess and enjoy the property. He has a duty to preserve the property in such a manner that it may be taken over after his death by the remainderman. If there is a breach of this duty, or facts are established which will lead the Court to say that there is a reasonable apprehension on the part of the remainderman that this duty which the life-tenant owes will not be performed by him, the remainderman is entitled to ask the Court to protect his right by making suitable orders for the protection and preservation of the property during the lifetime of the life-tenant. It is a fundamental principle that the remainderman is entitled to have suitable orders from the Court, for the preservation of the property from negligence, misdeeds or fraudulent designs of the life-tenant. LIMITATION ACT (1908), S. 2.

Under the Limitation Act of 1859 the limitation for a suit by a reversioner who succeeded to the property was 'the period of 12 years from the time when the cause of action arises.' "In the case of a suit for possession by a reversionary heir after the death of the widow, who takes by inheritance from her husband, and is dispossessed, the period of limitation as against the reversioner, in the absence of fraud, is not to be reckoned from the time when he succeeds to the estate but from the time at which it would have been reckoned against the widow if she had lived and brought the suit." ———S. 4 and General Clauses Act (1897), S. 10—General principle underlying—Scope and effect of the sections.

(Per Dar, J.)—S. 4 of the Limitation Act and S. 10 of the General Clauses Act give expression to the general principle of law enunciated by the maxims Lex non cogit ad impossibilia—the law does not compel a man to do that which he cannot possibly perform, and Actus curiae neminem gravabit—an act of the Court shall prejudice no man. These sections do not in any way extend the period of limitation, nor do they furnish any data for computation of time, they merely embody a rule of elementary justice that if the time allowed by statute to do an act or to take a proceeding expires on a day when the court is closed; it may be done on the next sitting of the court. ———S. 4—Scope and effect—Limitation for application to set aside award expiring on Sunday—Such application made on following day—Judgment pronounced on award earlier on same day—Effect of—Arbitration Act, S. 17.

After filing an award in Court, the respondent served notice on the petitioner on 21st November, 1941 and obtained judgment in terms of the award under S. 17 of the Arbitration Act on 22nd December, 1941. Later on the same day the petitioner presented an application to set aside the award. The last day of the period prescribed by Art. 158 of the Limitation Act for making such an application, viz., 21st December, 1941, being a Sunday was a day on which the Court was closed.

Held, that S. 4 of the Limitation Act did not extend the period in cases where the last date of the period was a day on which the Court was closed, but only gave to the party concerned the right to make the application on the day that the Court reopened, although the period had in fact expired and that, therefore, the privilege which that section conferred upon the petitioner did not prejudice the right of the respondent to obtain judgment in terms of the award on the expiry of thirty days from the date of the service of the notice and that consequently, the Court had jurisdiction to pronounce judgment in terms of the award on 22nd December, 1941. ——Ss. 6 and 19—Scope and combined effect of—Acknowledgment of debt during plaintiff's minority—If extends period of limitation up to three years after plaintiff's becoming major.

The cause of action for a suit arose in June, 1926, at which date the defendant owed money to the plaintiff's father. The latter died on 10—9—1927, the plaintiff being a minor. On 30—9—1927, the defendant wrote a letter to the plaintiff's guardian, acknowledging his liability for the debt. In 1935, the plaintiff brought a suit for the debt. It was pleaded that the suit was barred by limitation.

Held, that S. 6 read with S. 19 of the Limitation Act had the effect of extending the period of limitation; the right to sue accrued to the plaintiff on the death of his father when he was a minor; and the time from which the period of limitation had to be reckoned was the time at which the right to sue accrued to the plaintiff and not the time when the right to sue arose at the date of the original cause of action. When there is an acknowledgment which is valid under S. 19 of the Limitation Act to save limitation in the ordinary course, the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned must be taken to be the date of the acknowledgment and not the date of the cause of action. S. 19 in effect does provide a new rule of limitation and not merely a new starting point for the calculation of the period. (Macklin, J.) SHANTARAM SHANKAR v. CHINTAMANRAO BHALCHANDRA. I.L.R. ——S. 7—Applicability—Final decree in mortgage suit in favour of Hindu brothers—Some decree-holders minors represented by eldest brother as next friend—Limitation for execution—If saved.

In a suit on a mortgage a preliminary decree was passed on 11—12—1928. An appeal from that was dismissed by the High Court and the decree of the original Court was confirmed on 11—11—1932. In the meanwhile a final decree was passed on 19—8—1932 by the trial Court, but before that the original plaintiff, a Hindu had died and in his place, his four sons, two majors and two minors, were brought on the record as his legal representatives, and the final decree was in favour of all of them, the minors being represented by the eldest son as next friend. An execution petition was presented on 12—8—1935, but it was returned for remedying some defects, which were never properly remedied, and was therefore rejected. The decree-holders then filed another execution petition on 20—11—1938 and it was urged that the execution petition filed more than three years after the date of the High Court decree was not barred by limitation because two of the decree-holders were minors and their next friend could not give a discharge under S. 7 of the Limitation Act.

Held, that as under O. 32, R. 6, C. P. Code, the next friend was not competent to give a discharge in respect of the decree, limitation for execution was saved under S. 7 of the Limitation Act. ——S. 7—Hindu Joint family—Decree obtained by manager in suit brought in name of joint family firm on behalf of himself and as next friend of minor—Power of manager to give discharge—Execution application by him dismissed as time-barred—Subsequent application by minor on attaining majority—If barred—Rule of res judicata—C. P. Code, O. 32, R. 6.

If a manager of a joint Hindu family consisting of himself and his minor brother obtains a decree in a suit brought by him in the name of the joint family firm on his own behalf and as next friend of the minor, he can not lawfully receive any money which may be jointly due to them under the decree without the leave of the Court in view of the prohibition contained in O. 32, R. 6, C. P. Code, and he is consequently not in a position to give a valid discharge for the decretal debt without first obtaining such leave. The prohibition is not removed merely because the decree is passed in the name of the firm without further mention of the minor. Consequently if an application for execution of the decree filed by the manager is dismissed as barred by limitation, a subsequent application for execution filed by the minor within three years after attaining majority is not barred either by reason of S. 7 of the Limitation Act or by the principle of res judicata. When the leave of the Court is necessary for the manager to receive the decretal money on behalf of the minor, it is not possible to regard an execution proceeding filed by him as a representative proceeding of such a character as to determine finally the interests of the minor by the rule of constructive res judicata, although when proceedings have simply been brought in the name of a firm without any disclosure of the fact being made that there are minor members there may be good reasons for regarding execution proceedings brought by a managing member in the name of the firm as being representative proceedings. The words "for the purpose of following in his or their hands such property," in S. 10 of the Limitation Act, mean for the purpose of recovering the property for the benefit of the trust in respect of which it had been given, so that when property is used for some purpose other than the proper purpose of the trust in question, it may be recovered without any bar of time from the hands of the persons indicated in the section. Where the plaintiff in a suit against the persons appointed executors under a will and trustees of the testator's estate, seeks a money decree in satisfaction of a legacy alleged to have been bequeathed to him under the will, he cannot be said to be suing to recover any property for the benefit of the trusts created under the will. Nor can such a plaintiff be said to be beneficially interested in the trust estate, when all that he can claim is his share of the interest in a sum of money which was directed to be, but was not invested, in "some good security," as directed by the testator in his will. The suit does not fall under S. 10, but falls under S. 123, Limitation Act, as the suit is one for the recovery of a legacy pure and simple. (Lobo, J.) GOPALDAS v. HEMANDAS. I.L.R. S. 10 applies to a suit against the legal representatives of a deceased trustee for the recovery of a specific sum of money misappropriated by him. ——S. 10—Applicability—Suit for recovery of money from estate—Defendants executors and trustees of estate under will—Suit if falls under S. 10.

A suit which is expressly stated to be a "suit for declaration and recovery of Rs. 9426-1-3," the declaration being wholly unnecessary and merely constituting the grounds on which the plaintiff bases his claim to a decree, and which in substance is one for recovery of a sum of money from an estate, of which the defendants are executors and trustees under a will, is not a suit for the purpose of following, in the hands of the defendants, trust property or the proceeds thereof. ——S. 10—Applicability — Trust void—Trustee's possession, if adverse to true owner.

Where a trustee has been in possession for upwards of 12 years, of property under a trust which is void under the law, an action against him by the rightful owner would be barred by limitation under the statute, the reason being that the possession of the trustee is as much adverse to the true owner as that of any trespasser. The property in respect of which the direction in the will creating the charitable trust is void cannot be said to have "vested in trust for a specific purpose" and therefore S. 10, Limitation Act, can have no application and the executor must be taken to have held the property adversely to the true owner and if he so holds it for the statutory period he would acquire a good title to it. The fact that the house tax receipts were issued by the Municipality in favour of the deceased testator is no proof that the executor was not holding the property adversely to the heir. In computing the period of limitation for a suit by a creditor under S. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act for a declaration that certain alienations made by a debtor are void, the period of limitation being six years from the date of the alienations under Art. 120 of the Limitation Act, the time taken in prior proceedings by the Official Receiver in insolvency to get the alienations annulled under Ss. 53 and 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act against the same debtor, cannot be excluded under S. 14 of the Limitation Act. S. 14 can have no application to the case, because in the first place the plaintiff in the later suit is not the petitioner in the prior proceedings and in the second place the cause of action is also different. Although the Official Receiver prosecuting the proceedings under Ss. 53 and 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act might represent the creditor, a creditor who is the plaintiff in the later suit under S. 53 of the T. P. Act cannot be said to be prosecuting the proceedings under the Insolvency Act.

——S. 19—Acknowledgment—Writing signed by debtor containing details of account and stating amount due—Recital of handing over to creditor of title-deeds of value of debt—Use of word "bhuktan"—If denotes novation—If saves limitation.

A writing by the debtor containing the details of the account of the creditor, stating that a specific amount is due to the creditor on the date of the writing and signed by the debtor is unquestionably an acknowledgment satisfying the requirements of S. 19 of the Limitation Act. Where it is further recited that the debtor has handed over to the creditor documents in his favour the value of which is equivalent to the amount of the debt due to the creditor, without any formal assignment, the mere fact that the word "bhuktan" is used (meaning satisfied in full) would not make the writing anything other than an acknowledgment. In the absence of a formal assignment of the title-deeds in favour of the creditor, there is no novation of a contract within the meaning of S. 62 of the Contract Act, but only an inchoate proposition or arrangement for the liquidation of the debt. It cannot therefore be held that the writing is not an acknowledgment sufficient to save limitation. ——Ss. 19 and 20—Relative scope—Payment in respect of promissory note and payment towards amount due under note—Distinction—Payment ineffective under S. 20—If can amount to acknowledgment under S. 19.

Ss. 19 and 20 of the Limitation Act are quite independent of each other. A document may be an acknowledgment within S. 19, although that does not evidence part-payment within S. 20. Whether in any particular case the document relied on amounts to an acknowledgment must depend on the language of the document while a statement that something has been paid "in respect to a promissory note" does not involve any admission that something more remains due on the note, a payment made in part-payment or towards payment of the amount due on the note does involve an admission that there is something more due, and is thus an acknowledgment of the right of the creditor to sue on the note. Where a loan is made by the plaintiff to the defendant, which is entered in the khata of the plaintiff, the entry being signed by the defendant, and within three years of the loan an entry is made in the khata signed by the defendant, to the effect, "credited Rs. 30-10-0 on December 15, 1934, as the price of paddy"..."This has been credited this day, 10th April, 1935, towards the above amount" and the payment is not made in respect of interest but the creditor appropriates it towards the interest, the payment does not operate to save limitation under S. 20 of the Limitation Act, because it is neither a payment of interest as such within the first paragraph of S. 20, nor a part-payment of the principal within the second paragraph of S. 20. But the endorsement does clearly amount to an acknowledgment within S. 19 and saves limitation. (Beaumont, C.J. and Wadia, J.) KESARMAL INDAJI SHET v. NARAYAN VIDYADHAR. I.L.R. ——S. 19 (1)—Acknowledgment—Mortgagor acknowledging prior mortgage in later deed—If saves limitation as against intermediate mortgagees.

Agarwala, J.—An acknowledgment by the mortgagor of a prior mortgage in a later mortgage executed by him is sufficient to save limitation as against intermediate mortgagees who hold mortgages executed before the acknowledgment. To confine the word "acknowledgment" in S. 19 of the Limitation Act to an acknowledgment made prior to a transfer or mortgage would be to add to or alter the language of the section. The effect of S. 29 of the Limitation Act is that in the case of a suit falling under a special or local law which prescribes a different period of limitation from that in the Limitation Act, the plaintiff will not be entitled to the benefit of S. 20. A mortgage decree was obtained on 13—8—1935, and the decree-holder applied for execution on 15—4—1940. For the purpose of saving limitation he relied on a payment of Rs. 79 made by the mortgagor on 15—5—1938, towards the principal, interest and costs of the decree, which payment was endorsed on the decree-holder's copy of the decree. The decree-holder claimed that this payment saved limitation for execution under S. 20 of the Limitation Act. It appeared that the mortgagor clearly contemplated payment not merely on account of principal with or without costs but also on account of interest, though he left the exact appropriation to the decree-holder. It, however, appeared that the mortgagor had parted with all interest in the mortgaged properties before the payment relied on. It was not shown by the decree-holder that the payment was made at a time when he could have enforced any personal liability against the mortgagor.

Held, that the payment made by the mortgagor though it was a payment of interest as such, was not made by a "person liable to pay the debt" within the meaning of S. 20 of the Limitation Act as the mortgagor had at the time no longer anything to do with the mortgaged properties against which alone the decree could have been executed, and the payment therefore did not fall within the section so as to save limitation. The payment of interest and principal by the later mortgagee and endorsement thereof by him would operate to save limitation under S. 20 in respect of a suit by him on the earlier mortgage paid off by him as against intermediate mortgagees. Where a minor has separate guardian for his person and for his property, it cannot be said that an acknowledgment by the guardian of his person, e.g., his mother falls within S. 21 of the Limitation Act. ——S. 23—Applicability—Public land—Encroachment upon—Limitation in favour of person encroaching —Public land and private land—Distinction.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), S. 23.

There is nothing in S. 23 of the Limitation Act upon which a distinction can be made between the case of an encroachment upon private land and that of an encroachment upon public land. Whether the wrong is a continuing one or not must depend upon the nature of the wrong and not upon the nature of the land over which it is committed. If in the one case limitation may run, there is no reason why it should not also run in the case of a precisely similar act committed upon public land. (Fazl Ali and Meredith, JJ.) KUSESHWAR JHA v. UMA KANT JHA. 197 I C. 818=14 R.P. 371=8 B.R. 302=22 Pat.L.T. 1001=A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 188.

——S. 23 and Art. 142—Applicability—Suit for possession—Continuing wrong or dispossession—Test—Allegation that defendant had encroached on common land—Plea by defendant that he has been in possession for over twelve years—Limitation.

In a case where one party complains of encroachment upon common land by the other party and the latter pleads that he has been on the land for over the statutory period, the real question is not whether the wrong is continuing or not, but whether the wrong amounts to a complete ouster of the plaintiff by the defendant that is, to his dispossession. When it is a case of dispossession and the suit is for possession of the land by ejectment of the defendant, Art. 142 of the Limitation Act governs the suit, and the plaintiff's suit must be within 12 years of his ouster. In view of Art. 142 read with S. 28 of the Limitation Act, the plaintiff clearly can have no right of suit after the expiry of 12 years from the date of his dispossession. Once it is found that the plaintiff's right is extinguished by the operation of S. 28, it is quite irrelevant whether the wrong is technically continuing or not, so far as the question of recovery of possession of that land is concerned. The plaintiff cannot recover it because he has no longer any right in that property. (Fazl Ali and Meredith, JJ.) KUSESHWAR JHA v. UMA KANT JHA. 197 I.C. 818=14 R.P 371=8 B.R. 302=22 Pat.L.T. 1001=A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 188

An obstruction which prevents some one from exercising a right of way falls within the scope of the term 'continuing wrong' and a fresh period of limitation begins to run under S. 23, Limitation Act, at every moment of the time during which the wrong continues. (Yorke, J.) MASOOMA BIBI v. MOHAMMAD SAID KHAN. 198 I C. 532=14 R.A. 289=1942 R D. 20=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 530=1941 A W R. (H.C.) 376=1941 A.L. J. 706=A.I.R. 1942 All. 77.

——S. 23—Scope—How far affected by S. 28—Continuing wrong—Wrong and its effects—Distinction—Trespasser continuing in possession for over 12 years —Effect on right of suit.

A distinction has to be made between the continuance of a legal injury and the continuance of its injurious effects. There is no perpetual right of suit under S. 23, on the ground that an encroachment is a continuing wrong, when the trespass itself gives rise to rights extinguishing any right of suit under S. 28 of the Limitation Act. When the wrong amounts to dispossession of the plaintiff, then, even though it may be a continuing wrong, the plaintiff cannot recover possession after the expiry of 12 years, because under S. 28 of the Limitation Act the plaintiff himself would have got no right left which he can enforce by suit. (Faxl Ali and Meredith, JJ.) KUSESHWAR JHA v. UMA KANT JHA. 197 I.C. 818 =14 R.P. 371=8 B.R. 302=22 Pat.L.T. 1001=A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 188.

An easement against a transferee of the servient tenement from the Crown can be acquired by an enjoyment as of right without interruption for a period of 20 years, and to make up this period the period during which the land had been in the hands of the Government can be tacked on. ——S. 28—Applicability—Suit for possession of property—Suit to recover assessment on land—If one for possession of property.

Although a right to assessment on land may for certain purposes be regarded as immovable property, it is impossible to hold that a suit to recover assessment is a suit for possession of property within the meaning of S. 28 of the Limitation Act. A right to recover assessment is a mere right in action, and cannot be lost by failure to bring a suit for possession of such property for 12 years. ——S. 28—Extinction of title.

If the owner whose property is encroached upon suffers his right to be barred by the law of limitation the practical effect is the extinction of his title in favour of the party in possession. Consequently where the executor holds the property adversely to the heir for upwards of 12 years on behalf of the charity for which it was dedicated, the title to it, acquired by prescription, becomes vested in the charity and that of the heir if he had any, becomes extinguished by operation of S. 28. ——S. 29 (2) (a)—Applicability of sections enumerated into petitions under Prov. Insol. Act.

Per Iqbal Ahmad, C.J.—If a special or local law is a complete code in the matter of 'limitation' or if the phraseology of the sections enumerated in S. 29 (2) makes those sections inapplicable to proceedings under a special or local law, the application of those sections to the special or local law must be deemed to have been expressly excluded by the Legislature. The Prov. Insol. Act is a self contained Act in the matter of 'limitation' with respect to proceedings contemplated by the Act. It follows that the general provisions of the Lim. Act, other than those specified in Provincial Insol. Act, cannot be appealed to for determining the periods of limitation as regards proceedings under the latter Act. A petition for insolvency either under S. 9 or S. 13 of the Act is not an application and hence S. 29 (2), Lim. Act, which makes provision for the determination of the periods of limitation prescribed 'for any suit, appeal or application by special or local law' can obviously have no application to petitions under the Insol. The physical possession contemplated by Art. 10, Limitation Act, does not consist of formal statements by third parties but of physical control visible to other people, which gives notice of a change. Where a sale deed contained a statement that "the immovable property as above has been sold for the above amount and the possession has also been delivered. It is as follows. Excluding the standing crop which is in the field, the possession has been delivered of the black soil," it was held that the statement cannot be regarded as evidence which warranted in law the conclusion that transfer of physical possession within the meaning of Art. 10, Limitation Act, took place at the time of sale. A sale of an undivided share of a joint holding does not admit of physical possession and is, therefore, governed by the second part of Art 10 of the Limitation Act and the terminus a quo is the date of the registration of the instrument of sale. Where a deed of sale of a share in an undivided holding which was executed and registered, purported to sell occupancy rights but subsequently another deed reciting the sale of proprietary rights in the same land was executed and registered, and this deed recited that the mention of occupancy rights in the earlier deed was made under a misconception, that the parties had intended to sell proprietary rights and that the object of the later deed was to correct the misdescription and to substitute therefor the sale of proprietary rights, the limitation for pre-emption runs from the date of registration of the second deed. The reason why Art. 10 of the Limitation Act lays down that the terminus a quo is the date of the registration of the deed of sale (in cases where the subject of the sale does not admit of physical possession) is that the date of registration is the date on which the public must be presumed to know that the transfer has taken place. The registration of the earlier deed which conveyed the sale of occupancy rights cannot be presumed to inform any one interested that a sale of proprietary rights had taken place. The necessary publicity could only be given by the registration of the later deed of sale of proprietary rights. From the point of view of publicity and notoriety, it is wholly immaterial that the later deed is not the actual deed of conveyance but merely a deed correcting a misdescription of the nature of the transaction mentioned in the earlier deed. The words "under legal process" in Art. 29 of the Limitation Act cannot be interpreted as meaning according to law and there is no justification for holding that any process taken according to law is legal process. By "legal process" is meant procedure by some sort of Court. The Collector acting under S. 154 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code is not acting as a Court, but is really acting as a creditor. Art. 29 applies to a seizure under a process issued by a Court, and does not apply to a seizure by the Collector under S. 154 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code. (*Beaumont, C. That term could hardly be applied to a surrender value in a life insurance policy which grows from year to year and does not even begin to accrue until a certain number of premia has been paid. It is Art. 60 that would apply to such a claim and a suit would be in time when the demand is made less than 3 years prior to suit. (Grille,

Consideration in a contract of sale is not money paid for the use of the payer, so as to attract the operation of Art. 62 of the Limitation Act, except perhaps when the contract is of such a nature that it is void in law ab initio. A test for the applicability of Art. 62 is whether when the money was paid it was recoverable immediately by the plaintiff. Art. 97 and not Art. 62 would govern a suit for recovery of part purchase price paid on sale which afterwards goes off by reason of the failure of the buyer to complete payment. ——Arts. 62, 89 and 120—Applicability—Loan taken from Nidhi on security of shares—Sale of shares—Subsequent suit by debtor for account and for balance—Limitation.

Art. 62 of the Limitation Act is applicable to cases where the defendant has received money which in justice and equity belongs to the plaintiff but in circumstances where the receipt by the defendant would be regarded in law as a receipt to the plaintiff's use. Where the receipt by the defendant, is on his own account and is not or cannot be regarded as one on behalf of the plaintiff, Art. 62 can have no application. Plaintiff's husband took a loan from the defendant Nidhi and placed with the Nidhi certain shares which he held in the Nidhi as security for the repayment of the loan. The Nidhi afterwards sold the shares and adjusted the proceeds towards the amount due. There was a surplus left with the Nidhi. After his death, the plaintiff brought a suit against the Nidhi for payment of the balance that may be found due to her after giving credit for the yearly dividends on the shares on the one side and after debiting her with any liability incurred by her husband touching the shares on the other.

Held, that suit was governed by Art. 120 of the Limitation Act and neither Art. 62 nor Art. 89 applied to the case. (Abdur Rahman, J.) PERIA NEGAMAM SRI LAKSHMI VILASA DRAVIYA SAGAYA NIDHI v. VARALAKSHMI AMMAL. 55 L.W. 90=1942 M.W.N. 129=A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 386=(1942) 1 M.L.J. 274.

——Art. 62—Applicability—Suit against Municipality for recovery of licence fees and profession tax wrongly levied—Limitation.

Art. 62 of the Lim. Act is not confined to an action for money had and received in the strictest sense of the term as understood in the English Common Law Courts and cannot be held to be inapplicable when the action is based not on any implied contract but on the principle of ex aequo et bono. Art. 62 is intended to apply to all actions for money had and received to the use of the plaintiff whether they be actions which may be deemed strictly to be based on implied contracts or whether they be merely to enforce an equitable claim to the return of the money had and received. A suit to recover license fees and profession tax alleged to have been wrongfully levied by a Municipality is one to which Art. 62 applies: Such a suit does not fall under Art. 120. ——Art 63—Suit for principal barred—Suit for interest—If also barred.

Where there is no independent contract to pay interest, the interest is a mere accessory to the principal and if the principal is irrecoverable, so is the interest thereon. But this principle does not apply if there was a special contract to pay interest at a specified rate. The mortgagee was given possession from the date of the mortgage and the mortgagor agreed to redeem the property after two years by payment of the mortgage sum. Until redemption he was to remain in possession and to say Rs. 10 per month as rent. If he failed to pay rent for three months, then he agreed to pay the remainder of the rent on demand and to pay at an enhanced rate for the future. It was specifically stated that the rent would also be a charge on the mortgaged property. For the payment of the mortgage money and the rent, the mortgaged property, the person and other property of the principal were made liable and the surety then agreed that if the mortgagor did not pay the mortgage money and rent according to the terms of the deed, then he (the surety) would from his pocket pay the mortgage money and the rent on demand and for his payment he made his person and his property of every kind liable.

Held, that in the circumstances there was an independent contract to pay rent and that even if the rent be regarded as interest it was recoverable as being due under a special contract even if the principal was irrecoverable. ——Art. 75—Scope of—Instalment bond with exigibility clause in case of default—General principles governing.

The Limitation Act does not lay down substantive law and so the exception made in Art. 75 in favour of the creditor who waives, cannot be construed as conferring a right which does not exist under the ordinary law. The Article refers to cases in which the creditor is entitled to exercise the privilege and it cannot apply when under the ordinary law, or by reason of a special contract, he is precluded from doing so. In case of bonds providing for repayment of debts by instalments with exigibility clause in case of default, the general principle is that the person in default should not be allowed to take advantage of his own wrong and these clauses are generally inserted for the creditor's benefit. It follows that unless the bond specially takes away the privilege it must be taken to exist. (Bose, J.) GULAB RAO v. GANPATI. 203 I.C. 250=15 R.N. 119=1942 N.L.J. 296=A.I.R. 1942 Nag. 138.

——Art. 85—Mutual, open and current account—Test—Absence of shifting balance—If takes case out of the Article.

A mutual account within the meaning of Art. 85, Limitation Act, is an account of dealings between two parties which are such as to create independent obligations in favour of one party against another. The fact that the balance was always in favour of one party throughout the entire period of accounting would not take the transaction out of the category of Art. 85 of the Limitation Act. Where after the death of the mortgagor the mortgagee without acting in good faith obtained a sale of the mortgaged property from the guardian of the minor sons of the mortgagor reciting the amount due under the mortgage to be part of the consideration, and the sale was set aside in a subsequent suit brought by one of the minor sons on attaining majority, the mortgagee cannot ask the Court to treat his mortgage as alive in spite of the fact that he had put an end to it by his own act. Since he chose at the time of the sale to abandon his mortgage security and use the money due under the mortgage in part payment of the price of the vended property, the requirements of S. 65 of the Contract Act will be fully satisfied if he gets a money decree for the specific sum of the money which has been lost to him by the sale being set aside. A suit to recover the specific sum which was mentioned in the sale-deed as having been due under the mortgage and which was set off as part of the purchase-money, will be governed by Art. 97 of the Limitation Act, and time will begin to run from the date on which the mortgagee was deprived of the possession of the property. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 109, ——Arts. 109 and 120—Applicability — Person recognised as landlord by Collector under S. 3 (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act—Receipt of rents and profits—If wrongful—Suit by person ultimately declared by Civil Court to be entitled to estate for accounts of rents and profits—Limitation applicable—Starting point—Final decision by Civil Court—If gives fresh cause of action—Implied contract—Interest—Right to.

It cannot be laid down as a general rule that whenever a person finds an impediment in the way of his successfully asserting his right to relief his cause of action is suspended and the course of time interrupted until such impediment is removed or that a fresh cause of action arises on its removal. Nor is there any general proposition that where the rights of parties have been subjected to adjudication by a competent Civil Court limitation for other suits based on such rights should be computed from the date of their final determination. The Courts have no power, on considerations of hardship or equity, to invent new grounds of exemption from the bar of limitation not recognised by the statute. The defendant in 1915 brought a suit for declaration that the first plaintiff's adoption by R (a Zamindarini) was invalid and that he (the defendant) was the nearest reversioner entitled to succeed to the estate on her death. The trial Court decreed the suit in 1920, declaring the adoption to be invalid. The 1st plaintiff appealed from the decree and pending the appeal R died on 24-10-1923. The defendant thereupon filed an application before the Collector for registry of his name as the proprietor of the estate after the death of R on the basis of the trial Court's decree. He also filed an application before the Collector for recognising him as land-holder of the estate under S. 3 (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act, The Collector, after hearing the objections of the 1st plaintiff and other claimants passed an order on 12-1-1924, whereby he "recognised" the defendant as the land-holder for the purposes of the Estates Land Act, and the defendant accordingly entered possession of the estate and began to collect the rents and profits thereof. The validity of the 1st plaintiff's adoption was finally upheld by the Privy Council in June, 1935, and the suit of the defendant was dismissed. The formal order in council was passed in July, 1935. Subsequently on the plaintiff's application, the Collector cancelled his previous order recognising the defendant as land-holder, and directed the registry of the estate in the names of the first and 2nd plaintiffs recognising them as the land-holders thereof the 2nd plaintiff being a devisee under a will by R, of her half share in the estate which had been given to her absolutely under an ante-adoption agreement. The plaintiffs after having obtained possession of the estate brought the present suit in October, 1935, for recovery of the rents and profits, received by the defendant during the period of his possession and management of the estate under the Collector's order dated 12-1-1924. The plea of limitation was raised.

Held, (1) that the receipt of the rents and profits by the defendant under the Collector's order dated 12-1-1924 was not wrongful so as to attract the application of Art. 109 of the Limitation Act; (2) that the defendant would be liable to account for the rents and profits received by him as if he were a trustee, although there could be no question of trust or strict fiduciary relationship between the parties who claimed the estate adversely one to the other ; (3) that the position of a person like the defendant who was recognised by the Collector as a land-holder was essentially different from the case of a person taking possession under colour of a decree of Court which is afterwards reversed ; (4) that suit was governed by Art. 120 of the Limitation Act, there being no other specific article of the Act applicable to the case ; (5) that the defendant having received the rents and profits in his own alleged right (having set up title to the estate in himself) and not in acknowledgment of the plaintiffs' right, a right to sue accrued to the plaintiffs each time the defendant received the rents and profits as land-holder the Collector's order notwithstanding and hence the plaintiffs' claim for profits received more than six years before the suit was barred by time ; (6) that His Majesty's Order in Council dismissing the defendant's suit did not bring about a new state of things and did not impose any new obligation on the defendant but only declared the first plaintiff's pre-existing title to the estate by holding his adoption to be valid, and it could not be said that this adjudication gave rise to a fresh cause of action for the plaintiffs to sue for the entire profits received by the defendant ; (7) that the defendant was not liable on the basis of an implied contract to render accounts and he could not be regarded as having assumed management of the estate as an interim receiver during the pendency of the prior litigation on the understanding that he should render an account of the rents and profits received in the course of such management in case the plaintiffs' title was upheld ; (8) that the plaintiffs were entitled to interest on the mesne profits on equitable grounds, the defendant being liable to account as if he were a trustee. ——Art. 116—Starting point—Vendor and vendee—Vendor failing to discharge mortgage on property as agreed to under sale—Suit on mortgage—Sale of properties resulting in dispossession of vendee—Suit by latter for damages—Limitation—Starting point—Measure of damages.

Under a sale deed of 19-4-1928 the first defendant conveyed certain properties to the plaintiff for Rs. 1000 the sale being effected to discharge a debt due to a third person under a mortgage of the properties; it was agreed between the parties that the vendor himself should discharge the mortgage and it was recited in the sale deed that the sale price was received by the vendor for discharging the debt. The vendor who took the purchase money failed to discharge the mortgage debt, and as the result of a suit brought by the mortgagee the properties were sold and the plaintiff, the vendee, was dispossessed. He therefore brought a suit against the vendor for damages amounting to Rs. 1000, which was the consideration paid by him.

Held (1) that the suit must be conceived as one for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment and the starting point of limitation was the date of dispossession of the vendee. (2) That the measure of damages would be the market-value of the properties on the date of the dispossession. A co-sharer's suit for his share of the income of the joint property is governed by Art. 120 of the Limitation Act, and the starting point is when the right to sue accrues, i.e., when the right of the plaintiff is denied or when there is an ouster. He may be entitled to an account of the share of income for a period which may be more than 6 years before the date of suit. Art. 120 of the Limitation Act applies to a suit against a receiver appointed under O. 40, C. P. Code, for his negligence in the management of the estate, when such suit is brought by the plaintiff under leave granted to him in proceedings arising out of exceptions to the receiver's accounts by the Court which appointed the receiver. To such a suit, neither S. 10 nor Art. 36 nor Art. 89 nor Art. 115 of the Limitation Act is applicable. ———Art. 120—Starting point of limitation—Knowledge of infringemen of right—Mere adverse entry in the village record—If affects title.

It is wrong to say that the period of limitation for a suit for declaration of right begins to run when the right to sue accrued and that it is immaterial whether the plaintiff had knowledge of it or not. Unless the plaintiff knows that there is any infringement of his right, it cannot be said that any right to sue accrues to him. A suit for declaration of right cannot be said to be time barred so long as the plaintiff has a subsisting title to the property. Each invasion of rights gives him a fresh cause of action. The mere act of forbearance of a previous action on the part of a person in possession cannot debar him from instituting a suit later on when a fresh invasion is made against his title which gives him an independent cause of action and the mere making of an adverse entry in the village records cannot be said to have actually disburbed the plaintiff's title if he still continues in possession. Where a suit was filed for a declaration by the deceased's brother against the widow that the property was the joint family property and that mutation in the widow's name was made only for consolation and that her assertion of right by filing a suit for profits against the plaintiff would not affect him, it was held that the plaintiff was not bound to institute a suit for declaration on the basis of the mutation entry, for he was not disturbed at all by it as it did not throw any cloud on his title and that it was not until the defendant actually asserted a title by means of filing the suit for profits that it became obligatory upon him to file the suit and that hence limitation for the suit started only from the latter date and not from the date of mutation entry. ——Art. 131—Scope—Plaintiff's right to property extinguished by adverse possession.

Art. 131 of the Limitation Act contemplates a case where the plaintiff's right to the property has not been already extinguished by adverse possession of the defendants. If there was never any relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and the defendant, and the latter held the land adversely to the former for more than 12 years, the plaintiff would be no more competent to sue for assessment of rent then he could institute a suit for eviction against the defendant. Where an estate known as the Patdi estate is held for life by each holder for the time being and passes on his death to the next holder unencumbered by debts or charges except those imposed by Government, and the estate is made inalienable and impartible by rules framed by the Government on the lines of the Bombay Saranjan Rules which Saranjan Rules do not apply to the estate, and there is no rule in the rules governing the estate to the effect that there is to be a formal resumption on the death of each holder and re-grant to the successor, if any alienation of a part of the estate is made by a holder it will be invalid from its inception and not merely from his death. But if the alienee continues in possession of the part transferred to him for over 12 years during the lifetime of the alienor or his successor, he acquires a title to it by adverse possession not only as against the holder during whose tenure he completes 12 years' possession but as against all subsequent successors. Though the successor does not claim through his predecessor, but claims in his own right, the successor gets the estate as it was at the time of the death of the predecessor. If, therefore, the estate had lost by adverse possession a particular part of it, and if the alienee had become its owner by the extinction of the holder's title thereto, the estate which comes to the successor is the estate minus the part the ownership of which had passed from the estate to the alienee's family. It would be open to a person to acquire title by adverse possession for over 12 years, and the fact that the alienor holder had only a life estate would not come in the way of the acquisition of title by adverse possession. Even if the analogy of the head or mahant of a math is applied to the holder of the estate, it would make no difference. On that analogy Art. 134-B of the Limitation Act would apply, and if the alienee completes 12 years' possession after the death of the alienating holder, he perfects his title by adverse possession. Where adverse possession commences to run against the last male owner himself the intervention of the limited estate will not prevent time running and will not enable the reversioners coming after the limited owner to say that he has got a fresh cause of action on the death of the owner of the limited estate. ——Arts. 142 and 144—Relative applicability.

Art. 142 of the Limitation Act applies to a suit for possession when the plaintiff while in possession of the property has been dispossessed or has discontinued the possession. Art. 144 is a residuary article applying to suits for possession not otherwise provided for. A period of 12 years runs in the case of Art. 142 from the date of the dispossession or discontinuance; in the case of Art. 144 it runs from the date when the possession of the defendant becomes adverse to the plaintiff; when a plaintiff's case is that he was dispossessed, it is Art. 142 and not Art. 144 that would apply and if the plaintiff does not prove his possession within 12 years before suit, his suit should fail. (Bennett, J.). GAURI SHANKAR SINGH v. JADU NATH PANDE. 1942 O.W.N. 753=1942 O.A. 599.

——Art. 142—Applicability—Burden of proof—Suit for mandatory injunction for the removal of constructions on a plot—Proof of ouster.

A plaintiff who comes to Court seeking a mandatory injunction for the removal of constructions upon a plot founds his suit upon the basis that he has a subsisting title in the plot. If he has no subsisting title then he is not in a position to maintain such a suit and if he goes further and shows that by reason of the act of the defendants he has been ousted then he must clearly be under a duty to show that the ousting which has interfered with his possession and resulted in his dispossession has taken place within 12 years of the institution of the suit. Where the plaintiff has proved this, it then lies upon the defendant, to establish that he had exercised such exclusive possession as amounted to an ouster of the plaintiff from a date more than 12 years prior to the institution of the suit. ——Arts. 142 and 144—Applicability of Art. 142—Conditions—Facts to be proved by plaintiff.

In any suit in which a plaintiff alleges his possession within 12 years prior to the defendant's possession the case must fall under Art. 142. Whenever there is an allegation of original possession which the plaintiff lost by dispossession the suit must fall under Art. 142 of the Limitation Act. Where a plaintiff in a suit for possession alleges a licence for a term under which the defendant got into possession there is only a discontinuance of possession and not dispossession and it is governed by Art. 142 and not Art. 144. The word 'discontinuance' means cessation of possession by one followed by possession of another, and 'dispossession' means the coming into possession of one and the driving out of the person in possession. In a suit governed by Art. 142 the plaintiff has to prove that the defendants permissive possession began within 12 years prior to the suit. (Niyogi, J.) GANGOOBAI v. SONI. 1942 N L J. 99.

The act of a person who takes possession, either forcibly or otherwise than in due course of law, may be high-handed and not legal in the sense that it is not authorised by law, but if he happens to be the rightful owner, there is no justification for holding that the period during which he had both title and possession should not be taken into account for pusposes of deciding whether ——Arts. 142 and 144—Rights of a person in possession—Position of a trespasser—Presumptions as to possession when arises.

The person seeking to displace the rights of the person in possession has to establish that that person has no title and that the title resides in the plaintiff. It is always assumed that the person in possession is in rightful possession and so his possession is always referred to a lawful title, whenever that is possible. A trespasser does not displace the rightful owner's title unless he intends to prescribe for a hostile title and he does not necessarily intend so to prescribe simply by remaining in occupation. His attitude may be a purely negative and passive one. All the usual presumptions about possession being adverse and so forth do not arise except in favour of the person in possession and those who claim through him. If the rightful owner succeeds in getting into possession and an attempt is made to oust him by those who do not claim through the trespasser, then the presumptions are in favour of the rightful owner. It may be that Arts. 142 and 144 of the Limitation Act are not limited to suits for possession based on proprietary title, but they certainly contemplate suits for possession in which some interest in immovable property is claimed. ——Art. 178 (as amended by Arbitration Act X of 1940)—Applicability—Application by arbitrator for filing award in Court.

Art. 178 of the Limitation Act, as amended by the Arbitration Act X of 1940, is clearly intended to apply to those cases where a party to the arbitration proceedings applies for the filing of the award in Court. It is not intended to apply to an arbitrator filing an award in Court. An arbitrator who applies for filing an award in Court seeks no relief from the Court for himself or against anybody. The arbitrator in applying for the filing of an award in Court is performing a mere ministerial act at the request of a party to the arbitration or by the order of the Court. He has no interest in the award apart from his fees and charges. The Legislature never intended that Art. 178 should apply to an application for the filing of an award in Court by an arbitrator. The period of limitation provided by Art. 178 of the Limitation Act refers to an application made to the Court under the Arbitration Act by a party to an award to obtain an order directing the arbitrator to file the award. The Code of Civil Procedure nowhere provides for such an application. It is a proceeding by which the inherent jurisdiction of the Court is invoked. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 181.

——Arts 181, 180 and 182—Execution proceeding —Court ordering on 2—8—1935 judgment debtor's land to be leased to decree-holder for 15 years in full satisfaction of decree—Execution filed on 30—9—1935 to enforce order—Mutation of lease entered and attested on 29—12—1937—On 30—5—1939 lease certificate drawn up and signed by Judge—Application on 11—11—1940 for possession of leased land—If barred.

During the execution taken out by the decree-holder the Court ordered on 2—8—1935 that the land of the judgment-debtor should be leased to the decree holder for 15 years and that the lease shall completely wipe out the decretal debt. The execution was filed in default on 30—9—1935. The decree-holder moved the revenue authorities to enter a mutation of lease. Mutation was entered and attested on 29—12—1937. The judgment-debtor was not present, nor any one representing the Court. On 30—5—1939 a lease certificate was drawn up and signed by the Judge. The document was attached to the file. On 11—11—1940 the decree-holder presented another application to the execution Judge asking that he should be put in possession of the land leased to him.

Held, that Art. 180 had no application whatsoever as it applied to auction purchasers. An order for preparing the lease certificate having been given and the execution having been filed in full satisfaction on 20—4—1939 there was no decree to execute any more and therefore Art. 182 also was inapplicable. The application being one for which there was no provision in the Limitation Act, Art. 181 applied. The decree holder became entitled to ask for possession only when the lease certificate was prepared and signed by the Judge. The period of limitation therefore began to run under Art. 181 on 30—5—1939. The attestation of mutation did not confer any title. The Court was leasing the property to the decree holder and the Court was not a party to the mutation proceedings and hence right to apply could not be said to have accrued when the mutation was attested on 29—12—1937. ——Art. 181—Revival—Execution sale—Satisfaction recorded in full and execution dismissed—Subsequent setting aside of sale under O. 21, R. 90, C. P. Code, at instance of mortgagee—Finding of fraud and collusion on part of decree-holder and Judgment-debtor —Subsequent application for sale of some property—Revivor of former application—Fraud—If prevents revival.

The appellant obtained a decree for rent against the respondents on 18—3—1936 and applied for execution on 18—12—1937. This resulted in a sale of the respondent's property on 11—4—1938, which was confirmed on 12—5—1938. Thereafter the Court recorded full satisfaction and dismissed the execution case. Subsequently on 15—7—1938 a mortgagee of the property applied under O. 21, R. 90, C. P. Code, to have the sale set aside, and on 29—11—1939, the sale was set aside by the Appellate Court on the finding that the respondents deliberately allowed their property to be sold for an inadequate price in order to get rid of the mortgage on it, and that the processes were fraudulently suppressed in collusion with the judgment debtors (respondents) for extinguishing the rights of the mortgagee. On 12—2—1940, the decree-holder again applied for sale of the very same property and prayed for revival of his previous application.

Held, that the order setting aside the execution sale resulted in the setting aside of the orders which were consequent on that sale, including the order dismissing the first execution case on full satisfaction, thus leaving the decree-holder's first application to be dealt with and resulting in a revivor of the prior application for execution leading to the first sale. As that application was in time, it should be allowed to proceed to its normal conclusion. The fact that the appellant (decree-holder) was guilty of fraud in respect of the prior sale was no ground for declining to revive the former application for execution. The honesty or dishonesty of the sale had no logical bearing on the question whether the subsequent proceedings were or were not a continuation of the former proceedings. ——Art. 181—Starting point—Preliminary mortgage decree—Provision for instalments—Default clause giving decree-holder right to apply for sale for all instalments remaining due—No payment made—Application for final decree five years after preliminary decree —If barred.

A preliminary decree in a mortgage suit passed in June, 1933, provided for the payment of the decretal amount in seven annual instalments of Rs. 115 in June of each year; a default clause provided that on default of payment of any one instalment, the decree-holder might proceed to sell the mortgaged property for the whole amount of the instalments still remaining due and unpaid and also for a sum of Rs. 262 which had been conditionally relinquished. No instalments were paid in 1934, 1935, 1936 and 1937. On 22—6—1938, before the 1938 June instalment became due, the decree-holder applied for a final decree to which the judgment-debtor raised the plea of limitation.

Held, that every fresh default gave rise to a fresh cause of action, that the decree-holder was at no time bound to enforce the penalty and hence the application for final decree was not barred by limitation. Where an application for execution by ejectment was deposited as the order reached the kurk amin at a time when according to law it could not be executed and a second application for execution was dismissed owing to decree-holder's non-compliance with the Court's directions as to filing copy of the decree, it was held that a third application filed beyond time could not be treated as a continuation of the earlier ones because the decree-holder had neither complied with the Court's order nor had appealed against the dismissal of the earlier application and that the question whether an application for execution could be treated as one in continuation of a prior application or not was always a question of fact and had to be decided on the facts of each case. ——Art. 182—Starting point—Date of decree—Decree under O. 20, R. 12 (2)—Mesne profits assessed and amount finally determined—Decree not drawn up—Subsequent application by plaintiff to assess Court-fee and to draw up decree—If step-in-aid—Execution application—Limitation.

For the purposes of computing limitation under Art. 182 of the Limitation Act the date of the judgment has to be taken as the date of the decree which is the starting point of limitation. In the case of a decree for mesne profits under O. 20, R. 12 (2), C.P. Code, such date is the date of the final adjudication between the parties fixing the amount of the mesne profits. The fact that the Court defers the drawing up of the final decree until payment of the deficit Court-fee by the plaintiff, and that the Court draws up the final decree only on the application of the plaintiff on payment of the deficit Court-fee would not enlarge the period of limitation under Art. 182, Limitation Act, for execution of the decree for mesne profits on the ground that the decree is actually drawn up not on the date of the judgment fixing the mesne profits but subsequently on payment of the Court-fee and on application by the plaintiff. The application by the decree-holder to assess the deficit Court-fee or to receive the deficit Court-fee or to prepare and sign the decree cannot be regarded as a step-in-aid of execution under Art. 182 (5) of the Limitation Act. Where in remanding a case for trial de novo the appellate Court passed an order for costs against the guardian of the successful minor appellants and the suit though dismissed in the trial Court was ultimately decreed in appeal on a question as to the staring point of limitation for the execution of the order for costs against the guardian, it was held that the order for costs though not varied by the final order, in appeal was at least closely related to it since both were passed during proceedings in the same suit and that was sufficient reason for taking the date of the final decree in the suit on appeal as the proper starting point of limitation. ——Art. 182 (3)—Rejection of review application—Starting point.

The words 'where there has been a review of judgment' in Art. 182 (3) of the Limitation Act can only cover cases where an application for review of a judgment has been allowed and they do not cover cases in which the application for review has been rejected. In the former case limitation would begin to run from the date of the decree substituted on review and in the latter from the date of the original decree itself. ——Art. 182 (4)—Amendment of decree—Limitation for execution—Terminus a quo.

Under Art. 182 (4) of the Limitation Act, terminus a quo for an application for execution of a decree runs from the date of the order of the amendment, if there has in fact been an amendment within the meaning of that clause, even though that amendment has been made more than three years from the date of the original decree. But if the alteration in the decree does not amount to an amendment within the meaning of that clause, no fresh terminus a quo is available to the decree-holder for execution of the decree. ——Art. 182 (5)—Final order—Execution petition—Order returning on ground of non-production of sale papers—Validity—If "final order".

It is not incumbent upon a decree-holder to furnish the sale papers along with the execution petition itself. The duty of the Court is to see whether all the requirements of O. 21, Rr. 11 to 14 are complied with. Where these requirements are complied with, an order returning the execution petition on the ground that the sale papers had not been produced is clearly illegal. Such an execution petition must be considered to be still pending, and the order returning it is not a "final order" contemplated by Art. 182 (5) of the Limitation Act. (Somayya, J.) SUNDARABALA KADIRESA THEVAR v. AVUDAI AMMAL. 202 I.C. 211=15 R.M. 462= 1942 M.W.N. 254=A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 495=(1942) 1 M.L.J. 542.

——Art. 182 (5)—"Final" order—Language of order—Intention of Court passing order—Relevancy—Duty of Court considering later execution petition to construe order.

The question whether an order is a "final" order within the meaning of Art. 182 (5) of the Limitation Act is not to be judged by reference to what the Court passing the order thought at the time nor by the language employed by it. It is for the Court before which the nature of the order is properly in question at a later stage which has to deal with the matter and to consider the legal character of the earlier order and the decision must be arrived at on an independent consideration of the correct rule of law as applied to the true facts. ——Art. 182 (5)—"Final order"—What is—Test—Execution petition returned for remedying defects but not re-presented—Legal status of—Order on—If "final".

An order merely returning an execution petition as defective is not a final order, though in special circumstances it may amount to one, notwithstanding the language employed. The true test is whether the order puts an end to the petition in respect of which it is made so far as the Court passing it is concerned When a petition is returned for the purpose of the petitioner doing something to enable the Court to proceed further with it, the Court really defers its consideration until it is brought back with the defects remedied. It is only then that the Court is placed in a position to consider it judicially and make what can be regarded as a final order on it. An execution petition returned for amendment but not represented has no legal existence till it is re-presented, and if it is re-presented after the time limited it does not acquire the status of a petition calling for an order unless the delay is excused. Where the application for excusing the delay is rejected by the Court, the consequence is that there is no valid petition before theCourt to be ordered or rejected. And it cannot be the subject of a "final" order. (Krishnaswami Ayyangar and Kunhi Raman, JJ.) SYED GHULAM KHADIR SAHIB v. VISWANATHAYYAR. 1943 M.W.N. 68=(1942) 2 M.L.J. 768.

An execution petition which complies with the requirements of O. 21, Rr. 11 to 14, C. P. ——Art. 182 (5) "In accordance with law"—Application solely for purpose of keeping alive decree.

An application for execution filed, not with any real intention of proceeding with it, but solely for the purpose of keeping the decree alive, is an application in accordance with law if all the requirements of O.21, R. 11 are satisfied and would save limitation under Art. 182 (5) of the Limitation Act. ——Art. 182 (5)—"In accordance with law"—Meaning of—Application for arrest of defendant not residing within Court's jurisdiction—Step-in-aid.

An application for arrest of the judgment-debtor which complies with the requirements of O. 21, R. 11, C. P. Code, is one in accordance with law and saves limitation under Art. 182 (5), Limitation Act even though the judgment-debtor who is sought to be arrested is at the time of the application residing out of the jurisdiction of the Court to which the application is made. Although a judgment-debtor can be arrested only within the jurisdiction of the Court which issues a warrant, there is nothing in the Civil Procedure Code which forbids the issue of a warrant unless the judgment-debtor ordinarily resides within the jurisdiction of the Court or happens to have entered that jurisdiction at the time the application for arrest is made or at the time the warrant is issued. Omission or misstatement of the address of a judgment-debtor sought to be arrested is not a defect requiring amendment under O. 21. R. 17, C. P. Code, or entailing rejection of the application. When all the requirements of an execution application laid down in O. 21, R. 11, C. P. Code, are satisfied, the execution application, when filed in time by a person entitled to execute the decree against a person liable to satisfy the decree, and seeking relief in one of the modes allowed by law, must be held to be an application in accordance with law, and it is immaterial whether the application will eventually be effective or ineffective. An application by the decree-holder to the Court which passed the decree to attach the judgment-debtor's property beyond the limits of the Court's jurisdiction is one in accordance with law and made to the proper Court, so as to save limitation under Art. 182 (5) of the Limitation Act. ——Art. 182 (5)—"Proper Court"—Step in-aid—Decree—Transfer for execution to another Court—Subsequent application to decree Court to again transfer decree to same Court—If one made to proper Court and step-in-aid.

Where a decree has been transferred by the Court which passed it for execution to another Court, an application to the first Court to transfer it for execution to the same Court is a valid application, even if such application is made before the proceedings taken in the other Court have first been reported and certified by that Court. It is an application made to the proper Court within the meaning of Art. 182 (5), Limitation Act and therefore saves limitation. Respondent obtained a decree against the appellants in a suit for sale on a mortgage for Rs. 54,000 and odd. The final decree was passed on 2—7—1927. In October, 1927, the respondent applied for transfer of the decree for execution to the subordinate judge's Court of East Khandesh as the properties were within that Court's jurisdiction. An rder of transfer was made on 22—12—1927, and a copy of the decree and certificate of non-satisfaction were sent to the Court of Khandesh on 3—9—1928. A darkhast was filed in the latter Court for sale, but as there were no bidders the darkhast was disposed of on that ground on 22—3—1933. On 12—5—1934, the decree was attached by a judgment-creditor of the respondent. On 4—12—1935, the respondent applied to the Court which passed his decree for a fresh certificate and order of transfer to the Court of Khandesh and a fresh order re-transferring the decree to the Court of Khandesh was made on 10—1—1936 It appeared that after the infructuous proceedings in the Khandesh Court, the pleader of the respondent took away the copy of the decree and certificate of non-satisfaction for non-payment of his fees and refused to give them up.

Held, that the application by the respondent to the Court which passed the decree for a re-transfer, made on 4—12—1935, was one made to the proper Court and was calculated to be and did have the effect of a step-in-aid of execution under Art. 182 (5) of the Limitation Act. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 182.

An application for possession of property purchased or money realised by a plaintiff decree-holder in execution is a step-in-aid of execution and saves limitation under Art. 182 (5) of the Limitation Act. There can be no difference in principle when the application is for payment out of Court of money realised in execution and whe it is an application for possession of property sold in execution by the decree-holder purchaser. An execution application made to a proper Court and, outwardly at least, in accordance with law, is one within the provisions of Art. 182 (5) of the Limitation Act, even if it is made merely for the purpose of gaining time and keeping the decree alive. It is not necessary for the Court to be satisfied that the application is made bona fide and that the decree-holder has the intention of proceeding to execution in pursuance of the application. There is nothing inherently wrong in making an application for the purpose of saving time. (Davis, C.J and Weston, J.) VIRUMAL KUNDANDAS v CHELLARAM ISSARDAS. I.L.R. ——Art. 182 (7)—Instalment decree—Default clause—Application for execution claiming whole amount on default—Return for amendment—Failure to amend and re-present—If amounts to election to treat whole amount as due—Limitation for execution.

The doctrine of election, is not a mere legal prohibition to any party against ever changing his mind; it is an equitable doctrine which is applied in law in order to prevent prejudice being done to the opposite party. A decree providing for payment of the amount by instalments commencing from 15—4—1935, contained a default clause giving the decree-holder the liberty to apply for recovery of the whole amount in default of payment of any instalment. Nothing was paid and an execution application was filed on 23—9—1935 claiming the whole amount. It was, however, returned for amendment, but was never re-presented. A fresh application was presented on 19-8—1938. The plea of limitation was raised and it was contended that the decree-holder having elected to recover the whole amount in 1935, and failing to pursue his course, his application in 1938 was barred even in respect of the instalments which were within three years.

Held, that the application of 1935 never came to the notice of the judgment-debtor at all and only amounted to a memorandum by the decree-holder of a course which he decided momentarily to pursue but which he subsequently abandoned. There could therefore be no question of any election on his part to treat the whole amount as due on the date of that application so as to bar the whole decree. It could not be said to have prejudiced the judgment-debtor who was never made aware of it and there was no legal obstacle to the decree holder executing his decree in respect of the instalments within three years. ———Ss. 3 (1) and 8—"Person"—"Same creditor"—Composite family in Nellore—If undivided Hindu family—Successive managers of such family—If same creditor.

The association known as the composite family, the existence of which by custom has been recognised in the Nellore and adjacent districts, cannot be properly termed an "undivided Hindu family," such as is recognised in the definition of "person" in S. 3 (1) of Act IV of 1938. That definition includes under the category of "persons" an undivided Hindu family, a Marumakkathayam or Aliasanthana tarward or tavazhi and excludes other associations. Where a debt alleged to have been incurred in 1922 when a mortgage deed was executed in favour of X as the manager of a joint composite family including A, and after X's death in 1934, a new mortgage was taken in 1934 in the name of A who is alleged to have become the manager of the family.

Held, that the debt could not be scaled down on the basis of the earlier mortgage deed of 1922 on any theory that the creditor under the first mortgage was an association known as the composite family and the creditor under the later deed was the same association. on their share of the income of the firm. In applying proviso B to S. 3 (ii) of the Madras Act IV of 1938, to a partner who is an agriculturist debtor, one is not entitled to take into consideration his share of the income of the firm which has been separately assessed to profession tax in addition to his personal income in respect of which he has actually been assessed to profession tax. A partner of a firm may claim to be an agriculturist, and as an agriculturist scale down his liability under a partnership debt, though the firm itself may be paying a large sum as profession tax. The words "aggregate annual value" in proviso C to S. 3 (11) of Madras Act IV of 1938 refer to the total of the rental values of the various buildings and lands in respect of which the tax has been imposed and not to the total of the valuations for two half years. If a person is assessed for the first of the four half-years on the basis of an annual rental value of not less than Rs. 600, he is excluded from the benefits of the Act. The phrase "annual rental value" in proviso C to S. 3 (2) of Madras Act IV of 1938 is a general phrase and must be construed as the final figure of rental value on which the assessment is based and that has to be taken as the annual rental value for purposes of proviso C. In order to come within the purview of proviso C to S. 3 (11) of Madras Act IV of 1938, it is not necessary that property tax on a rental value of not less than Rs. 600 must have been paid throughout the period of two years specified in the proviso. The period during which the rental value is not less than Rs. 600 must be the same two years within which the assessment is made and not some subsequent date outside the period of assessment to disqualify the person who claims to be an agriculturist. Held, that the fixed annual payment to the zamindar was in the nature of a quitrent or kattubadi, which would disqualify the mokhasadar under proviso D to S. 3 (ii) of Madras Act IV of 1938 from claiming the benefits of the Act as an agriculturist, as he is a land holder. MADRAS AGRI. RELIEF ACT (1938), S. 3

In defining the term "creditor" in S. 3 of Act IV of 1938, so as to include his heirs, legal representatives and assigns the Legislature must be presumed to have intended to refer to those who are the legal heirs or the legal assigns and not to persons who claim to have acquired rights in a manner which the law does not recognise. If a debt under an earlier mortgage has in some informal way been made over to another before a second deed is executed in his name, he cannot by virtue of such informal transfer, be deemed to be the assign of the previous mortgage of the latter's legal representative. ——S. 4 (c)—Scope—"Rent"—Rent due to Local Board as trustee of chatram estate—Not liable to scaling down.

The exemption in S. 4 (c) of Madras Act IV of 1938 will cover any sum payable to a local authority even though it partakes of the nature of rent, and it makes no difference whether the rent in question be an ordinary contractual rent or a rent governed by the special provisions of the Madras Estates Land Act, which would bring it within the definition of "rent" under Act IV of 1938. The words "any other sum" in S. 4 (c) must be read in their natural and wide sense not restricted by the proximity of the special words preceding, and the ejusdem generis rule should not be applied. Rent due under the Madras Estates Land Act to a District Board as a trustee of a chatram estate is therefore not liable to be scaled down under Act IV of 1938. The mere fact that an asset of a joint family, in the shape of a security bond executed in favour of the family by another, has been assigned to a member of the family in lieu of maintenance, would not make the liability of the debtor under the security bond a liability in respect of maintenance protected by S. 4 (g) of the Madras Act IV of 1938. Prima facie, S. 6 of Madras Act IV of 1938 contemplates the existence of a larger agriculturist unit consisting of a family of several branches, one branch of which is headed by the father who is disqualified from being an agriculturist under one or other of the provisos to S. 3, in which case his sons would be also disqualified as long as they are joint. The section does not apply to a case where there is no such larger unit, and where the family consists only of a father and his sons, the latter would be entitled to the benefits of the Act, if his assessment to income tax, which is the ground of his disqualification, has been made in his individual capacity and not as manager of the joint family of himself and his sons. ——S. 7—Mortgage debt—Purchaser of part of mortgaged property undertaking to pay debt but failing to do so—Suit by mortgagee for redemption—Right to get whole debt scaled down—Purchaser not agriculturist—If bar to claim of mortgagor to scaling down.

The purchaser of a part of mortgaged property who was directed to pay off the mortgage debt failed to do so, and therefore the whole mortgage debt remained due when Madras Act IV of 1938 came into force. The mortgagor brought a suit for redemption of the mortgage claiming the benefit of the Act as an agriculturist and depositing in Court the amount which he alleged to be due under the mortgage when scaled down under the Act.

Held, that the mortgage money being liable to be scaled down under the Act, the mortgagee was entitled, on payment of the scaled down amount, to call upon the mortgagee to deliver up the mortgage deed duly discharged, i.e., to redeem the mortgage as a whole in spite of the fact that the purchaser was not an "agriculturist".

Held, further, that the Court by allowing the mortgagor to redeem the mortgage as a whole, was not conferring the benefit of the Act on the non-agriculturist purchaser, because the latter would have to refund to his vendor (the mortgagor) the purchase money reserved with him, which as a result of the scaling down, he would not have to pay to the mortgagee. In execution of decrees obtained by third parties against a mortgagor, a portion of the hypotheca passed to X, an agriculturist, and the rest of the hypotheca to Y, who was not an agriculturist. The mortgagor a non-agriculturist thus ceased to have any interest in the hypotheca. In a suit by the mortgagee impleading X and Y, a preliminary decree for sale was passed on 16—8—1937 for Rs. 37,772; when Madras Act IV of 1938 came into force, on an application by X, the decree was amended, so far as X was concerned, by scaling down the amount declared due to Rs. 6 638-8-3, including costs the rest of the decree being left in tact. A final decree was passed in November, 1939 and the mortgagee thereafter applied for sale against X and Y. Pending execution, X deposited in Court the sum of Rs. 6638-8-3, and the execution costs for payment to the mortgagee on condition that he was allowed to redeem the whole of the mortgage security, so as to enable him to claim contribution from Y for a rateable proportion of the amount paid. He also filed an application for entering satisfaction of the decree as a whole.

Held, (1) that X was not, on payment of the scaled down amount, entitled to redeem the whole mortgage, as the security must be deemed to be split up in such cases in order to give effect to the provisions of Madras Act IV of 1938 which would benefit only agriculturist debtors and would not affect remedies against debtors who were not agriculturists; (2) that the principle, that where an agriculturist debtor redeems the mortgage by paying the mortgage money as scaled down under the Act, a purchaser of a portion of the hypotheca is also benefited under the general law by reason of the whole property being relieved of the incumbrance, although such purchaser is not an agriculturist and cannot himself claim the benefit of the Act, could not be extended to a case like the present where the mortgagor was not an agriculturist, and the question arose between purchasers of different portions of the hypotheca, some of whom were, and others were not, agriculturists; (3) that the mortgagee's right to recover the full amount of the debt from the properties in the hands of Y could not be nullified in order to safeguard X's possible right of recovering contribution from Y; (4) that though in certain circumstances the relief provided in the Agriculturists Relief Act might be of no practical benefit to an agriculturist debtor, the latter could not claim in seeking relief that the creditor's rights should be prejudiced to a greater extent than the provisions of the Act clearly warrant. ——Ss. 7 and 10—Status of agriculturist—Crucial date to decide—Claim to relief made in suit—Material date—Date of suit or date of hearing—Relevancy of.

Apart from Ss. 13, 19 and 23 of Madras Act IV of 1938, there is nothing in the Act which requires a debtor to prove his agriculturist status as on the date on which the matter is brought to the notice of the Court. Reading Ss. 7 and 10 of the Act together, in the absence of any provision in the Act, requiring proof that the debtor must continue to be an agriculturist also up to the time when the matter comes before the Court, it must be held that the debtor, in cases where his claim to relief is put forward during the trial of the suit, will be entitled to relief if he can show that he was an agriculturist on 1—10—1937 and on the commencement of the Act, 22 3—1938. ——Ss. 7 and 12—Scope—Payment after Act in excess of amount properly payable under Act and appropriated to interest—Power to re-appropriate to principal—Right to refund—Procedure.

Where payments made by a debtor in 1938 and 1939 have been definitely appropriated towards interest at the time, neither the debtor nor the creditor has the right to tear up the appropriations by an unilateral act. The Court has no power to re-appropriate the payments to principal in the absence of any provision for that course in Act IV of 1938. It is not sufficient to show that the creditor cannot by reason of the provisions of S. 7 recover more than the amount as scaled down under the Act, and the excess amount paid towards interest as scaled down cannot be recovered by the powers under Ss. 7 and 12 of the Act. The only way in which a debtor might get back money which he has paid after the Act came into force, in excess of the amount properly due under the Act, would be by establishing a right to a refund under the ordinary law on the ground that the payment has been made under a mistake. Where there is a family debt due by a Malabar tarwad under a promissory note by the present karnavan of the tarwad executed by him in renewal of earlier promissory notes dating back to 1923, when the debt was originally incurred under a promissory note by the then karnavan, the present karnavan who is liable for the debt, as also the junior members of the tarwad, may get the debt scaled down on the basis of the original liability. There is no warrant for holding that the executant karnavan is not entitled to trace his liability back to the earlier documents under which he was liable not as executant but as a member of the debtor tarwad. Not only the non-executant junior members but also the executant karnavan who has renewed the promissory note can trace back the liability to the original transaction of debt. The purchaser of property bound by a mortgage, seeking to scale down his "property liability" can go back to an antecedent mortgage by the same mortgagor over the same property, the date of the "property liability" being regarded as the date when the property originally became bound by the antecedent debt. But where the mortgage which binds the property is traced back only to a simple money debt due from the mortgagor, the antecedent debt cannot in any sense be regarded as binding the property purchased, and the purchaser cannot claim that his liability is a renewal of the previous money debt due from the mortgagor. Held, that apart from the pious obligation theory, when a junior coparcener joins in the execution of a document in renewal of a family debt for which he was previously liable only as a member of the joint family, he is entitled to have the debt scaled down as a renewal of the previous liability binding on himself. The petitioners' father executed a promissory note to the respondents on 6—4—1920, and a decree was passed in favour of the respondents on 1—11—1930 in a suit brought on the note. The petitioners were brought on the record as his legal representatives in execution, their father having died on 27—9—1936. After the Madras Act IV of 1938 came into force in March, 1938, the petitioners applied to have the decree scaled down claiming to be agriculturists. It was found that the petitioner's father was not an agriculturist, as before his death he had been assessed to property tax and was therefore disqualified under S. 3 (ii), proviso C.

Held, (1) that the petitioners who were agriculturists were entitled to claim relief under the Act as agriculturists through their father whose liability they had inherited was himself not an agriculturist; (2) that the liability sought to be scaled down was the liability incurred under the promissory note of 1920, and the petitioners' succession to their father's estate on his death in 1936 could not be the basis of any new liability; (3) that it was immaterial whether or not the debtor had the agriculturist character when the debt was actually incurred where it was incurred before 1—10—1937, and the material dates with reference to which such character had to be determined for purposes of S. 19, were 1—10—1937 and 22—3—1938 (date of commencement of the Act) and the date of the application; (4) the decree should therefore be scaled down under S. 8 of the Act. A person who by reason of purchase of property bound by a mortgage is under a liability to discharge that mortgage and subsequently discharges that liability by the execution of a fresh mortgage can be said to be renewing his own pre existing liability. It is immaterial whether or not the debtor had the character of an agriculturist when the debt was originally incurred if it was incurred prior to 1—10—1937. A person purchasing property subject to a mortgage becomes a debtor to the mortgagee to the extent of the liability under the existing mortgage binding that property, and when he discharges that liability by executing a fresh mortgage to the same mortgagee, he can claim that the original principal of the earlier mortgage was included in the principal of the fresh mortgage to the extent to which the amount due under the earlier mortgage contributes to the consideration of the fresh mortgage. The fact that the fresh mortgage comprises other property not covered by the pre-existing mortgage is immaterial. Nor would the question be affected by the fact that the later mortgage comprises an additional consideration besides the discharge of the earlier mortgage. The portion of consideration which is made up of the discharge of the earlier mortgage will be scaled down on the basis of the principal of that mortgage. ——S. 8—"Same creditor"—Promissory note—Prior note in name of guardian of payee then a minor—Scaling down.

The term "creditor" as defined in Act IV of 1938 does not include a person beneficially entitled to the amount lent. In the case of a decree of 1931 on a promissory note which can be traced back through a series of renewals in favour of the same persons as far as 1919, when the note discharged was one in favour of another as guardian for the payees under the notes of 1919 and thereafter (who were minors till then), the intervention of the guardian must be held to break the series of renewals, for the guardian is not the same creditor as the payees in the later notes. The debt can therefore be traced back only as far as 1919 and cannot be traced back earlier. Where the mode of dealing between a creditor and a debtor, adopted by the parties, is what is usually followed between a banker and customer, and at the end of each year's operations the account is settled by the parties and the resulting balance is treated as the principal carrying interest during the next year, the interest accruing due each year and dealt with in such manner does not come within the mischief of S. 8 (1) of Madras Act IV of 1938. ——S. 8 (1)—Construction—"All interest outstanding"—Meaning of—Interest accrued due but not payable till after 1—10—1937—If liable to be cancelled.

The word "outstanding" in S. 8 (1) of Madras Act IV of 1938 is used in its ordinary sense of "unpaid." Although a date is fixed in a document for the payment of interest, it must be deemed to accrue due from day to day. Where in a mortgage deed, interest for year ending March, 1938 was payable on 10th March, 1938, it must be held that interest from 10th March, 1937, up to 1—10—1937 had accrued and was outstanding within the meaning of S. 8 1) of Act IV of 1938 (though it was not payable until 10th March, 1938 and was not overdue) liable to be cancelled under S 8 (1). ——S. 8 (1)—Interest outstanding—Evidente of appropriation—Intention—Open payment—Payment of amount far greater than interest then due—Appropriation of part towards principal after satisfying interest—If intended.

Appropriation is the indication of an intention that the money would be applied in a particular way. The most ordinary way of proving the intention is by proof of a statement made either orally or in writing. But that is not the only kind of proof possible. It may be proved by circumstantial evidence also, as is recognised in S. 60 of the Contract Act. Where a debtor paid his creditor in 1936, a sum of money which was greater by several hundreds of rupees than the interest then due, endorsing the payment generally as paid towards the debt under a promissory note of 1934 executed in renewal of a note of 1931 and there is nothing to suggest that he did not know the extent of his indebtedness or the amount of interest due or that he intended only to pay interest and not principal, it can and ought to be held that the debtor on that occasion did intend to pay off part of the principal of his debt and indicate that intention by the very act of the payment, and the debt has to be scaled down on that basis and not as if the entire amount paid was made in reduction of the principal and as if all the interest was outstanding on 1—10—1937, so as to be wiped out under S. 8 (1) of Madras Act IV of 1928. S. 10 (2) (i) of Madras Act IV of 1938 does not require that the rate of interest per cent. should be specified in the mortgage deed. Where the deed provides not only that the income of the mortgaged properties is to be taken by the mortgagee in possession in lieu of interest without any liability to account but also that the mortgagor should in addition pay annually a certain sum till redemption, the amount cannot be regarded as anything but interest on the principal money. The appropriation by the mortgagee in terms of the bond in such a case cannot however be deemed to be constructive payments by the mortgagor for purposes of S. 8 (2).

——S. 9—Applicability—Promissory note in April, 1937, in settlement of accounts of dealings dating back to February, 1932—Scaling down—Procedure under S. 9—Appropriation of payments.

A promissory note was executed on 11—4—1937 for Rs. 415-7-3, in settlement on account of dealings going back to 14-2-1932. In 1939 a suit was brought to recover Rs. 232-11-0 being the balance due under that note and subsequent dealings. The indebtedness thus started early in 1932 and by 1—10—1932, a sum of Rs. 327-15-6 had been advanced. Between 1—10—1932 and the commencement of Madras Act IV of 1938, further advances amounting in all to Rs. 792-14-3 had been made. By this time, however, the principal amount due had become reduced to a little more than the amount of principal outstanding on 1—10—1932, thus indicating payments towards the principal amounting to far more than the principal sum outstanding on 1—10—1932.

Held, that applying the general rule that payments towards principal will be deemed to have been appropriated first to the earliest advance, the whole of the sums advanced before 1—10—1932 must be deemed to have been discharged before the Act came into force, and there could therefore be no question of scaling down the debt on the basis of renewals and taking it back to a date anterior to 1—10—1932. For the purpose of the Act, the debt therefore started only on 11—4—1937 and S. 9 of the Act would apply. (Wadsworth, J.) SATYANARAYANAMURTHY v. KANAKA-

It is not necessary for the purpose of S. 10 (2) (1) of Madras Act IV of 1938 that the mortgagee should be in physical possession of the property. A usufructuary mortgagee who leases the mortgaged land to his mortgagor remains in possession of the mortgaged land for purposes of S. 10 (2) (1). The usufructuary mortgage and lease back cannot be regarded as a simple mortgage bearing interest; and a decree for rent or damages for use and occupation is not a decree for interest liable to be wiped out under S. 8 of the Act. An annual compensation paid by a borrower to a lender for the use of the lender's money is interest, by whatever name it is called; the words "rate of interest" in S. 10 (2) (i) of Madras Act IV of 1938 do not necessarily imply that a particular percentage should need be stipulated in the document, provided that the actual amount of the interest is fixed by the terms of the document. Under a kanom document of 1924, the petitioner demised the land to the respondent under a kanom document, receiving Rs. 300 and the respondent undertook to pay to the petitioner Rs. 36 annually as rent or michawaram. In 1927, the petitioner borrowed a further sum of Rs 200, under a puramkadam document, whereby a further charge to the extent of Rs. 200 was to be created over the jenm interest in favour of the respondent (kanomdar) and in consideration of the further advance, the petitioner agreed to pay Rs. 20 to the respondent annually as labham. The respondent was entitled to adjust this sum of Rs. 20 annually towards the rent which he had to pay to the petitioner and to pay only the balance.

Held, that the effect of the puramkadam deed was that there was a contract whereby a mortgage was created for a sum of Rs. 200 with an annual interest of Rs. 20, which meant that the loan carried interest at 10 per cent. and the transaction was not therefore protected by S. 10 (2) (i) of the Act. ——S. 10 (2) (ii)—Applicability—Sale of land—Mortgage by vendee to vendor for sale price—Subsequent sale by vendee—Direction in sale-deed for payment of sale price to original vendor—Second purchaser executing fresh mortgage to original vendor—Effect.

When there is a debt incurred originally for the balance of the purchase price of land, embodied in a mortgage, which undergoes renewals the debt due under the final renewal is a debt in respect of which the protection of S. 10 (2) (ii) of Madras Act IV of 1938 can be invoked. The exclusion of such a liability from the operation of the Act depends not on the actual subsistence of the charge but on the question whether in the beginning the liability was one in respect of which a charge is provided under S. 55 (iv) (b), T. P. Act. Where a person sells land to another and takes a mortgage from him of the land sold for the sale price and the purchaser sells the land in turn to another directing him to pay off the mortgage debt due to the original vendor, the original purchaser and the purchaser from him have notice of the subsistence of the lien, and in the absence of any thing to show that the lien has been terminated by any act of the vendor, when the ultimate purchaser himself executes a mortgage to the original vendor in respect of the amount which he is directed to pay to him under his purchase, he is in fact renewing a liability in respect of which at its inception the vendor's lien subsisted. That liability falls under S. 10 (2) (ii) and cannot therefore be scaled down. (Wadsworth and Patanjali Sastri, JJ.) VIJAYALAKSHMI AMMAL v. RANGACHARIAR. 1942 M.W.N. 751=(1942) 2 M.L.J. 806.

——S. 14 — Applicability — Marumakkathayam family—Debt due by—Agriculturist and non-agriculturist members—Liability of—Scaling down.

S. 14 of the Madras Act IV of 1938 applies to a Marumakkathayam Hindu family also, and the word "member" therein is used as equivalent to "members entitled to a share," and a sub-thavazhi, the smaller unit which can claim such a share will thus be a member for purposes of S. 14. The proper procedure, having regard to the section in the case of a Marumakkathayam family will be to find out, first, which members (including any sub-thavazhi entitled to partition) are agriculturists and which are non-agriculturists; secondly, to ascertain how many shares belong to the agriculturist members and how many to the non-agriculturist members; and after scaling down the debt, to hold the agriculturist section of members collectively liable for the proportionate share of the debt as scaled down and the non-agriculturist section of the members collectively liable for the proportionate share of the debt as not scaled down. The creditor will thus have to divide his execution proceedings into two parts, one relating to the scaled down decree and the other relating to the unscaled down decree and so far as the family properties are concerned, each of these parts of the decree will be executable against a composite fraction of the family property. The operation of S. 14 will not in any way affect the personal liability of the executants of the promissory note evidencing the debt and they will be entitled to scale down the decree so far as their personal liability is concerned not by rendering themselves liable for a part only of the debt, but by being liable for the whole of the debt subject to such reduction as they may be entitled to if they are agriculturists (Wadsworth and Patanjali Sastri, JJ.) NALANUNNI v. DAKSHAYANI AMMA. 202 I.C. 538=15 R.M. 521=1942 M.W.N. 274=A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 456=(1942) 1 M.L.J. 418.

——S. 14—Scope—"Debt"—"Family debt"—Meaning of.

S. 14 of the Madras Act IV of 1938 does not confer upon a non-agriculturist the power to get rid of his liabilities in a case in which those liabilities do not necessarily form part of a major liability to which the Act necessarily applies. The term "debt" in the section must be restricted to a debt due from an agriculturist and the term "family debt" therefore necessarily means a debt due from a family which was an agriculturist at the commencement of the Act or at least on 1st October, 1937. ——S. 15—Applicability—Assignee of right to collect jodi—If landholder—Jodi payable to assignee—If can be scaled down as rent or as debt.

"Jodi" is rent according to the definition in Madras Act IV of 1938, but an assignee of the right to collect jodi is not a landholder as defined by the Madras Estates Land Act, and since that which can be scaled down under S. 15 of Act IV of 1938 is rent payable to a landholder under the Madras Estates Land Act, S 15 will not cover that which is rent under Madras Act IV of 1938 but is not payable to a landholder as defined by the Estates Land Act. Jodi due to an assignee cannot therefore be scaled down under S. 15 of Act IV of 1938. The payment being in the nature of rent, it is not a debt and cannot be scaled down under any provision of Act IV of 1938. ——Ss 15, 16 and 19—Applicability—Decree for rent, land cess and costs—Land subsequently becoming "estate" under Madras Estates Land Act—Application for scaling down—Procedure—If to be scaled down as rent or as a decree for a debt.

On 18—3—1936 the appellant obtained a decree for rent or damages for use and occupation in respect of the period from 15—12—1932 to 15—10—1935. He also got a decree for land cess in respect of the same lands for the period from 30—6—1931 to 30—6—1935. When Act IV of 1938 came into force the judgment-debtor applied under Ss. 8, 15 and 19 for scaling down the amount due under the decree. He did not, however, make the deposit of rent as required by S. 15 of Act IV of 1938. In the meantime the Madras Estates Land (Amendment) Act of 1936 came into force and the land in respect of which the decree for rent had been obtained became an estate.

Held, (1) that the decree having been passed for an ordinary contractual rent which alone could be claimed at the time when the Court dealt with the matter, there was no reason for holding that the effect of the Amendment of 1936 to the Madras Estates Land Act would be to change the character of that rent or the relations of the parties as they stood at the time of the previous adjudication, and therefore the decree could be scaled down as a decree for a debt only, as the rent which was decreed was not rent as defined by Act IV of 1938; (2) that S. 15 of Act IV of 1938 had no application and S. 16 which was merely a rider to S. 15 did not also apply; and the decree for land cess had to be scaled down as any other decree for a debt; and the decree for costs should be treated as a debt incurred on the date of the decree. He is therefore an intermediary as defined by S. 3 (i). Where a challan for the deposit of the amount required under S. 15 of Madras Act IV of 1938 was applied for and obtained on 30—9—1939, but the amount was actually deposited only on 2—10—1939, the deposit has to be treated as having been made on 2—10—1939 and not on 30—9—1939, unless it is proved that the applicant was prevented from making the deposit on 30—9—1939, by some default on the part of the treasury officer, or by the bank or by some delay on the part of the Court in issuing the challan so as to prevent the applicant from making the deposit in time. ——S. 15—Deposit of kattubadi—If to include interest thereon—Burden of proof.

There is no statutory provision as to interest on arrears of kattubadi, as in the case of rent under S. 61 of the Madras Estates Land Act. Therefore the ordinary rules of the Interest Act will apply to the case of kattubadi, and a demand would be necessary to make such interest payable. Where such interest is payable, it is to be included in the deposit made under S. 15 of Madras Act IV of 1938. A deposit of kattubadi without interest is therefore bad when interest is payable, but good when no such interest is payable. The burden of proof is on the landlord to prove that there was such a demand as would make interest payable. ——Ss. 15 and 19—Distinction between- Claim for rent—Order entering up part satisfaction—Appealability—Order as to costs—Whether gives right of appeal—Payment of panava purappad—Whether rent.

Under S. 19 of the Madras Act IV of 1938, what is contemplated is a complete recalculation of the amount to be decreed with reference to the provisions of Ss. 8 and 9 of the Act, and the result normally is a decree which has a totally different basis from the original decree. If the amount already paid towards the debt is sufficient to wipe off the debt as scaled down, then an order of satisfaction is recorded and against that there is no right of appeal. If, however, the debt as scaled down is not discharged the section contemplates the drafting of a fresh decree capable of execution and this fresh decree gives rise to a right of appeal. But the process contemplated under S. 15 of the Act is different. In such a case there is no question of recalculating the amount due under the decree for rent and all that was to be done is to examine the amount of the deposit and see whether it is sufficient to satisfy the rent as decreed for fasli 1347 and to what extent it is sufficient to satisfy the rent as decreed for fasli 1346 and then to enter up satisfaction of the older arrears under the decree proportionately to the extent to which the arrears for those two faslis have been satisfied. In such a case the whole process is not one of amendment but one of satisfaction and there is no right of appeal. And the mere fact that the Act in such a case safeguards the decree for costs will not make the order appealable. Periodical payments of panaya purappad are not rent for the purpose of S. 15 of Madras Act IV of 1938 and an assignee of the right to collect arrears of rent is not a jenmi or intermediary for the purpose of that section. If, however, the rent of the holding was still payable to the original landholder (tarwad) who had to make over part of the rent to the subdivided group, the scaling down can presumably be ordered only on payment of the full rent of the holding. There is no authority for holding that an application under S 15 (4) of Madras Act IV of 1938 can be made only by an individual and not by a receiver on behalf of a group of individuals where by a preliminary decree for partition of Malabar tarwad owning a leasehold interest in agricultural lands, a receiver is appointed to hold the properties of the tarwad during the process of partition, if no partition has been effected by metes and bounds on the date of the coming into force of the Act, the position is that the leasehold interest becomes vested in individual sharers as tenants-in-common and the receiver represents all of them. All the tenants-in-common are collectively liable to pay rent and should proceed collectively to get any relief, and if the receiver under the orders of the Court makes the necessary deposit and applies for relief under S. 15 (4) on behalf of

In a suit for redemption of a kanom, a decree was passed in 1936, declaring firstly, the amounts due to the tenants for improvements and for the kanom amount, and declaring secondly, that on the deposit by the plaintiff (landlord) of these amounts the defendants should hand over the property and the documents to the plaintiff. Then followed a series of clauses specifying the amount due from the defendants to the plaintiff, viz., for arrears of rent, for costs, commission fee and also the rate at which future rent was payable, and the decree provided that "set-off is allowed." While the decree was still unsatisfied the tenants applied under S. 15 (4) of Madras Act IV of 1938, praying that the deposit towards the arrears of rent for faslis 1347 and 1346 might be taken into consideration and the arrears for the earlier faslis scaled down. The decree holder opposed this on the ground that by reason of the provision for set-off in the decree, no rent was outstanding when Madras Act IV of 1938 came into force. He also contended that this was really a case of two cross-decrees and that the lesser decree must be deemed to be merged in the greater decree.

Held, (1) that until the holder of the greater decree actually executed and set off the amount due from him to the holder of the lesser decree, the latter still had a decree which was unsatisfied and which might become effective if the greater decree were satisfied in some other way; (2) that the decree, not having been drawn up in the form contemplated by S. 6 (2) of the Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act after setting off the amount due for rent against the amount due to the tenants for improvements, etc., had become final in the absence of any appeal, and as the decree actually passed took the form of two separate decrees, one of ——S. 15 (4)—Rate of rent—Duty of Court to decide correct rate of lawful rent—Unlawful enhancement—If can be acted upon.

A landholder is not entitled in proceedings under S. 15 of the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act to insist on his ryot depositing rent at a rate which represents an unlawful enhancement. The Court dealing with a deposit under S. 15 (4) must necessarily find out what is the correct rate of rent, and in deciding what is the correct rate of rent, it must be governed by the principles laid down in the particular Act governing the tenancy. Where there is a deposit, after the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act came into force, an amount of money earmarked for the rent of a particular holding as decreed by a Court, it would have to be drawn out by the landholder only in accordance with the provisions of S. 15 (4) of the Act for credit, firstly, to the two faslis mentioned therein; the landholder so withdrawing the money would presumably be relieved of the necessity of recording satisfaction of the decree for earlier faslis to the extent to which the statutory appropriation is made, the question of the satisfaction of such decree being left to be worked out in accordance with the provisions of S. 15 (4). Although ordinarily in an application under S. 15 (4) of the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act, a plea that the tenant was entitled to abatement of rent for non-possession of part of the lands in his holding or for failure of irrigation supply would not be available to the tenant, yet in a case where the agricultural tenure is itself based upon a contract which provided for such abatement of rent, the Court would, in an application under S. 15 (4), have jurisdiction to consider pleas based upon the terms in the patta (contract) which contemplates fluctuations on certain grounds. The appellant's decree was directed to be amended on a petition by the judgment-debtor under S. 19 of the Madras Act IV of 1938. Against the order directing the amendment, the appellant preferred an appeal as provided by the rule framed under the Act, the memorandum of appeal being accompanied by a copy of the decretal order of the trial Court, not by a copy of the amended decree. The lower appellate Court entertained the appeal as an appeal against the order and dismissed it on the merits, holding that the decision under appeal was correct. The appellant then preferred a civil miscellaneous second appeal to the High Court against the appellate decision; the respondent objected to the maintainability of the appeal in the lower Court itself on the ground that the rule providing for a right of appeal had been declared to be ultra vires. The appellant then prayed that he might be permitted to pay the deficit court fee both in the lower appellate Court and in the High Court, so that his appeal to the lower appellate Court might be treated as an appeal against the amended decree and his appeal to the High Court as a regular second appeal.

Held, (1) that it could not be said that when the lower Court had wrongly assumed an appellate jurisdiction but had declined to interfere with the trial Court's decree, any right of second appeal was conferred by such wrongful assumption of jurisdiction, although the position would be different if the lower appellate Court assuming a jurisdiction which was not in fact vested in it had amended the trial Court's decree; (2) that the order directing the amendment of the decree was not in itself a sufficient substitute for the amended decree without attaching to that order a copy of the original decree even assuming that O. 41, R. 1, C. P. Code, would be sufficiently complied with, if an appeal against the amended decree were accompanied by a copy of the original decree together with a copy of the order directing amendment of the decree according to the practice in the mofussil Courts; (3) that there was therefore no valid appeal against the amended decree in the lower appellate Court, and the present appeal to the High Court could not properly be treated as a regular second appeal by merely recovering the deficient court-fee to give the appeal a character which legally it could not possess. Where in a mortgage suit the preliminary decree was passed before Madras Act IV of 1938 came into force and the final decree is passed after the Act came into force, the omission on the part of the debtor to raise a plea under the Act in the final decree proceedings would not bar the debtor from taking advantage of the special procedure laid down in the Act for scaling down the decree debt. ——S. 19—Applicability—Second appeal pending at time of coming into force of Act—Dismissal subsequently—Application to scale down decree to trial Court by person party to suit but not party to appeal or second appeal—Maintainability—Procedure.

Where a decree has been the subject-matter of an appeal, the decree of the appellate Court supersedes the decree of the Court below, even though the appellate decree is one of affirmance of the decree of the Court below and does not reverse or modify it. It makes no difference to this principle whether the particular defendant affected was or was not a respondent in the appeal. Where a second appeal pending at the time when Madras Act IV of 1938 came into force is subsequently dismissed and the trial Court's decree is thereby confirmed, and an application is made under S. 19 of the Act for scaling down the decree by a person who was a party to the suit but not a party to the appeal and second appeal, it cannot be entertained. The only decree to be executed being the appellate decree the trial Court has no longer any jurisdiction to alter the superseded decree under S. 19. Nor can the High Court alter its own decree under S. 19, as that section applies

If for the purpose of scaling down a debt embodied in a decree, the Court finds it necessary to ascertain what payments have been made towards the decree in question, the bar in O. 21, R. 2, C. P. Where in execution of a final decree passed in 1919 in a suit on a mortgage of 1913, a sale is held and the properties are sold in 1939 without applying the provisions of Act IV of 1938, the mere holding of the sale without first applying the provisions of Act IV in favour of a person interested in the hypotheca would not amount to a material irregularity such as would justify the setting aside of the sale at the instance of a puisne mortgagee who became a mortgagee in April, 1937, when there is no application filed or pending under Act IV of 1938 at the time of the sale, and when it is not clear that the decree-holder brought the properties to sale with the knowledge that the puisne mortgagee was entitled to the benefits of the Act. But such a puisne mortgagee having, by reason of his mortgage, acquired before 1—10—1937, an interest in property bound by the mortgage decree, and having therefore become liable to discharge the debt decreed, must be deemed to be a judgment-debtor entitled to apply under S. 19 of the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act to scale down the decree if he is an agriculturist. A judgment-debtor is entitled to apply for relief under S. 19 of Madras Act IV of 1938 so long as the decree continues to subsist except in the circumstances contemplated in S. 20 of the Act; and he is equally entitled to avert a sale of his property by making a deposit under O. 21, R. 89, C. P. Code, before the sale is confirmed. Where, pending an application for scaling down a decree debt after a sale in execution has taken place, the debtor deposits the decretal amount under O. 21, R. 89, C. P. Code, to get the sale set aside, and ultimately, as a result of the scaling down, the decree debt is found discharged, satisfaction of the decree can be entered up, and the deposit returned to the debtor. ——S. 19—Scope—Suit on mortgage—Payment made pending suit—Appropriation in decree before 1st October, 1937, towards interest without objection—Re-appropriation—Permissibility.

There is no provision in Madras Act IV of 1938 for re-appropriation of payments made before 1st October, 1937, excepting the proviso to S. 19, which deals with payments made under a decree. Where pending a suit on a mortgage, the defendant makes a payment which is appropriated in the decree (dated 3—10—1936) to the interest due on the mortgage without objection, it is not open to the defendant to urge in second appeal that the payment should be appropriated towards the principal. The appropriation made by the Court is just as binding on the parties who do not object to it as if it were made by one of the parties before the decree was drafted. There is nothing in the Act which permits the re-opening of such an appropriation which is not in respect of a payment made under the decree. ——Ss. 19 and 20—Scope and effect—Execution sale after Act—Purchase by decree-holder with leave to set off—Application by judgment debtor under Ss. 20 and 19—Stay—Procedure—Duty of Court—Confirmation of sale—Conditions for.

A Court has no power to treat as satisfied a decree which at the time of the stay under S. 20 of the Madras Act IV of 1938 was unsatisfied and to allow a set-off by the decree holder to be completed on the basis of the decree which the Court has to scale down under S. 19. When execution proceedings are stayed and the petition under S. 19 is filed when there is a subsisting decree-debt, the Court is obliged to apply the procedure laid down in S. 19 and scale down that decree. There is clearly no procedure under the Act for setting aside a sale held after the Act; but that does not mean that the sale has to be confirmed regardless of the effect of the scaling down application. Where the decree holder is the purchaser and has leave to set-off against the purchase price the amount due to him under the decree, if the scaling down of the decree results in the decree-debt being reduced to something below the purchase price, clearly the decree-holder has to put into Court the balance before the sale can be confirmed. ——S. 20—Discretion to refuse stay or to impose conditions—Delay or obstructive tactics of debtor—If ground for refusal of stay

S. 20 does not allow the Court a discretion to refuse a stay in a case in which the conduct of the debtor has been obstructive; nor does it contain any provision for imposing conditions for the grant of stay. S. 23 contains no time limit within which the setting aside of a sale in execution has to be followed by an application under S. 19. There is nothing in the Act to prevent the debtor waiting after a sale in execution has been set aside to the last possible minute and then filing a stay petition under S. 20 just at the time when a fresh sale is being held. (Wadsworth, J.) DHARMAYYA v. YANADI REDDI. 204 I.C. 147 = 55 L.W. 721 = 1942 M.W.N. 664 = A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 731 = (1942) 2 M.L.J. 585.

——S. 20—Period of 60 days—Starting point— Interim stay followed by stay absolute—If contemplated.

The procedure of an executing Court in granting an ad interim stay followed by an absolute order is not contemplated by S. 20 of Madras Act IV of 1938; when once a stay has been granted limitation for an application under S. 19 begins to run. (Wadsworth, J.) NATARAJA GRAMANI v. SIVAKOLUNDU GRAMANI. 1942 M.W.N. 789 = 55 L.W. 844 (1) = (1942) 2 M.L.J. 735.

——S. 20—Proceedings under O. 21, R. 90, C. P. Code—Stay of—Duty of Court.

Proceedings under O. 21, R. 90, C. P. Code, are clearly proceedings in execution, which must necessarily be stayed when an order under S. 20 of Madras Act IV of 1938 has been passed, until the disposal of a pending application under S. 19 of the Act. The fact that a sale held before 1—10—1937 cannot be set aside under the Act does not justify the Court in going on with proceedings relating to such a sale when all execution proceedings have been stayed. (Wadsworth and Patanjali Sastri, JJ.) VELAYUDHA MUDALI v. CHENGANNA NAIDU. 204 I.C. 256 = 1942 M.W.N. 550 = A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 727 = (1942) 2 M.L.J. 311.

——S. 20—Scope—Duty of Court—Delay in applying for stay—If ground for dismissal on ground of waiver—Conditional order of stay—Permissibility.

Madras Act IV of 1938 does not compel a judgment-debtor to make an application under S. 20 of the Act for stay of execution at an early stage, and simply because he failed to ask for stay in a prior application for execution, he cannot be deemed to have waived his right to apply for a stay later. He can make his application at any stage, and even though it be made not in good faith, the terms of S. 20 leave no discretion to the Court to reject it or to make a conditional order. The section does not permit of a conditional order. The words "the decree shall be executed as it stands" in the proviso to S. 20 of Madras Act IV of 1938, have reference to the frame of the decree at the time of the execution having regard to any changes which it may have undergone in the trial Court, and not to the frame of the decree as it stood at the time of the stay order. The words "notwithstanding anything contained in the Act to the contrary" in the proviso to S. 20 have no application when the decree has in fact been amended, though erroneously, before execution has actually taken place but have reference presumably to the provisions of S. 7 which prohibit the execution of a decree against an agriculturist in so far as a decree is for an amount in excess of the sum as scaled down under Ch. II of the Act. Where an application is made by a judgment-debtor for scaling down after the lapse of sixty days from the grant of stay and the decree is scaled down in spite of the objection of the decree-holder, it is not open to the latter to urge before the executing Court that the decree to be executed is the decree as it stood before the amendment. The decree-holder being bound by the amendment, though wrongly made, execution can proceed only on the basis of the decree as amended. ——S. 21—Applicability—Conditions—Continuance of insolvency at time of application—If essential.

S. 21 of Madras Act IV of 1938 is intended to provide for pending insolvencies, and to lay down that when a dividend has been paid in such an insolvency, the Act would not apply but that if there had been no dividend, the Act would apply and the debts payable in insolvency would be liable to be scaled down if the insolvent was a person who, but for his insolvency, would have been an agriculturist. S. 21 cannot properly apply to the case of a person who has at some time in the distant past been adjudicated an insolvent, if he is not an insolvent during the relevant period. ——S 28—Rules framed under G. O. No. 2634 (Development), dated 27th October, 1939—Rule 2—Application by debtor for declaration of amount of debt having regard to the provisions of Act IV of 1938—Averment in the application that debt was barred by limitation—Proper procedure.

Whatever may be the position, when a debtor is seeking to resist an application by the creditor under the rules framed under Madras Act IV of 1938, he cannot ask the Court for a declaration under the rules, of the amount of the debt unless he concedes that there is a debt upon which the provisions of Act IV can operate. Though under sub-rule (2) of rule 2 the Court may inquire into a petition in which the debtor asserts that the debt has been discharged by the provisions of Act IV of 1938, itself, there is no occasion for the Court under the rules to go into a claim by the debtor to scale down a debt which has been discharged in full or has become unenforceable by the operation of some other law than Act IV (for instance the law of limitation) for to do so would be to give an adjudication on hypothetical facts. R. 2 of the Rules (prescribing the procedure whereby either a creditor or a debtor can apply to the Court for a declaration of the amount of a non-decretal debt) framed under S. 28 of the Madras Act IV of 1938 is neither ultra vires the Provincial Government nor in contravention of any provision of law. Under R. 9 of the Rules of 1939 framed under S. 28 (2) of Madras Act IV of 1938, a right of appeal is given against an order declaring the amount of a debt under R. 7 Where the Court holds that a debt which is sought to be scaled down was one falling within the purview of S. 10 (2) (ii) of the Act and therefore exempt from the operation of the Act, the decision is a decision that the debt is immune from reduction under the Act and is not a declaration of the amount of the debt. No appeal therefore lies against such a decision. (Wadsworth and Patanjali Sastri, JJ.) VIJAYALAKSHMI AMMAL v. RANGACHARIAR. 1942 M.W.N. 751=(1942) 2 M.L.J. 806.

——S. 28, R. 9—Scope—If ultra vires—Tests to determine validity of rules under statute.

The validity of a rule framed under a statute is to be determined not so much by ascertaining whether it confers rights or merely regulates procedure, but by determining whether the rule is in conformity with the powers conferred under the statute and whether it is consistent with the statute, reasonable and not contrary to general principles. R. 9 of the new rules framed under S. 28 of Madras Act IV of 1938, and promulgated in G. O. No. 2634, dated 27-10-1939 providing for an appeal and second appeal from an order under R. 7 of the Rules, as if it were a decree in an original suit, is a reasonable and convenient qualification of the procedure for giving effect to the substantive provisions of the Act, not offending against any principle of law and not inconsistent with anything in the Act. The rule is properly framed and not ultra vires the Provincial Government. (Wadsworth and Patanjali Sastri, JJ.) VENKAYYA v. PULLAYYA. I.L.R. A Councillor of the Madras Corporation having failed to attend the council meetings for more than three months owing to her having been imprisoned under the Defence of India Act, the Commissioner reported the matter to the council which passed a resolution refusing to restore her. In reply to a notice from the Commissioner, she admitted that she had ceased to hold office, and the Commissioner took steps to fill up the vacancy by election The admission was afterwards retracted, but acting on the earlier statement the Commissioner proposed to hold the election as arranged. An application was preferred to the Chief Judge of the Court of Small Causes under S. 54 of the Madras City Municipal Act by the councillor in question, and the Judge eventually decided against her. The election had in the meanwhile been held. An application to the High Court for a writ of certiorari to quash the proceedings was granted by a single Judge of the High Court.

Held, in appeal under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, that the writ should not have been issued, the proper procedure to challenge such an election was for the aggrieved party to file an election petition and not to apply for a writ of certiorari to quash the proceedings. A writ of certiorari can only be granted when there is no other suitable remedy available to the party aggrieved. ——Ss. 73 and 103—Applicability and scope—Suit for arrears of tax—Sale of property under S. 103—Mortgagee not party to suit—Right to payment of surplus sale proceeds.

S. 73 of the Madras City Municipal Act can apply only to sales in which property is sold free of all mortgages. S. 103 does not give the Corporation the right to sell property free of encumbrances. Where the Corporation files an ordinary suit for arrears of property tax and proceeds to sell the property in question in enforcement of the first charge given to it under S. 103 of the Madras City Municipal Act, the sale cannot affect the rights of a mortgagee who is not a party to the suit and whose mortgage is not at all mentioned in the sale proclamation. The rights of a mortgagee who is not so impleaded are not transformed into the lesser rights granted by S. 73. The mortgagee purchasing the property at such sale cannot therefore claim payment of the surplus sale proceeds after satisfying the arrears of tax due to the Corporation under the decree, on the ground that the sale was free of his mortgage, and he cannot rely on S. 73 of the Act in support of his claim. S. 80 read with Rr. 1 and 3 of Sch. There is no warrant for holding that S. 80 and Rr. 1 and 3 of Sch. V do not apply because of Ss. 380 to 384 of the Act. Ss. 380 to 384 of the Act do not preclude the Corporation from entering into a contract with the owner or occupier of the property to do the work for him. The Corporation can follow the procedure laid down in Ss. 380 to 384, but it does not need to do so if the owner or occupier who is required to do the work agrees to the Corporation doing it for him. Where it is found that persons discovered in a common gaming on a raid were there not for the purpose of gaming or betting on horse races but for the purpose of making arithmetical calculations of the amounts which might be payable to punters who had already made their bets.

What is punishable under S. 51 of the Madras City Police Act is fraud, unlawful device, or malpractice in betting or gaming, i.e., the fraud must be during the betting or gaming and not prior to or subsequent to it. The fraud or malpractice must be in the actual betting or gaming itself. Where it was alleged by the complainant that he betted with the appellants, that the horse on which he had bet won and that though he thereby became entitled to be paid the money promised by the appellants on the bet, they did not pay him.

Held, that the betting having taken place before the race was won and the paying over of the money being no part of the betting, the failure to pay the money that was due to the complainant was not a malpractice or fraud at all—still less an unlawful device, and could not therefore constitute an offence under S. 51 of the City Police Act. MADRAS CITY TENANTS' PROTECTION ACT (III OF 1922)—Applicability to area included in the municipal limits after the Act came into force—Single ejectment suit against defendants holding possession under different demises—Common questions of fact involved—No multifariousness.

In view of S. 3 (5) of the Madras General Clauses Act defining the term "City of Madras" to mean such local area as is so declared from time to time under any Act relating to municipal affairs, the Mambalam extension area included by a notification of the Government in 1934 in the City limits under S. 3 (9) of the Madras City Municipal Act will be covered by the expression "City of Madras" and the Madras City Tenants' Protection Act is applicable to that area and tenants in the area are entitled to the benefits of the Act. It may be stated as a general rule that where substantial common questions of fact are involved in different claims against different parties, their joinder in one suit will not be regarded as multifarious. Accordingly where the trustees of a temple had in 1882 demised the suit land in four equal parcels to four brothers who were the ancestors of the defendants under four separate muchilikas on the same terms for a fasli, but the lessees had continued in possession thereafter as tenants from year to year paying the same rent and on being asked to vacate had claimed permanent rights of occupancy, etc., and it was clear on the facts that there would be common questions arising for determination even if separate suits had been brought

The 2nd defendant mortgaged the properties in suit and another item of property to the 1st defendant, a co-operative society, and subsequently sold the properties to the plaintiff-appellant without disclosing the above mortgage, as if there was no encumbrance. An award having been made in favour of the 1st defendant in respect of the mortgage, the Deputy Registrar of Co-operative Societies acting as the sale officer, put up, in execution of the award an item of property which did not belong to the 2nd defendant and which was not comprised in the mortgage. The sale was duly confirmed and out of the sale proceeds, the 1st defendant society was paid the amount due under the award and the balance was paid to the 2nd defendant as if he were the owner of the same. The purchaser subsequently found that the 2nd defendant had no title to the property and moved the Deputy Registrar to set aside the sale on the ground that there was a mistake in the sale, and the sale was set aside. The society thereupon moved for execution of the award by sale of the properties comprised in the mortgage and the award, and the plaintiff (appellant) who had purchased the properties sued for a declaration that it was not open to the society to take out execution against the properties as the award had been fully satisfied by payment of money realised by the sale, and that the order setting aside the sale was illegal and without jurisdiction, and for an injunction restraining execution of the award by sale.

Held, (1) that the Deputy Registrar had no power under the proviso to Cl. (iii) of R. 22(10) of the Rules to set aside a sale after it had been confirmed, (2) that the suit was not barred by the provisions of S. 57 of the Act, as he could not move the Registrar under S. 57, not having been a party to the execution proceedings and not being a person who derived an interest subsequent to those proceedings from a party to those proceedings; (3) that as the purchaser at the invalid sale had succeeded in recovering his money from the society, the latter became entitled to execute the award, (4) that it would therefore be improper for the Court to grant the plaintiff an injunction, which was a discretionary relief, as the 1st defendant had subsequent to the filing of the suit acquired a right to execute the award by reason of the re-payment of the money it had got out of the invalid sale proceeds to the purchaser at that sale; (5) that the Court having refused relief to the appellant on account of the events which transpired subsequent to the suit the society could not be awarded costs in the suit or appeal (Kuppuswami Ayyar, J.) RATTAYYA v. MODUMUDI CO-OPERATIVE CREDIT SOCIETY. 55 L.W 702=1942 M.W.N 669=(1942) 2 M.L.J. 603.

On 6—11—1939, petitioner applied to attach a decree obtained by his debtor against second respondents. On 11—11—1939, second respondent filed an application under the Madras Debt Conciliation Act, and notice was ordered to the decree-holder. On 20—12—1939, the attachment of the decree was ordered. On 22—1—1941, an agreement was entered into under S. 14 (1) of the Act, between the second respondent and his creditor whereby the debt was considerably reduced. Petitioner put in an application to execute the attached decree, but he was met by the plea that the agreement under S. 14 (1) superseded the decree.

Held, that the agreement under S. 14 (1) was only an agreement which bound the parties to it, and did not supersede the decree obtained by the creditor in the Civil Court, and could not be pleaded in bar of execution of the attached decree by the stranger attaching decree-holder. MADRAS DISTRICT MUNICIPALITIES ACT (V OF 1920), S. 69 and Sch IV, R. 61—Lease of Municipal Farm—Formal contracts not taken—Loss to Municipality—Surcharge against chairman—When proper.

The chairman of a Municipality held an auction and leased out to the highest bidders the sewage farm belonging to the Municipality for a period of two years. As required by the rules the successful bidders signed unstamped muchilikas as soon as their bids were accepted. According to S. 69 of the Madras District Municipalities Act it was necessary that subsequently formal written contracts should have been drawn up and executed by the successful bidders and also signed by two Municipal Councillors. These contracts were not however taken in respect of the lease of the sewage farm. Subsequently the lessees committed default in paying the rent and the Municipality filed suits against them based on the contracts entered into by them or in the alternative on the basis of their liability to pay damages for use and occupation of the farm. The suits were originally dismissed for the reason that the contracts could not be proved, the formal documents prescribed by the statute not having been executed by the parties. The cases were taken up in revision to the High Court and they were remanded for trial on the alternative prayer for damages for use and occupation. The suits were thereupon partially decreed. The Examiner of Local Fund Accounts surcharged the chairman of the Municipality for the difference between the amounts decreed and the amounts claimed by way of rent, and also for the stamp duty and penalty paid into Court for proving the unstamped muchilikas. It was proved that an application for refund of the stamp duty paid was preferred to the Board of Revenue long after and that the same was dismissed as barred by limitation. It was also proved that according to the routine of procedure prevailing in the office of the Municipality the manager was responsible for taking the formal contracts from the successful bidders.

Held, that the chairman of the Municipal Council could not under the circumstances be said to have acted negligently in the matter of not taking formal contracts for the leases, and that the order of surcharge was not justified either as regards the stamp duty and penalty paid, or as regards the portion of the rent that was lost to the Municipality as a consequence of the formal contracts of lease not having been taken. An encroachment generally means something that hangs more or less permanently over the road and not something which momentarily passes over some portion of the road. What S. 181 of the Madras District Municipalities Act prohibits is the erecting without licence of a window, door, gate, or bar that, when in its normal open position, projects over the street. If the position of a window when open is parallel or almost parallel to the wall, it is not hit by S. 181 which deals with windows, etc., which in their normal open position project over the road. The petitioner constructed a window, the panels of which, when swung open, passed six inches beyond the road boundary; it was, however, found that when the window was fastened back, it did not project over the road; nor did it when it was shut. The petitioner was called upon by the executive authority of the Municipality under S. 181 (2) of the District Municipalities Acts to alter the window, but as he did not do so he was prosecuted and convicted.

Held, that the petitioner had not committed any encroachment falling within the mischief of S. 181 of the Act and he was therefore not liable to conviction under S. 181. In prosecution under S. 313 of the Madras District Municipalities Act read with S. 249 of the Act for running a hotel without a licence, the accused appeared and stated that he had applied for renewal of his licence and had deposited the licence fee. But as he did not produce a licence, the Magistrate thought that he had no defence and convicted him under Ss. 249 and 313 of the Act, holding that the accused admitted his guilt.

Held, that the plea of the accused was misunderstood and the conviction was therefore unsustainable. (Lakshmana Rao, J.) PICHUMANI AYYAR v. EMPEROR, 198 I.C. 104=14 R.M. 455=43 Cr.L.J. 368=1941 M.W.N. 1074=A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 281 (1).

——Ss. 270 B and 270-D—Construction and scope—Parking place and shed for buses—"Use of"—Meaning of—Liability for fees—Seizure of bus for arrears of fees effected by contractor to whom right to collect fees is farmed—Legality of.

It is quite an untenable proposition that a person cannot be said to use a cart-stand or car park because he is compelled to use a certain place for that purpose and not allowed to park his cart or car where he pleases. A parking place for motor buses and shed with waiting rooms and other conveniences provided by a Municipality are not merely intended for the convenience of the buses but also for the convenience of passengers; and if, in order to pick up passengers, a bus has to go to and stand in a certain place, it clearly "uses" that place within the meaning of S. 270-B of the District Municipalities Act for the purpose of its business, viz., the transportation of passengers. There is no question of voluntary or involuntary use of the parking space. If the owner wishes to ply his bus for hire he has to conform to the rules made in that behalf under the Motor Vehicles Act. He is therefore liable to pay the fees prescribed by a Municipality for the use of the parking place or shed. And a contractor to whom the right to collect the fees has been farmed can be directed and has power, to seize a bus under S. 270-D of the Act for arrears of fees which have not been paid by the owner. The fact that a Municipality does not itself seize the bus but directs the contractor to seize it does not render the seizure illegal or invalid. A Municipality cannot be said to act indiscreetly or improperly in recovering its dues under S. 270-B, in the manner provided by S. 270-D of the District Municipalities Act instead of by filing a suit. ——S. 321—License-fee on trade or industry—Charge—Principles in assessing—If to be levied on basis of tax—Power of Court to declare ultra vires.

A license fee for carrying on a particular trade or industry should not be regarded as a form of taxation the extent of which is to be governed purely by revenue considerations. The license-fee should bear as nearly as possible a relation to the cost of issuing the license and the cost of supervising the trade or of any special measures rendered necessary by the character of the trade. It is doubtful whether a Municipality would be justified in increasing the license fee chargeable upon a particular industry merely because of the cost of ordinary municipal services to which that industry is entitled by virtue of its position as a tax-payer in the Municipality. But if the industry involves special sanitary precautions, a special supervising agency or such like expenditure, it is reasonable to take this expenditure into account in fixing the amount of the fee. So long as the apportionment is made on a reasonable basis it is not for the Courts to interfere with the way in which it has been achieved. The matter is within the competence of the Municipal Council which is of course always subject to the control of the Government; and the Courts certainly should not declare a fee or a levy to be ultra vires merely because it is somewhat higher than might be thought necessary on a different view of the facts. Before the bar mentioned in the proviso to S. 53 of the Madras District Police Act can apply, the act for which the prosecution had been launched must be found to be an act contemplated by the statute itself. The "act" complained of and referred to in S. 53, is an act done "under the provisions of this Act." There is no warrant for holding that "act" in the proviso is more comprehensive than the word "act" in the body of the section itself. (Chandrasekhara Iyer, J.) K.V. MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT (1908), S 6.

Grant not of whole village—Entry in inam register and statement filed before Inam Commission—Construction of—Right of tenancy to claim occupancy.

An inam was granted to the head of a Math in 1763. The original grant was lost; the statement filed in 1861 by the Math before the Inam Commission stated in Col. VI that "the former zamindars who had jurisdiction over the village granted the land comprised within the chekunama (document describing the boundaries), for the Nitya Nivedya Deeparadhana and other Kainkaryams in the Math . . . . There is no sanad. As it was destroyed by fire it is not known in which fasli it was granted." In Cols. VII to IX, there was no entry under the heading "particulars of the inam", but under the heading "Gudicat" (total area of the village) was the entry 158·23 acres from which were deducted 25·10 acres described as private lands and 5·4 acres "inams of other persons", leaving 128·6 acres on the area cultivated by the grant. The particulars in Col. X stated that there was no chekunama, and gave boundaries which were admittedly the boundaries of the whole village. In the Inam Register the acreage was given as 128·22 acres and it was stated that "old inams disposed of as a distinct case—5·6 acres." There was overwhelming evidence to show that only 121·28 acres out of the total area of 158·23 acres, which formed the village, were dedicated to the deity of the Math."

Held, that Col. X of the statement must be read with the earlier columns and the entries in the Inam Register, and the grant therefore was not of the whole village but only of a part of it, and being less than a whole village did not constitute an "estate", so as to give the tenant of the lands a permanent right of occupancy under S. 6 of the Madras Estates Land Act (as amended in 1936).

There is nothing in S. 127 of the Madras Estates Land Act as amended in 1934, which overrides anything said in Expl 2 to S. 6 (1) which was inserted in the Act by a later amendment (Third Amendment Act of 1936), and the amendments made by the latter Act finally settled the right of parties. The appellant, an inamdar, obtained a decree against the respondents who were in occupation of the land in dispute, declaring that he held both the melwaram and kudiwaram rights in the land. This decree became final on 26—1—1934. On 22—1—1937, the appellant applied for possession of the land in execution of the decree.

Held, that the appellant not having obtained a final decree till after 1—11—1933, the date mentioned in the proviso to S. 127 (2) of the Act as amended in 1934, his case did not come within that proviso, and as the respondents were admittedly in possession on 30—6—1934 as provided by Expl. (2) to S. 6 (1) of the Act, the appellant was not entitled to possession.

A claim by a landholder for additional rent, in respect of a second crop raised on registered single crop land with the aid of water from wells dug by the ryot at his own expense, will be valid only if there is a contract between the landholder and the ryot, entered into before the date of the Madras Estates Land Act, undertaking to pay such additional rent alleged and proved.

——S. 20—Scope—Order by Collector—Finality—Suit under C.P. Code—When barred.

An application under S. 20 of the Madras Estates Land Act must be confined to the question whether the land in question is or is not of the description mentioned in S. 3 (16), (a) (b) or (c), or a question with regard to customary rights in the user of the land. The Collector's decision on such questions is final subject to the decision in a suit filed under sub-S. (2). But a landholder is not precluded from filing a suit under the C.P. Code to establish a right which does not fall within the contemplation of S. 20 of the Estates Land Act, and there is no reason why a person who files a suit under S 20 (2) to challenge an order passed by the Collector under S. 20 (1) should not advance a plea that he possesses the right claimed on another ground as well.

The ryots of the village have no interest in these lands apart from the right to use, for the purpose of cultivating their holdings, the water contained on that land. The Act does not say that these remedies cannot be exercised simultaneously, and in the absence of any such provision in the Act it is not for the Court to impose any such restriction on the landlord's rights and remedies. —— Validity—Levy of tax on first sales—Conflict between powers of Federal and Provincial Legislatures—

MAD. GEN. SALES TAX ACT (1939), S. 15.

Government of India Act, Sch. VII, List I, Entry No. 45 ; List II, Entry No. 48.

The Madras General Sales Tax Act is not ultra vires in so far as it purports to levy a tax on first sales, that is, sales by the manufacturer or producer. Under the Government of India Act, the Federal Legislature has an exclusive power (List I, entry No. 45) to impose duties of excise, and the Provincial Legislature an exclusive power (List II, entry No. 48) to impose taxes on the sale of goods, and this power extends to sales of every kind including first sales. The expression "duty of excise" is wide enough to include a tax on sales, but where power is expressly given to another authority to levy a tax on sales, "duty of excise" must be given a more restricted meaning than it might otherwise bear. A tax levied on the first sale of goods must in the nature of things be a tax on the sale by the manufacturer or producer, but it is levied upon him qua seller and not qua manufacturer or producer. If a taxpayer who pays a sales tax is also a manufacturer or producer of commodities subject to a central duty of excise he may have to pay two taxes, but the two taxes are economically separate and distinct imposts. It is natural when considering the ambit of an express power in relation to an unspecified residuary power to give a broad interpretation to the former at the expense of the latter but where, as in the Government of India Act, there are two complementary powers each expressed in precise and definite terms there can be no reason for giving a broader interpretation to one power rather than to the other. The American and Australian decisions should not therefore be blindly adopted in India. (Gwyer, C.J., Varadachariar and Beaumont, JJ.) PROVINCE OF MADRAS v. BODDU PAIDANNA & SONS. I.L.R. ——S. 15—Power of magistrate—Imposition of fine in anticipation of commission of offence after date fixed for payment—Legality.

S. 15 of the Madras General Sales Tax Act confers no power on a magistrate to impose a fine in anticipation of an offence being committed. Where on a conviction for an offence under S. 15, in respect of the accused's failure to pay the tax due from him within the time allowed, the magistrate sentences the accused to a fine with simple imprisonment for a month in default of payment and at the same time he is directed to pay a fine of Rs. 5 for every day of default after the date fixed for payment of the tax, that part of the order relating to the imposition of the fine at the rate of Rs. 5 per day of default is illegal and must be set aside. ——S. 15 (a)—Turnover and assessment rules, R. 11—Amendment during pendency of prosecution—If can make failure to submit a return an offence retrospectively.

By an amendment of the rules in one year an act or omission in the previous year cannot be made an offence. Where at the time the charge was laid against the accused that he had failed to submit a return under the Madras General Sales Tax Act and evaded payment of tax, he was not required by the Act to make a return but during the course of the hearing the Provincial Government made an amendment to R.11, which if made on the 1st April, 1940, would have meant that the accused would have been liable to make a return.

Held, that the amendment of the rules could not create an offence retrospectively and the accused cannot be lawfully convicted of offences falling under S. 15 (a) and (d) of the Act. In granting leave to bid under O. 18, R. 8 of the High Court Original Sides, Rule, the Master is not exercising a judicial, but merely an administrative or ministerial function, and O. 13, R. 19 of the Original Side Rules does not therefore permit of an appeal from an order granting leave to bid. ——O. 18, R. 8—Function of Court under—If judicial or ministerial—Leave to bid—Grant of—Considerations.

MAD. H. C. (O.S.) RULES, O. 45. R.1.

The general rule, in cases of applications for leave to bid, is that leave to bid is not to be granted unless the decree-holder is prepared to bid for not less than the amount due to him for principal, interest and costs, and that that course should be followed unless the Court otherwise orders. Before the Court otherwise orders, the Court has of course to take into account the facts and circumstances of the case; but the mere fact that when a Court, in granting or refusing leave to bid is acting in a ministerial capacity has to take into account certain considerations before making its order, is not a good reason for holding that the order becomes a judicial order. Even when a Court acts in a ministerial capacity, it does not mean that the Court is entitled to act arbitrarily. ———S. 43 (2) and (3)—Applicability—Trustee's order confirmed by Hindu Endowments Board—Finality—Conditions—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

It is only in cases where the trustee has actually acted for the reasons given in S. 43 (1) of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act and enumerated in the last paragraph that the provisions of S. 43 (2) and (3) can be attracted. There is no doubt that a trustee can exercise the powers mentioned in S. 43 (1) only when the reasons given in that clause are found by him to have existed and not merely because he purports to seek shelter behind them on grounds which could not be brought within the ambit of S. 43 (1). A Civil Court is not a court of appeal; but it is open to the Civil Court to examine the grounds on which the trustee has acted and to ascertain whether they could or they could not be brought under the section. The Civil Court has the power to go into the question and ascertain whether any of the reasons did in fact exist which would confer jurisdiction on the trustee to act under S. 43, and if it be found that they did not exist, he must be held to have exceeded the powers conferred on him by S. 43, and the decision of the Board confirming the trustee's acts cannot be regarded as final. In the absence of the finality of that decision the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is not ousted. MADRAS LOCAL BOARDS ACT (XIV OF 1920)—Surcharge—Panchayat Board—Surcharge order against—Conditions of validity.

An order of surcharge can be rightly levied against the president of a Panchayat Board only when loss to the Board has been clearly established. If the Board is left without any legal remedy in regard to sums payable to them then, such loss has been clearly established. But if all that can be said is that when a legal remedy is resorted to, it is probable that there will be difficulties in realizing the fruits of the decree, or that the Court will not award the actual costs which the Board may incur, then no present loss can be taken to be proved. Where owing to the indifference of the president of a Panchayat Board certain leases were not taken in writing, although the Board is precluded from filing suits for rent specifically so called, still a suit can be filed for damages for use and occupation, held, the amounts due to the Board from the lessees could not be surcharged against the president. Where certain persons are permitted to carry on trades without ever being called upon to take out licences and pay the requisite licence fees, it cannot be said that any licence fees are legally due from such persons; and as there is no right of suit available to the Panchayat Board in the matter, there can be a valid surcharge order against the

MADRAS LOCAL BOARDS ACT (1920), S. 157.

——S. 93 (1) and Sch. IV, R 10—"Transacts business"—Meaning of—Place of employment—Company—Liability to pay profession tax.

The expression "transacts business" in S. 93 (1) of the Madras Local Boards Act means "carries on business," and a company carries on business only at the place where it enters into contracts in connection with its business. Where a company, formed outside the jurisdiction of a District Board, "to acquire estates in any part of the world on which rubber or other produce has been planted or which are suitable for the cultivation of rubber or other produce either in its prepared or raw state, and either wholesale or retail" grows rubber trees and obtain rubber from them within the jurisdiction of the Board, it cannot be said that the company transacts business within the jurisdiction of the Board when no contracts are entered into within it; and when the company has no office within the jurisdiction of the Board, the growing of rubber trees and obtaining rubber from them can only be regarded as ancillary to the business of selling rubber. Such a company is not therefore liable to pay profession tax to the Board under S. 93 and Sch. IV, R. 10 of the Madras Local Boards Act. Nor can it be said that the company has a place of employment within the meaning of R. 10 of Sch. IV within the local area of the Board by reason of its employing labour within the area. "Place of employment" means the place of employment of a person who is employed and by reason of his employment is liable to pay profession tax. It cannot be said that the company is employed within the area. (Leach, C.J. and Lakshmana Rao, J.) MALABAR DISTRICT BOARD, CALICUT v COCHIN MALABAR ESTATES. A special officer of a Panchayat Board acting under S. 157 of the Local Boards Act filed a complaint against the petitioner for constructing a well and a structure on a public road. The petitioner thereupon filed a suit for establishing his right to the property and applied for an injunction to restrain the special officer from proceeding with the prosecution of the criminal case. The injunction was granted. But as the District Magistrate felt he could proceed with the case under S. 223 of the Local Boards Act, the Public Prosecutor intervened and sought to continue the prosecution on behalf of the Government. On revision,

Held, that the order of the Civil Court was improper in view of the provisions of S. 56 (e) of the Specific Relief Act. The Civil Court could not stay the criminal proceeding directly. Even if the Court had the power of staying the proceeding, it ought not to have exercised it in this case and interfered with the course of justice in another Court. The fact that the special officer had not done anything to have the order of the Civil Court set aside did not however mean that the Magistrate could not poceed with the trial. All that the special officer had been ordered with regard to the criminal case was that he should not further prosecute it. That would mean that he might not himself take any active steps in the further prosecution of the matter. That did not prevent him from appearing and giving evidence if he was so ordered by the Magistrate. But the order of the District Magistrate in continuing the proceeding in this case by permitting the Government to proceed with the prosecution was wrong as the Magistrate did not take cognisance of the offence upon information received or upon his knowledge or suspicion. If a larger amount than what can be legally levied under the Act is recovered, it is open to the party who has made such a payment to come to a Court of law and ask for redress. A District Board is not debarred from preferring a complaint under S. 159 (1) read with S. 207 (1) of the Madras Local Boards Act on the ground that on a prior complaint in respect of a similar disobedience by the same person of a prior order for removal of an encroachment, the accused had been acquitted on the ground that there had been no encroachment. The offences are not in respect of the same order, and so the previous acquittal is not bar to the subsequent complaint. But it is not proper for a responsible body like a District Board, after an adverse finding by a criminal Court on a question of title, to prefer a criminal complaint again and harass the same person again, instead of seeking to establish its title in a Civil Court, where it would be better decided. S. 6 (2)—Construction—Arrears of rent due by tenant to landlord—Barred decree for—Landlord's right to se off against value of improvements due to tenant.

A decree for arrears of rent, even if it has become barred by limitation, can be set off by the landlord in taking accounts in a suit for redemption under S. 6 (2) of the Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act against the value of improvements decreed in favour of the tenant defendant. Limitation in such cases bars only the remedy but does not extinguish the right. In cases of such equitable set-off the Court is not necessarily confined to the limits introduced in O. 8, R. 6, C. P. Code, which allows a set-off only as regards the amount legally recoverable. In the case of such a decree for arrears of rent passed before the Madras Act IV of 1938 came into force S. 15 of that Act, not being retrospective, can have no application, as the rent wiped off by the set-off against the value of improvements cannot be regarded as being due or payable after the Madras Act IV of 1938 came into force. MADRAS PROHIBITION ACT (X OF 1937), S. 3 (17)—"Spirits"—If means only potable spirits—Spirits mixed with shellac—Introduction into prohibition area—Offence.

The term "spirits" is defined in S. 3 (17) of the Madras Prohibition Act as meaning any liquor containing alcohol and obtained by distillation (whether it is denatured or not). There is nothing in the Act which suggests that because some substance (e.g. shellac) is mixed with the spirit that makes it unfit for human consumption it is no longer "spirits". On the contrary, the very wording of S. 3 (17), indicates that spirits which are not potable come within the definition of spirits. Even if the transport of such spirits is for industrial purposes a licence is required under S. 18 of the Act. The Attorney-General v. Bailey, (1847) 1 Ex. Rep. 281, dist. Accordingly where the accused despatched from the Madras Central Station two drums which on examination on suspicion by the Police at Melpatti Station were found to contain denatured spirit with some solid matter which the analyst thought might have been schellac, he is guilty of an offence under S. 4 (1) (a) of the Madras Prohibition Act. MAHOMEDAN LAW.

Although, according to the Mahomedan Law text-books and decided cases, a mother who re-marries is generally stated to be disqualified from being the guardian of her minor children by her former husband, this does not mean that under no circumstances can a woman, who has re-married, be appointed guardian for her own minor children; it may be that she is the only person surviving suitable to be appointed guardian. Where the text-books say that a mother, who re-marries a stranger, loses her right to the custody of the children, it is meant that she only loses her preferential right of custody which otherwise she possesses ; it is not meant that she is, for ever and under all circumstances, barred from being appointed guardian of her own children. There is no basis for the view that where there are no relations the Court cannot appoint a woman, who has lost her right of hizanat by her re-marriage to a stranger, to be guardian of her minor children. Under the Mahomedan law the regular procedure for obtaining the consent of the girl (as laid down in A.I.R. 1940 Pesh. 2) must be proved. In the absence of the proof that the procedure was gone through, no valid marriage can be taken to have been established. There should be the evidence to show that the girl agreed either expressly or by implication. The padar vakil is a very important witness in the matter of proof of consent. Where the girl brings a suit for declaration for he marriage as invalid definitely asserting that she had not consented to the marriage and it was against her wishes and in support of the allegations produces witnesses, the onus shifts to the defendant to prove that the nikhah was properly performed. Before a Court is called upon to exercise an extraordinary jurisdiction for validating a lease by a mutawalli of a mosque for more than three years without sanction of the Qazi or a Judge, restrospectively, the Court has to be satisfied as to the absolute necessity for the lease and of the undoubted benefit which is conferred on the endowment by the transaction. ——Mosque — Mutawalli —Power to lease—Lease without sanction—If void or voidable—Suit by succeeding mutawalli to avoid—Limitation—Adverse possession.

The powers of a mutawalli to grant leases are restricted under the Mahomedan Law. A grant of land belonging to a mosque on lease for more than three years without the sanction of the Qazi or Judge is not valid; and when there is no recorded evidence of any application having been made to a Judge of the High Court—a District Judge or Subordinate Judge—who are recognised to have the powers of a Qazi, it would be impossible to raise a presumption of a legal origin for a lease. Leases granted by a mutawalli of land belonging to a mosque are not void ab initio, but only voidable. The lessee cannot therefore be deemed to remain in adverse possession of the land after expiration of the lease. A succeeding mutawalli who has not affirmed the lease can sue for its avoidance within twelve years of the death of the prior mutawalli who granted it. ———Succession—Position and rights of heirs—Their remedies—Proof of title.

The legal position as regards Mahomedans is prima facie that when the owner dies leaving a number of heirs those heirs take the estate as tenants-in-common They have each a separate right and at any moment any one can demand administration of the estate so as to demarcate the property that falls to that one's share. But until that is done they hold, not as joint tenants as will be the case were they Hindus which joint tenancy is broken up by partition, but as tenants in common which co-tenancy is broken up by severance of the shares normally done by means of administration or by partition. Administration is normally the better course because, then all questions of indebtedness of the deceased, priority of claims and so forth can be properly adjusted. A Mahomedan prima facie establishes title when he shows that the estate in question was in A that he is in the iine of heirs from A and nearer heirs are dead and that there has been no administration which starts a new line of descent not from A but from (say) N, in which case he will then have to establish that he is in the line of heirs from X. He, though establishing that prima facie case, may be defeated by his opponent (say) X if M can establish that the claimant has been ousted. (*Stone, C. The fact that there are other objects provided for, such as, performance of religious ceremonies for the benefit of private individuals and payments of legacies to private individuals, for which a small part of the income is required, does not make the wakf any the less a wakf for public purposes of a charitable nature. MAJORITY ACT (XI OF 1875), S. 2 (a)—Construction—Suit by Mahomedan girl of 15 for dower without next friend—Competency.

The words 'to act in the matter of marriage' in S. 2 (a) must be construed in a restricted sense and means only, to enter into the contract of marriage. S. 2 (a) of the Majority Act merely relieves a Mahomedan girl of some of the consequences of her minority, but she remains a minor none the less. That being so the provisions of O 32, R. 1, C. P. MARWAR—'Bona fide Marwari'—British Indian subject permanently residing in Marwar for long time—Declaration of intention to retain British Indian domicile—Original domicile, whether retained—Intention to make Marwar permanent home—If can be inferred from conduct—Notification of 1940.

M, originally domiciled in Madras, resided at Jodhpur with the intention of living there for an indefinite period. He wished, however, to retain his Madras domicile and for that purpose declared his intention not to renounce his domicile of origin. He, however, continued to live at Jodhpur permanently. It was held that the law could not permit him to retain his Madras domicile as he had resided with the animus manendi in Marwar. Without the requisite intent no amount of residence will help a person to acquire the domicile. There is, however, nothing in the Rules to indicate that such intention must be expressed in writing. It can be proved in various ways. The conduct of a man is the best proof of his intention. Thus where M had resided in Marwar permanently for over 30 years and built immovable property of the value of Rs. 15,000 and got all his sons into Government service, it was held that he had proved by his conduct that his intention was to make Marwar his permanent home. ——S. 21—Applicability—Inherent want of jurisdiction.

MARWAR C. P. CODE, S. 21.

S. 21 applies to objections to the "place of suing" only and not to those of inherent incompetency of a Court to assume jurisdiction. The word 'jurisdiction' means the authority which a Court has to decide matters which are litigated before it. This authority is conferred by and is subject to the limitations imposed by the statute under which the Court is constituted. Consequently S. 21 has no applicability to a case in which there has been usurpation by a Court of a jurisdiction which it did not possess and no amount of consent could confer jurisdiction where no jurisdiction exists. (Sukhdeonarain, J.) CHUNILAL v. LICHMINARAIN. 1942 M.L.R. 106 (Civ.).

——S. 21—Applicability—Suit not cognizable by Marwar Courts.

Ss. 15 to 20 regulate the venue within Marwar and apply only to those places where the Code is in force. They deal with matters of domestic concern and do not prescribe rules for assumption of territorial jurisdiction by Marwar Courts in things wholly outside their jurisdiction. It follows, therefore, that the rule laid down in S. 21 applies only to cases cognizable by such Courts only. (Sukhdeonarain, J.) CHUNILAL v. LICHMINARAIN. 1942 M.L.R. 106 (Civ.).

——S. 73 (3)—Claim of State—Jurisdiction of executing Court to entertain without decree.

Under S. 73 (3), C. P. Code, the claims of the State or the Crown are entitled to precedence over all other claims but the clause does not confer any jurisdiction on the executing Court to entertain a claim on behalf of the State in the absence of any decree in support of it. ——O. 5, R. 17—Temporary absence of defendant—Serving officer—Duty of.

To justify service under O. 5, R. 17 it must be shown that proper efforts were made to find the defendant. When therefore a defendant is temporarily absent from home and is not represented in his house by any male member of his family, the summons should be taken again to his house to be served upon him at the time when the enquiries made show that he is likely to be found at home. (Sukhdeonarain, J.) GANESH v. NATHURAM. 1942 M.L.R. 63 (Civ.).

——O. 9, R. 7—Adjournment of hearing of suit ex parte—Defendant, whether can file written statement as of right.

Discretion has been given to a Court which had adjourned the hearing of a suit ex parte, to allow a defendant who appears and assigns good cause for his non-appearance to be heard in answer to the suit as if he appeared on the date fixed for his appearance, upon such terms as the Court thinks fit. Unless the Court exercises the discretion in favour of the defendant, he cannot as a matter of right file a written statement and be heard in answer to the suit irrespective of the stage of the proceedings reached in the case. ——O. 16, R. 17—Amendment changing nature of suit—Suit for declaration of title under O. 21, R. 103, C. P. Code—Amendment into suit for possession based on title—Permissibility.

The plaintiffs filed a suit under O. 21, R. 103, C. P. Code, that they were the owners of 5/6 of the house and therefore entitled to present possession thereof. Subsequently they applied for amendment seeking to delete the words O. 21, R. 103, C. P. Code, and make other verbal and consequential alterations and ask for a decree for possession instead of a mere declaration.

Held, that proposed amendment would not amount to a change in the substance of the plaint. In fact the only material change which the plaintiffs desire to make is as regards the relief and such alteration is permissible in law provided there is no injustice to the other side. ——O. 21, R. 58—Scope of enquiry.

In objections under O. 21, R. 58, C. P. Code, the question to be decided is whether on the date of attachment the judgment-debtor or the objector was in possession and where the Court is satisfied that the property was in possession of the objector, it should be further found whether he held it on his own account or in trust for the judgment-debtor. In other words, the sole question to be investigated is one of possession and questions of legal right and title are not relevant except so far as they may affect the decision as to whether the possession is on his own account or in trust for the judgment-debtor or some other person. ——O. 21, R. 58—Scope—Objection relating to question of priority.

O. 21, R. 58 applies only when a claim or objection is preferred to the attachment of any property in the execution of a decree on the ground that such property is not liable to attachment. The rule has no application where objection relates to the question of priority to be given to the objector. (*R. M. It is not necessary that the relation of cause and effect between a material irregularity and the injury must be proved by direct evidence. It may either be established by direct evidence or be inferred, where such inference is reasonable. ——Sch. II, Para. 1 and Evidence Act, S. 106—Reference to arbitration by secretary of an association—Invalidity—Burden of proof.

The Secretary, Marudhar Shrawak Mandal, acting on behalf of the Mandal agreed to refer the matter in dispute to arbitration and in the agreement of reference introduced a recital that he has been authorized by the Mandal in a properly held meeting to refer the matter to arbitration. On an award being given the other party filed an application under para. 20, Sch. 2 praying that a decree may be passed in accordance with the award. Certain members of the Mandal objected to the validity of reference.

Held, that the burden of proving the invalidity lay upon them as the secretary being an agent of the Mandal, the acts done by him in his capacity as such must be presumed to have been within the scope of his employment and further the facts whether a meeting was actually held and authority given to the secretary were within the special knowledge of the members of the Mandal. The Council Resolution published in the Marwar Gazette, dated 2nd June, 1923, requiring a court-fee of Rs. 25 in suits relating to 'Mang' and guardianship must be deemed to have been superseded by the Uzardari Rules subsequently promulgated by the Darbar. The position, therefore, for the purposes of court-fee is restored to what is required by the provisions of the Court-Fees Act. ——Ss. 424 and 367—Judgment of appellate Court—Requirements.

The judgment of the Court of appeal should be such that the High Court as a Court of revision might on looking into the judgment be in a position to judge for itself what the case was and how far the Court of appeal had considered the evidence as bearing on the guilt or innocence of the accused before it affirmed the judgment of the trial Court. Under S. 476, it is entirely discretionary and not obligatory with a Court to issue a notice and hold a preliminary enquiry. An application for the copy of the decree was presented on 8th September, 1941, and the copy was to be given on 14th September, 1941. On this date the copy was not ready and it was prepared on 16th September, 1941, but no date was given to the appellant after 14th September, 1941, when the copy would be ready for delivery to him. The question whether a person is or is not the authorized agent of the debtor is a question of fact and is to be determined on the circumstances of each case. ——S. 21 (2)—Principal and surety—Payment by principal debtor if extends limitation against surety.

In cases of principal and surety, there are two distinct liabilities both arising out of the same transaction and in respect of the same debt. Therefore, the principal debtor by an acknowledgment of his own liability, in making payment of part of the principal cannot acknowledge the liability of the surety so as to bind him; nor is there anything in the relation of principal and surety itself which makes payment by the principal debtor as a payment by the surety. MARWAR PUBLIC DEMANDS RECOVERY ACT, S. 19—Suit to set aside sale—Court whether can direct Kotwal to decide questions arising in suit.

A certain shop was sold under the Public Demands Recovery Act. H filed a suit for cancellation of the sale and possession of the shop on the ground that he was owner of half the shop while the other half was under mortgage with him. The trial Court while maintaining the plaintiff's title qua half the shop and setting aside the sale directed the Kotwal to settle the plaintiff's claim regarding the mortgage.

Held, that the trial Court was wrong in leaving the determination of the question arising in connection with the mortgage to the Kotwal under the Public Demands Recovery Act. The Act lays down a summary procedure which precedes and is in its essence different from that of a regular suit which is provided under S. 19 of the Act when the person aggrieved is directed by the Mehkma Khas to seek his remedy in Civil Courts. After the filing of the suit the aid of the provisions of the Act cannot be invoked and all questions arising in the suit must be tackled and decided there. Four days after this F died and after her death S, as the representative of the executant, presented the deed before the Sub-Registrar requesting its registration at her instance. The Sub-Registrar refused to register it but on appeal the Registrar directed its registration.

——Suspension of servant—Right to wages during period of suspension—Rule—Municipality having power to suspend—Suspension of servant ordered properly—Right of servant to wages for period of suspension.

It is clear that if a master chooses not to terminate a contract of service of his servant notwithstanding dereliction of duty on his part entitling the master to dismiss the servant, the master cannot by merely suspending the servant refuse to pay the wages of the servant during the period of the suspension treating the contract as a continuing contract, the reason of the rule being that there is no implied power in the employer to punish a servant by suspension. But different considerations would arise when the master has the power of suspension which he exercises upon a supposed misconduct of the servant. In that case suspension would inevitably mean the suspension of the entire contract and therefore the obligations on both sides. Where a Municipality having power to suspend a servant rightly orders suspensions, such suspension must involve the suspension of payment of wages; and the servant cannot therefore claim wages during the period of suspension. The suspension suspends for the time being the relationship of master and servant between the parties. The suspension of an employee does not amount to dismissal or termination of the contract of service, and until the contract of service is terminated the employee is entitled to his wages. An employer who has no power to suspend has no power to withhold the servant's salary during the period of suspension. Even when an employer is entitled to suspend an employee and withhold his wages during the period of suspension, the employee is entitled to wages during the period of suspension if he is dismissed at the end of that period. The mere discovery that counterfeit labels were being used would not be a discovery that an offence has been committed by a particular press. S. 15 of the Merchandise Marks Act cannot bar a prosecution where the prosecutor had no chance to prosecute. ——Liability for—Nature of—Different defendants setting up different grades of interest in land—Case where there is and there is not wrongful combination among them.

MINOR.

In ordinary cases, that is, where there is no wrongful combination or conspiracy among the defendants who dispossessed or wrongfully kept the plaintiff out, each defendant or each set of defendants as the case may be, is liable for what he received or could by ordinary diligence have received from the defendant or set of defendants immediately below him, where the defendants or the different sets of defendants had set up different grades of interest in the land in suit, and the professed sub-infeudation between them is either admitted or proved. For instance, where there was no wrongful combination amongst the wrong-doers, if the lands were being possessed by a Zamindar through tenure holders, under-tenure-holders and raiyats, and the whole set were made defendants and the possession of all of them was found wrongful, the zamindar would be liable by way of mesne profits for what he had or by ordinary diligence could have received as rent from the tenure-holders of the first degree, and the tenure-holders of the first, second and third degrees, etc., would have to be assessed on the same basis, the actual cultivator or raiyat being liable on produce basis. In the case where there is a wrongful combination amongst the defendants, the position is different. They would all be liable jointly and severally for mesne profits. In such a case they are to be regarded as forming one body and the liability for their unlawful act when they so act in concert cannot and ought not to be separated or apportioned between them. ———Decree against—Setting aside—Grounds—Gross negligence of guardian ad litem—Omission to raise defence when there is no valid defence to suit—Effect of.

MINOR.

When there is no valid or proper defence to urge, on behalf of the minor, the guardian ad litem has no duty to raise frivolous or untenable pleas in defence, and the omission to raise such pleas in defence does not amount to gross negligence which would entitle the minor to sue to set aside the decree. ———Decree against—Setting aside of—Grounds—Negligence of guardian ad litem.

Negligence of a guardian ad litem is not in itself a ground for setting aside a consent decree against a minor which can only be set aside on the ground of fraud, actual or constructive. ———Decree or award against—Absence of proper representation—Effect.

There is lack of inherent jurisdiction in a Court to pass a decree against a minor if the minor is not properly represented. In such a case he must be taken to be no party to the proceedings at all. Therefore any decree which is passed against him without his being a party to the proceedings is a decree passed without jurisdiction, and similarly an award passed against him is null and void as against the minor. The mere fact that a guardian ad litem fails to appeal against a decision which is in conformity with the law as it then stood and fails to anticipate a change in the law by a proposed amendment which may enure to the benefit of the minor, would not amount to gross negligence on the part of the guardian ad litem so as to entitle the minor to challenge the decision which the guardian has accepted. ———Co-mortgagees—Suit by one for his share of mortgage money—When maintainable—Proper frame of suit—Proper form of decree—Rights of parties at execution stage.

A co-mortgagee whose share in the mortgage money is defined in the mortgage instrument or is otherwise ascertainable can sue for his share only, and a suit for his share will be maintainable provided certain conditions are fulfilled. Those conditions are: (1) that he must make the co mortgagees defendants, (2) that he must ask for the usual mortgage decree, which must provide for all necessary accounts and payments in respect of the whole of the mortgage-debt, that is to say, there must be a prayer for sale of the entire mortgaged property, if the mortgagor failed to pay into Court within the period of grace the amount that may be found due in respect of the entire mortgage-debt. The preliminary decree must specify the entire amount due on the mortgage as at the date of grace and not merely what is found due in the plaintiff's share at that date and direct the sale of the entire mortgaged property in default of payment of the same. The consequence would be that if the mortgagor pays into Court the said sum—(i.e.) the total amount so found due—within the period of grace, the share found due to the plaintiff will be paid out to him, and the share of the co mortgagee defendants kept in deposit. If there is default in paying that total sum, the final decree will be for sale of the whole of the mortgaged property. At the execution stage either the whole of the mortgaged property or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the whole amount due on the mortgage must be put up to sale. The rights of the parties can be worked out thus. If the sale fetches a price equal to or greater than the said total amount, besides the costs of bringing the properties to sale, the dues of the plaintiff must be paid out to him. If the sale of the whole of the mortgaged property be insufficient to cover that amount, the plaintiff would be paid pro rata from the sale-proceeds, and he can obtain a decree under O. 34, R. 6 C. P. Code, for the balance of his dues; provided that he is otherwise entitled to such a decree. As the sale would be under a decree for sale of the entire mortgaged property, the purchaser at the Court sale would get the property freed of the mortgage, and the rights of the co-mortgagee defendants would necessarily be transferred to the surplus sale-proceeds. ———Construction—Interest post diem—Rule—Deed to be taken and construed as a whole—Intention not to pay interest after expiry of period—Necessity for clear and express terms.

In the case of a mortgage deed all the terms of the deed have to be considered when the question to be decided is whether interest is to run after the stipulated period. Where the deed does not clearly state that interest should run after the end of the stipulated period, the terms of the whole deed must be looked at to ascertain whether it was the intention of the parties that post diem interest should be paid. If a Court is asked to hold that in a particular case the mortgagor and mortgagee had some intention other than the usual intention then such must appear in the clearest terms from the provisions of the deed, the usual intention being that money should bear interest until repayment. ———If a debt or liability.

From one point of view a mortgage is neither a 'debt' nor a 'liability.' It is a security for a debt and a suit on a mortgage is no more a suit on the debt than a suit on a promissory note is one to enforce the original liability. From the definition of a mortgage in the Transfer of Property Act it is clear that the mortgage itself is not the liability but is only the transfer of an interest in property to secure the proper discharge of the liability. ———Interest—Charge for usufructuary mortgage Provision for payment of interest in addition in default of payment of mortgage money at the end of term fixed—If charge on property—Provision for payment 12 per cent. interest—Penalty—Relief against.

A usufructuary mortgage for Rs. 800 in favour of the appellant executed on 1st May, 1930, provided that the mortgaged property was to be enjoyed in lieu of interest, that the mortgage amount was payable in three years and that in default of such payment at the end of three years interest at 12 per cent. per annum was payable in addition. Some time later, in 1930 itself the mortgagee (appellant) leased the property to the mortgagor and another, but the rent due under the lease fell into arrears and in 1936 a suit was filed and a decree obtained on 25th March, 1937. Meanwhile on 30th May, 1935 the mortgagor sold the mortgaged property for Rs. 1,000 to another, directing him to redeem the mortgage on payment of Rs. 800 This vendee in turn sold the property on 1st April, 1937, to the respondent for Rs. 1,000 directing her (respondent) to redeem the mortgage on payment of Rs. 800. The respondent having failed in her attempt to discharge the mortgage debt and get possession under S 83, T.P. Act, brought a suit for redemption in 1938. The appellant claimed not only the principal amount of Rs. 800, but also the amount due to him under his decree of 1937 for rent and interest on Rs. 800 at 12 per cent, as provided in the mortgage deed, as the amount was not paid at the end of three years.

Held, (1) that the covenant for payment of interest was not merely a personal covenant, but created a charge for interest in the absence of a contract to the contrary; (2) that there was nothing in the mortgage deed to indicate that it was the intention of the parties that there was to be no charge for interest, and therefore the security could be enforced in respect of the interest also; (3) that the provision for payment of additional interest in default of payment of the principal amount by the date fixed for redemption was a penal clause and must be relieved against; (4) that the clause, merely because it was penal, could not be held to be wholly unenforceable; (5) that the mortgagee (appellant) not having obtained payment of the rent due to him under the decree could not be said to have got enough so as to disentitle him to any interest, and that the Court would be justified in awarding 6 per cent interest on the principal amount from the date of default; (6) that the claim for rent, being only a personal one, could not be claimed in the suit for redemption. MORTGAGE.

Where the capacity in which a person is in possession of the mortgagee rights is something quite different from the capacity in which he is in possession of the equity of redemption, the mere fact that those two capacities were united in the same physical person at a particular time could not result in a merger. In many cases the question whether there has or has not been a merger of the equity of redemption with the mortgagee rights depends on the intention of the person in whose possession both rights were at the same time. ———Subrogation—Keeping alive—First mortgagee taking another mortgage in renewal of first and for fresh advance—First mortgage if kept alive as against mesne mortgagee—Limitation to enforce subrogation—Starting—Date of first mortgage or later mortgage.

A mortgagee taking another mortgage in renewal of a prior mortgage does not on that account lose his priority over a mesne mortgage. A first mortgagee making a fresh advance after a second mortgage, on a renewed mortgage, even if that fresh advance is to pay off the first mortgage, retains priority over the second mortgagee as regards the first mortgage and is entitled to subrogation. By the renewal of the prior mortgage a new covenant to pay is substituted for the covenant contained in the old mortgage and therefore limitation to enforce his right of subrogation commences from the date of the new covenant in the later mortgage and from the date of old mortgage which has been paid off by the later mortgage. If there are payments towards the later mortgage saving limitation the period for enforcing the right of subrogation would be extended by such payments. The keeping of the security alive does not necessarily involve the proposition that the date when the debt can be demanded continues to be the old date. The Official Receiver by taking proceedings under S. 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act obtained possession of the mortgaged property. On his claim for mesne profits due for the period in which the property was in the possession of the mortgagee it was held that the possession of the mortgagee was not that of a trespasser but that of a mortgagee in possession and he was not therefore liable to pay mesne profits. ———Usufructuary mortgage and lease back—Nature of—Suit on lease for rent—Finding that mortgage is binding only to extent of part of consideration—Right of mortgagee to full rent stipulated—If affected.

When there is a usufructuary mortgage and a contemporaneons lease back to the mortgagor, it is no doubt necessary for some purposes to read the mortgage and the lease as parts of a single transaction, but that does not mean that the possessory mortgage and the lease back are to be considered as a simple mortgage providing for interest at a certain rate. Though the two form part of the same transaction, effect must be given to each transaction according to its terms and the Court cannot by reading the two together, spell out a transaction totally different in its character and incidents. In a suit on the lease, therefore, full effect must be given to the terms of the contract of lease and it is not open to the Court to vary the terms of that contract on grounds not even stipulated in the contract of mortgage, and the mortgagee-lessor is therefore entitled to recover rent under the lease at the contract rate notwithstanding that the mortgage is found to be binding only to the extent of a part of the nominal amount. Held, (1) that the driver did "use" the vehicle and the vehicle was "used" within the meaning of S. 42 (1) of the Act ; (2) that mere negligence on the part of the owner to lock up his vehicle so that his driver could not take it would not amount to "permitting" the use of the car under S. 42 (1), because "permit" carried with it the meaning that the person actually and knowingly allowed the thing to be done ; (3) that the prosecution had not discharged the duty that was cast on them to prove that the owner either used or permitted the use of the vehicle; and (4) that therefere the accused was entitled to be acquitted of the charge. It is not sufficient to prove merely that there were two posts on the road on which the number "10" was painted to indicate that the speed should not exceed 10 miles an hour. Sub-rule (2) of R. 93 of the Bombay Motor Vehicles Rules framed under the Motor Vehicles Act of 1938 lays down unconditionally the number of persons that may be carried in a goods vehicle, this provision applies not only when the goods vehicle is loaded with goods but also even when it does not happen to carry any goods. This is clear from sub-rule (4) which contemplates a goods vehicle being used for carrying persons when it is not loaded with goods at all. Where the driver of a motor lorry used as a goods vehicle carries more than six persons in it without a permit though the vehicle is not loaded with goods at the time, he is guilty of a breach of R. 93 (2) of the Bombay Motor Vehicle Rules, and is liable to conviction under S 112 of the Motor Vehicles Act. MUSSALMAN WAKF ACT (1923), S. 6-C.

An application under S 2 of the Mussalman Wakf Act for registration of a wakf estate has to be presented in the Court of the District Judge which is the Court competent to entertain the application. The Court of an Additional District Judge is a Court different from that of the District Judge, but under S. 8 (2) of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act, it is competent to the District Judge to transfer the application for registration of a wakf estate to the Additional District Judge and on such transfer the Additional District Judge has jurisdiction to deal with the matter. The Additional District Judge has all the powers which the District Judge has and has jurisdiction to pass any order which the District Judge could pass including an order reconsidering or reviewing a prior order, even though such prior order is one passed by the District Judge prior to the transfer to the Additional Judge. The inherent power to review conferred by S. 151, C. P. Code, can be exercised by the Additional District Judge and he is therefore competent to vacate an order passed by the District Judge before the application was transferred by him to the Additional District Judge. S 3 of the Act of 1913 cannot apply to wakfs which subserve two purposes partly charitable and partly private but must apply only to wakfs originally designed to serve one purpose only and that is private. In order that a beneficiary under a wakf can claim the protection under the Mussalman Wakf Validating Act of 1913, he must establish that he falls in one of the three categories mentioned in the Act, viz., (1) the family of the settlor; (2) the children of the settlor; (3) the descendants of the settlor. "Family" in S. 3 of the Act would include (1) all those persons residing in the same house as the settlor and dependent upon him for maintenance and (2) all those connected with the settlor through a common progenitor or by ties of common lineage. In order to come within the purview of the Act, every person benefitted by the wakf, however remote in time from the settlor himself, must be in a position to trace his descent from a progenitor common to himself and the settlor. In the case of a wakf created for the benefit of the settlor's family, children or descendants, if there are further dispositions in it in favour of remote relations which are void, the ultimate gift to charity must also be held to be void and cannot be given effect to. ——S. 149—Construction and scope of—Application for leave to sue as pauper—Dismissal—Power of Court to grant time for payment of court-fee extending beyond period of limitation for suit.

There can be no doubt that S. 149, C. P. Code, is wide enough to give a judge a discretion to allow an applicant for leave to sue in forma pauperis, whose application is eventually dismissed, a reasonable time to pay the court-fee, so that, even though that time extends beyond the period of limitation for the suit if the court fee is paid within that time, it will be deemed to have been paid on the date on which the application for leave to sue as pauper was originally presented. This general power given by S. 149 is not in any way restricted by anything contained in any of the rules of O. 33, C. P. Code, whether express or implied. A plaint in a suit to recover a sum of Rs. 400 was presented in time with a Court-fee of only Rs. 15, though it required a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 40. It was stated in the plaint that the balance would be paid later. The deficiency in stamp was not, however, noticed in the trial Court. The deficiency was, however, made up by the plaintiff later, but on that date the suit would be barred by limitation. Even this was not noticed in the trial Court by any one. The suit was dismissed, but on appeal the appellate Court which reversed the dismissal noticed the defect in the payment of Court-fee. The plaintiff then applied for leave to amend the plaint so as to restrict his claim to so much amount as would be covered by the Court-fee originally paid. This was allowed by that Court and the plaintiff was given a decree for Rs. 150, the amount covered by the Court-fee paid originally within the period of limitation. It was contended in second appeal that the whole suit was barred and should have been dismissed.

Held, (1) that though it was expressly stated in the plaint that only a part of the Court-fee had been paid, the procedure laid down by O. 7, R 11, C.P. Code, was not followed, and the plaintiff was not given an opportunity as required by the rule; (2) that O. 7, R. 11, must be read with O. 6, R. 17, C.P. Code, and the lower appellate Court was therefore competent to allow the plaintiff to amend his plaint in the way he did; and the procedure adopted by the Court was therefore correct. ——O. 8 R. 2—Scope—Plea as to maintainability of suit—Failure to take in written statement—If fatal—Duty of Court to non-suit plaintiff when he fails to make out cause of action or right to sue.

O. 8, R. 2, C. P. Code, is no doubt a sound rule of pleading in cases where a plea in regard to maintainability of a suit has to be raised. But there are cases where a plaintiff comes forward with a particular right to sue or a claim alleging certain facts constituting his cause of action. In such cases, if the Court finds that the plaintiff has not the right or the cause of action that he alleges, there is no reason why the Court should allow him to succeed even though the defendant has not taken the plea that the suit is not maintainable. The Court should non-suit the plaintiff. It is not strictly a question in regard to the maintainability of the suit, but one relating to the plaintiff's cause of action or his right to sue. ——(as amended in 1933), O. 21, R. 57—Applicability—Dismissal of application after attachment—When terminates.

Under O. 21, R. 57, C. P. Code, as amended in 1933, the Court is required to direct whether the attachment shall continue or shall cease; and the rule does not specifically say that in the absence of an order directing that the attachment shall subsist the attachment shall cease. Two conditions are necessary to attract the rule, viz., (1) there should be some default on the part of the decree-holder; (2) on account of such default the Court must be unable to proceed further with the application for execution. In execution of a decree a house of the judgment-debtor was attached and the application was dismissed with the direction that the attachment "shall subsist." The decree-holder filed another application within a fortnight praying for sale of the attached property, but the Court erroneously dismissed the application on the ground of non-payment of process-fee.

Held, that O. 21, r. 57 did not apply and there having been no default, the attachment did not cease on the dismissal of the first execution application. (Nagesvara Iyer and Singaravelu Mudaliar, JJ.) KESHAVA RAO v. GUDIAPPA. 20 Mys.L.J. 145

——O. 22—Legal representative—Wrong legal representative impleaded—Decree or order against such person—True legal representative—When bound—Conditions of validity of order.

Prima facie no person can be held bound by a decree or order to which neither he nor the person from whom he claims was a party. But in certain circumstances a person who is impleaded as the legal representative of another, which he is not, in a suit or in execution proceedings, sufficiently represents the estate with the result that a decree or order which is passed against him in an assumed representative character is held to be binding on the true representative though the latter was no party to the same. But for such representation to be effective, one of the essential conditions is that the plaintiff or decree holder must have acted bona fide, i.e., not only in good faith but also with due care and caution, and honestly. Secondly, the decree or order must be free from any taint of fraud or collusion. It must also be clear from the proceedings that the person is impleaded in a representative capacity and that the decree or order is passed against him as representing the estate of the deceased. A person who is prima facie the heir at law to a deceased person may and ought to be presumed to be his legal representative for the purpose of the suit or execution proceedings and may be impleaded as such unless the plaintiff or decree-holder is aware of facts which displace the title of the heir-at-law. If in ignorance of such facts he impleads the heir at law as the legal representative on the suit either before or after the decree, and the person having the real title does not intervene during the pendency of the suit or the execution proceedings, the decree or order will be binding on him unless he makes out any fraud or collusion in obtaining the same. When any question is raised in the suit or execution proceedings as to whether the person impleaded is the legal representative and the Court trying the suit or conducting the execution proceedings decides that he is the legal representative, such a decision, even if erroneous, operates to confer on him that character for the purpose or the suit or proceedings. The provisions contained in O. 32, C. P. Code, do not directly apply to proceedings in execution; and the non-representation of a minor by a guardian ad litem in execution proceedings is not in itself sufficient to set aside an execution sale. Therefore the negligence of a properly appointed guardian ad litem in not raising a plea in execution cannot affect the validity of the sale, particularly when the purchaser at such sale is a stranger who has acted bona fide. ——O. 33, R. 15—Applicability—Rejection of application for leave to sue as pauper—Time allowed for payment of court fee—Costs ordered to defendant—Payment of court fee in time—Non payment of costs—If bars suit.

O. 33, R. 15 refers to an applicant who has not obtained the leave he has asked for to sue as a pauper, being at liberty to institute a suit in the ordinary manner, if he can do so, within the period of limitation. The rule does not apply to a case in which an applicant for leave to sue as a pauper is allowed by discretionary order of the Court time to pay his court-fee on the plaint, after the period of limitation has expired, by virtue of an order under S. 149, C.P Code. R. 15 applies to other circumstances, when an applicant who has not got the leave he has asked, still has got time to file his suit in the ordinary way within the period of limitation. Where an applicant whose application for leave to sue as a pauper is refused but who is allowed time for payment of court-fee, fails to pay the costs ordered to be paid by him within that time, such failure will not bar his suit when he has paid within the time allowed the court-fee on the plaint. S. 79 (1) (d) of the Mysore Companies Act of 1938 has to be interpreted as making attestation of instrument of proxy unnecessary, even it required by the Articles of Association of the company concerned. It cannot be interpreted so as to confine its application to the form or wording of an instrument appointing a proxy; and under the new Act, therefore, an instrument appointing a proxy for the election of a director of a company does not require any attestation at all by virtue of S. 79 (1) (d) of the Act. The provision in S. 271 (3) of the Mysore Companies Act is only an enabling and not a disabling provision. A company incorporated in a foreign country can sue for relief in a Mysore Court; and a liquidator appointed by a foreign Court according to the law of the foreign country concerned can take proceedings in a Mysore Court as the representative of such a company for the recovery of debts due to the company and for realisation of assets due to the company from persons in the Mysore State. So long as such a company is not being wound up in Mysore under the orders of a Mysore Court, neither the fact that the company has been carrying on business within the limits of the Mysore State in the past, having a branch therein, nor the permissive provisions of S. 271 of the Mysore Companies Act would make any difference. Where in a partition suit an application is made under O. 20, R. 12, C. P. The appellant has to put a valuation on the claim for mesne profits prior to suit and pay ad valorem Court-fee thereon; and in respect of mesne profits after suit, Court-fee has to be paid under Art. 11-B of Sch. The proviso to S. 188, Cr. P. The Civil and Military Station of Bangalore is not part of the dominions of His Majesty the King-Emperor. Though such an offence is one for which the offender may be tried by a Court of the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore, it is not an offence for which the British Government can demand his extradition from the part of the territories of His Highness The Maharaja in which he lives, under the proviso to S. 188. ——S. 195 (1) (b)—Construction—Court taking cognizance of case—Subsequent events—If can deprive Court of jurisdiction to continue case.

There is nothing in S. 195, Cr. P. Code, to have the effect, if cognizance has once been properly taken by a Court, of undoing that cognizance. S. 195, Cr. P. Code provides prohibitions that no Court shall take cognizance of an offence if certain things have happened before that point of time and not that a Court shall cease to have cognizance of an offence of which it has already taken cognizance if certain things subsequently happen. It is of course necessary that the "proceeding in Court" referred to in S. 195 (1) (b) should be actually instituted before the Criminal Court is asked to take cognizance of the offence. If it is not there is nothing in S. 195 to prevent the Court from taking cognizance of the case. Once the Court has lawfully taken cognizance of the case, its jurisdiction is not affected by the subsequent coming into existence of a circumstance which would have barred its jurisdiction if it had existed at the time of institution. In order that S. 195 (1) (c) may apply to an offence in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding, the document must have been produced by a party to that proceeding. Where the alleged offender who produced the document in question is not a party to the proceeding in Court in which it is produced, the clause does not apply, and a complaint by the Court is not necessary for the prosecution of the offender. MYSORE CR. P. CODE (1904), S. 344.

Although there is no judicial order expressly discharging an accused of an offence under S. 209, Cr. P. Code, a discharge can be implied or presumed from the circumstances. When a Magistrate expresses his opinion that no offence is made out, it is in substance an order of discharge, and a discharge can be implied. (*Abdul Ghani, Offg. ——S. 344—"Any other reasonable cause"—Pendency of civil suit—Discretion of magistrate to stay proceedings.

There is no specific reference in S. 344, Cr. P. Code, which empowers a Magistrate or a Criminal Court to postpone the commencement of, or adjourn any inquiry or trial, to any civil suit or litigation in which the same or a similar question is being agitated as a ground to postpone or adjourn the proceedings in the Griminal Court. But the words "any other reasonable cause" in S. 344 include a civil litigation within certain circumscribed limits. A Magistrate or a Criminal Court has therefore discretion to stay the criminal proceedings in proper cases where the same matter is in litigation in a Civil Court. There can be no doubt that criminal proceedings launched or prosecuted with a view to coerce the opposite party to come to terms or to prejudice the trial of the civil suit ought to be stayed. The discretion to stay may be confined to cases where the Civil Court can give a final adjudication in respect of purely civil rights or rights to property—rights which a Criminal Court cannot finally adjudicate upon. In other cases a stay of proceedings is not called for, though the issues on the questions of fact that should be decided are the same in both. It is a general principle of criminal law that it is only an authority who has heard all the evidence in the case that is competent to decide whether the accused is innocent or guilty. The Cr.P. Code, however, makes an exception in Ss. 349 and 350. S. 350, which permits a Magistrate succeeding another Magistrate acting on the evidence recorded by his predecessor expressly excepts proceedings under S 346 from its operation. (This applies also to cases transferred from one Magistrate to another). The Magistrate to whom a case is submitted under S. 346 (1) or to whom a case is transferred under S. 346 (2) cannot act on the evidence recorded by the submitting Magistrate, but must, if he tries the case, try de novo. If the District Magistrate to whom a case is submitted under S. 346, refers the case to a Subordinate Magistrate for trial, the latter must try the case de novo and not act on the evidence already recorded by the Magistrate who submitted the case to the District Magistrate. Nor can he usurp the place of the District Magistrate to whom the report was made by the original Magistrate, even for purposes of commitment. If he commits the accused for trial to the Court of Session on the evidence recorded by the Magistrate who submitted the case to the District Magistrate, the committal is illegal and must be quashed. S. 350 (3), Cr. P Code, should be read with S. 350 (2) and should be treated as being governed by sub-S. (2), and should not be interpreted so as to run counter to S. 350 (2). (*Abdul Ghani, Offg. C. Where, in an application for transfer of a criminal case, in order to consider whether the allegations made by the applicant in his affidavit are true, a report has been called for from the Magistrate concerned, such report sent by the Magistrate must be deemed to be a part of the record of the case, and it would be only fair and just that the applicant must have an idea of the answers furnished by the Magistrate concerned in regard to the allegations made for the purpose of having the case transferred to another Court There is no reason why the party applying for transfer should not have a copy of the report in order to meet the statements made by the Magistrate. The words "and of any nature whatsoever" are very wide, and are not limited to questions ejusdem generis with questions of title or priority. Where an application by an alienee claiming attached property as having been alienated to him about ten years prior to the insolvency of the alienor, the Insolvency Court decides that it is not competent for that Court to inquire, into the validity of the alienation made more than two years prior to the insolvency, such decision is final and binding under S. 4 (2) of the Act and operates as res judicata, against the Official Receiver in respect of an application by him to annul the alienation, if he does not challenge the decision in appeal. An Official Receiver is no doubt regarded as a representative of the creditors in an insolvency case. But an Official Receiver appointed by a foreign Court (a British Indian Court) cannot be recognised in Mysore as the representative for the creditors in Mysore, much less as a creditor himself, so as to entitle him to be a petitioning creditor under S. 9 of the Insolvency Act or to entitle him to apply for review of an order dismissing an Insolvency petition by creditors in Mysore to which he himself was no party. Under S. 60, C.P.Code, insurance amounts called technically 'bonuses' due to Government officers on insurance policies taken out by them in the Official Branch of the Mysore State Life Insurance Office cannot be attached and sold in execution of a decree for a debt due from or contracted by such officers. Such an insurance amount or bonus, either payable to such a Government officer or actully paid to him, is not property which vests in the Official Receiver under S. 28 of the Insolvency Act for the benefit of the creditors in the insolvency, if such officer is adjudged insolvent; it is outside the sphere of a receiver in insolvency altogether. A Mohamedan who started business in 1921, received a notice of demand from one of his creditors to whom he was indebted in a sum of about Rs. 28,000. The notice was issued on 12—6—1930 and he received it on 24—6—1930. On the same day he sold a dwelling house belonging to him to his wife for a consideration of Rs. 5 000. The sale deed recited that a sum of Rs. 3,000 was due from him to his wife in repayment of advances made to him by her for the business and that Rs. 2,000 was due to her by way of dower, and that in discharge of these the property was sold to her. It was found on evidence that Rs. 2,000 had been fixed as dower at the time of the marriage but that only Rs. 600 out of that amount was prompt and that the balance was deferred. It was also found that a sum of Rs. 1,670 had been actually paid by the wife to her husband and that the rest of the consideration stated was fictitious. It was also found that the house was really worth much more than the price fixed in the sale deed. About eight months later, on 8—3—1931, the husband applied in insolvency and was adjudicated. The Official Receiver applied under S. 53 of the Insolvency Act for annulment of the sale.

Held, (1) that the deferred dower due to the alienee (wife) could not be regarded as valuable and bona fide consideration for the sale; (2) that the alienation was tainted with fraud and the whole transaction must be set aside and it could not be upheld even to the extent of the consideration found binding and valid; (3) that a distinction has to be made between a sale and a mortgage; whereas a mortgage might be upheld as a valid security to the extent of the debt actually due on the date of the mortgage, a sale must be set aside as a whole if it offends S. 53 of the Insolvency Act even when it is supported by consideration in part. ——Ss. 54 and 55—Applicability and scope—Payment by insolvent to particular creditor—Preference—Payment of money which would not vest in receiver or Court in insolvency—Right of Official Receiver to impeach and to claim refund.

S. 54 of the Mysore Insolvency Act is intended to enable an Official Receiver to get into his possession and under his control, for the benefit of the creditors in the insolvency, property which under the Act should vest in the Official Receiver for the purpose but has been transferred by way of preference within the period fixed to a particular creditor or particular creditors. But the Official Receiver has no right to attack a payment by the insolvent as voidable against him under S. 54 and laible to be annulled at his instance, when such a payment is a payment of money which under the Insolvency Act would never vest in the Court or a receiver for the benefit of creditors in insolvency and therefore money with which the Official Receiver had nothing to do. In respect of such payment he cannot maintain an application under S. 54 of the Act. Nor would S. 55 of the Act be of any help to support the Official Receiver's application to have such payment declared void as fraudulent and for an order calling upon the creditor to whom payment has been made to refund the amount. S. 55 is a qualification of the powers and rights and authority of a receiver or the Court given in the previous sections of the Act and cannot possibly extend the powers or authority or rights of the receiver or the Court in any way. A nominee under a policy of Insurance in the Official or Public Branch of the Mysore Government Life Assurance Department is not the beneficial owner under the rules governing the Insurance unless the wording of the nomination has that effect. Nor does S 39 of the Mysore Insurance Act of 1939 make the nominee a beneficial owner in respect of policy governed by the Act. Where the nomination merely authorises the Insurance Company to pay the amount to the "nominee", it does not amount to a bequest in favour of the nominee; nor does it create any right in the nominee except the right to collect it. ——Art. 132—Mortgage—Time for payment fixed at 12 years—Provision for payment of interest every year and on default whole amount to become due "on demand"—Limitation for suit on default.

A mortgage deed under which the time for payment was twelve years provided that interest shall be paid every year before the end of March, and that in default of such payment, the principal amount shall become payable on demand without waiting for the next default. Nothing was paid under the mortgage and the mortgagee brought a suit more than 12 years after the date of the 1st default in the payment of interest.

Held, that the default clause making the whole amount of the debt due on a failure to pay interest in any year, made the whole debt due within the meaning of Art. 132 of the Mysore Limitation Act, and the suit was therefore barred by limitation. The words "on demand" in the default clause did not have the effect of the prolonging the period of limitation. There is nothing in Art. 142 of the Limitation Act to show that it applies only to suits based on a mere possessory title and not to suits based on title. A suit for a declaration of the plaintiff's title to land and for possession of the same on the allegation that he is the owner thereof by right of purchase and that the defendant dispossessed him and took wrongful possession under an order passed under S. 145, Cr. Art. 181 of the Lim. Act applies only to an application which a party must make under the C.P. Code and does not apply to applications which a party need not make. Where a preliminary decree under O. 20, R 12, C.P.Code, directs an inquiry as to mesne profits, an application by the plaintiff for ascertainment of such profits is not governed by Art. 181 of the Limitation Act and it cannot be held to be barred on the ground that it is made more than three years after delivery of possession was obtained by the plaintiff. R. 12 does not contemplate an application being made by the plaintiff. It is incumbent on the Court to start proceedings to give effect to the direction for mesne profits and make a final decree in accordance with the result of such inquiry as provided in O. 20, R. 12 (2). ——Chs. III and IV, Ss. 9, 10, 11 and 18—Order of Government resuming temples and inam lands—Deputy Commissioner directing sub-divisional officer to execute order and report—Suit to cancel order—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

Where properties purchased and endorsed by private persons to religious institutions are converted into Inams free of any taxes to be paid to Government, as being intended for the service of the institutions, such as temples or mutts, the endowment loses its character of a private endowment and partakes of the nature of a Government grant for the service of the institutions in as much as the Government waives the right to collect taxes. The temples or institutions thus became Muzrai Institutions to which Ch. III of the Religious and Charitable Institutions Act does not apply. The jurisdiction of the Civil Court is in such cases excluded in respect of the orders of the Muzrai Officer except when they fall under Ss. 9, 10 and 11 of the Act. An order of the Government under Ch. IV of the Act directing the resumption of the institutions and their properties does not fall under S 18 of the Act, and a Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for cancellation of such an order or for other relief inconsistent with such an order or questioning such order. Under R. 178 (2) of the Mysore Representative Assembly Rules when once an election petition has been referred by the Government to the Election Commissioner, then all proceedings in connection with that petition until it is finally disposed of by an effective report to the Government must be carried on by or before the Commissioner. It is not the case that as soon as he makes a report he is functus officio. When therefore in an appeal from his decision, the High Court remands the election petition to the Commissioner for fresh disposal and for recording a clear finding on a question of fact on the ground that the finding arrived at by him was vague and was not a proper finding, it cannot be said that the Election Commissioner has no jurisdiction to deal with the petition remanded to him by the High Court on the ground that on his making his report originally, he became functus officio. A vendor of immovable property who has by his sale deed covenanted to give a good and sound title to the vendee in respect of the entire property sold cannot afterwards turn round and plead that the vendee has forfeited his right to compensation for breach of the covenant because of his omission to make due inquiries and satisfy himself that the vendor had a good title to convey. Where the vendor expressly purports to convey a specific extent of land, but it afterwards turns out that he had no title to a portion of it and that he has sold some land not belonging to him, there is a clear breach of covenant of title and he is liable to the vendee for damages. If the vendee fails or is unable in his attempts to obtain possession of a portion of the property sold to him, he is entitled to a refund of the proportionate portion of the purchase money. The fact that the vendee was aware of the defect in the vendor's title or that he could, if he had made diligent inquiries, have discovered such defect, would not deprive the vendee of his right to hold the vendor responsible in damages under the express covenant of title contained in the sale deed. ——Ss. 74 and 82—Limitation—Puisne mortgagee paying off amount due under decree on prior mortgage to avert sale of property in execution—Rights of—Right to subrogation—If available—Suit against mortgagor and his vendees for recovery of amount—Limitation—Limitation Act, Art. 132—Applicability—Contract Act, S 69.

Where a puisne mortgagee pays off an earlier mortgagee, the rights of the latter, whatever they are, devolve on the subsequent mortgagee who pays up the earlier mortgage. In effect he becomes an assignee of the mortgagee whom he pays off. His right to enforce priority under the first mortgage is not a new right which accrues to him on redemption by payment of that mortgage. Limitation for a suit by him counts from the date on which the money under the first mortgage became due and not from the date on which the puisne mortgagee pays it off whether the money paid is still due under the mortgage or under a decree on that mortgage. Four items of property were mortgaged by the owners thereof to P and H. A suit was filed on the mortgages and a decree for sale was passed. After this decree two of the items were sold by the mortgagors to defendants 4 and 5, and the plaintiff advanced money to the mortgagors on the security of another item. The decree was sought to be executed by sale of this item (mortgaged to the plaintiff), and in order to avert the sale and save her interests the plaintiff paid off the entire decree amount. She then sued the mortgagors and the defendants 4 and 5 to recover the amount with interest. The suit was filed more than three years after the plaintiff paid the amount of the decree. A suit on the original mortgage had become barred by limitation already.

MYS. WORKMEN'S COMPEN. ACT, S. 3.

Held, (1) that the plaintiff had only the rights which the original mortgagee had under S. 74 of the T. P. Act; (2) that the right to enforce the original mortgage was not available to the plaintiff, because there was already a decree on it which was satisfied and because the mortgage itself was barred long ago by the expiry of the period of 12 years. The right of subrogation was not therefore available to the plaintiff who could not derive any advantage from it; (3) that the only right available to the plaintiff was that of reimbursement under S. 82, T P. Act or under S. 69 Contract Act; (4) that since the suit was instituted more than three years of the payment by the plaintiff, it was barred by limitation; (5) that Art. 132 of the Limitation Act did not apply as she had got no charge on the property for the payment made by her. ——S. 100—Charge created by decree and charge created by contract—Distinction.

There is no difference in principle between a charge created by a decree of Court and a charge created by contract, for purposes of S. 100, T. P. Act; in neither case can a charge create an interest in property which can prevail against a transfer of an interest for valuable consideration and without notice of the charge. A charge created by decree stands on no higher footing than one created by law or one which is the result of the operation of some law. (*Reilly, C. Rule 10 (a) of the Silicosis Rules, 1940, framed under the Workmen's Compensation Act cannot be interpreted as requiring the employer to compel every man in his service at the time the rules came into force to be examined medically. It is for the workman himself to indicate in some way his desire to become eligible under the rules, i.e. in effect his desire to be medically examined as provided in the rules. Every workman in service at the time when the rules came into force would not be entitled to individual notice from the employer. It is only a workman who could not for some reason present himself for examination, though he wished to do so, or who could not be examined when he presented himself for examination, who under R. 10 (b) is entitled to a notice of the future date on which he is to come for examination. Where trustees or managers of temples or other charities borrow money on promissory notes under personal liability, neither S. 28 of the Negotiable Instruments Act nor the principle underlying it can have any application. Hence a person making a note as trustee of a temple or other charity cannot claim the benefit of S. 28 as he cannot be said to be acting on behalf of a person capable of being bound by the undertaking or promise to pay. Where the body of a promissory note executed by a trustee of a temple binds the executant and not the temple, the mere fact that the executant is described at the beginning of the note and after the signature as "adalthedar" or trustee, would not be a sufficient ground for excluding the liability of the maker on the note. It is clearly impossible to go outside the note to find out whether the maker intended to pledge his credit or intended to bind the temple. (Happell J.)

The object of S. 78 of the Negotiable Instruments Act is obviously to give a valid discharge to the maker or acceptor of the instrument; and hence it has been held that none but the holder of a promissory note is entitled to sue to recover the money due on it. But S. 78 does not mean that where a suit on a promissory note is brought not by its ostensible holder but by the real owner or beneficiary and the ostensible holder is a party to the suit and in his presence it is proved that the plaintiff is the real owner, the suit shall still be held to be not maintainable. ——S. 87—Material alteration—What is—Test—Addition below signature of maker describing him as proprietor of a business concern—If renders instrument invalid.

The fact that an alteration does not ultimately involve any change in the rights and liabilities of the parties is not very germane to the consideration of the question whether it amounts to a material alteration within the meaning of S. 87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. Whether the change be prejudicial or beneficial to the maker does not in the least matter. Where in a promissory note, subsequent to its execution, the words "the proprietor of the Karthika Stores," were inserted above the signature of the maker and below the date.

Held, that the alteration was a material alteration rendering the instrument unenforceable though the plaintiff might ultimately make up his mind to sue the maker in his individual capacity only and had accepted the maker's case that he had nothing to do with the said stores at any time either as proprietor or in any other capacity. The fact that the term "immovable property" finds no place in S. 23 clearly indicates that a suit for possession of immovable property is excepted from the cognizance of a Village Council and that the legislature never intended to empower Village Councils to entertain and decide such suits. Unless a person makes investments by way of loan as a matter of regular business and for gain, it cannot be said that he carries on the business of money-lending. ——S. 204 (as amended in 1938)—Collector acting under S. 204 (2), (3), (4) and (5)—If subordinate to High Court—Powers of revision.

Per Full Bench.—The Orissa Tenancy Act definitely involves the subordination of the Revenue Court to the High Court [by way of appeal under S. 204 (3)] and thus, though the general provision contained in S. 192 (2) of the Act attracts the operation of S. 115, C.P. Code, giving the High Court a power of revision, in all matters dealt with by the Collector as a Revenue Court handling landlord and tenant suits, whether as a Court of first instance, or as a Court of appeal, or as a Court of revision. The Collector consequently, when he acts under S. 204 (2) (3), (4) and (5), is amenable to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court under S. 115, C P. Code.

Per Manohar Lall, J.—The High Court's power of revision under S. 115, C.P. Code, is limited to cases within S. 204 (3), that is, cases in which first or second appeal lies to the High Court. The Rent Suit Deputy Collector dismissed the suit for recovery of arrear of mutation fee and interest due upon a sale deed, holding that the Revenue Court had no jurisdiction to entertain it. An appeal from the dismissal of the suit in fact lay to the District Judge but was wrongly filed before and entertained by the Collector. The question was whether the High Court under S. 115, C. P. Per Full Bench.—The Collector's power of revision under S 204 (5) is not limited to cases within S. 204 (2). S. 204 (5) enables the Collector to call for the record of any case in which the Deputy Collector has passed a decree or order concerning disputes of over Rs 100 in value and even in cases below Rs. 100 in value involving a decision of question as to the liabilty to pay rent for land or title to land or some interest in the land as between parties to the suit.

——S 223 (c) and (d)—Rent decree—Sale—Purchase by landlord—Arrears of rent due for period between date of suit ending in rent decree and sale—Liability for—Subsequent suit against tenant by landlord purchase—Right to decree.

An auction purchaser at a sale in execution of a rent decree is not liable for arrears of rent becoming due after the date of suit in which such decree was passed and before the sale took place. If any surplus remains after satisfying the decree for rent, any rent falling due between the date of the suit and the date of the sale shall be paid out of such surplus and the tenant would be entitled to the balance of the surplus sale proceeds. The property sold would therefore pass to the purchaser free from any liability to pay such arrears of rent. The fact that the landlord himself is the purchaser and that the arrears were not notified at the time of the sale would make no difference and the landlord purchaser can therefore sue the tenant, after his purchase for the arrears due between the date of the suit and the sale. He cannot, however, obtain a rent decree, but only a money decree. (Meredith, J.) GIRISH CHANDRA CRAKRABARTY v. SANANDA PATRA 202 I C. 657=15 R P. 135=9 B R. 34=8 Cut.L.T. 43=23 Pat.L. Where the question involved in the case is one of fact upon which the learned Judge had given a considered finding after consideration of the oral and documentary evidence in the case, the fact that the decision of this question of fact depended upon the interpretation of many documents is not a proper ground for the grant of a certificate. Non-occupancy and statutory holdings in Oudh were not heritable under the Oudh Rent Act. Before S. 48 of the Act was amended the heirs of an ordinary tenant in Oudh were entitled to retain the holding only up to the expiry of the deceased tenant's patta. After S. 48 was amended by Act IV of 1921, the heirs of a statutory tenant acquired the right of retaining the holding for five years. But apart from this the heirs of an ordinary tenant in Oudh had no rights of inheritance and could acquire fresh rights only if the zamindar allowed them to retain possession for three years beyond the statutory period of five years or gave them a fresh patta. ——Ss. 54 and 59—Service of notice under S. 55—Contesting it by suit, if a necessity to avoid extinguishment of rights under S. 59—Proper scope and effect of S. 59.

It is far too wide a proposition to state that a person on whom a notice is served whether rightly or wrongly under S. 54 of the Oudh Rent Act must institute a suit to contest it if he wants to retain his rights and that on his failure to do so he loses all his rights under S. 59 of the Oudh Rent Act. If a tenant who is not liable to ejectment at all is served with an illegal notice by the Zamindar he would have two courses open to him, viz., either to ignore it or to file a suit to contest it. But if he fails to file a suit to contest it, it cannot be said that his rights will automatically expire on the 15th of May following the service of notice simply on the ground of his failure to file the suit. S. 59 of the Oudh Rent Act only lays down that a tenant who is liable to ejectment by notice will have his rights extinguished if he does not contest the notice of ejectment. Hence where statutory tenants who had perfected their title are served with a notice under S. 54 and they do not care to contest it by suit, it cannot be said that the notice would be enough to extinguish their rights. The Civil Court has no jurisdiction to question the correctness or the validity of the order of the Revenue Court when the matter decided was exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Revenue authorities even if the latter made a mistake. The Revenue Courts are given exclusive jurisdiction in the matter of ejectment subject to the provisions for suits in Ss. 59 and 60. It is true there is no provision for a suit to contest the proceedings for ejectment when ejectment has taken place: but that is no reason why it should be held that the question of the validity of these proceedings can be raised in the Civil Courts. Rather the reverse. The proceedings can be challenged in appeal in the higher Revenue Courts. Civil Courts cannot question their validity, but must accept the decision of the Revenue Courts. If any irregularity has been committed in the help given to the landlord to obtain possession from the tenants to be ejected, the latter's remedy lay in sub-S. (2) of S. 60 and if they do not avail themselves of the remedy they cannot seek to question it in the Civil Courts. (Bennett, J.) RAM ASREY v. BAIJNATH. 1942 O.W.N. 727.

It is no longer open to defendant to contend that he was an occupancy tenant. He can no doubt bring a suit under S. 60 (2) but in the absence of such a suit the proceedings under S. 60 cannot be regarded as null and void and he is not entitled to possession and if in possession can be sued under S. 127 as amended. S. 124-D of the Oudh Rent Act gives the appellate Court all the ordinary powers of an appellate Court and it then proceeds to say that if it exercises its powers in certain ways, it may direct its order either to the Court in which the suit was instituted or to any other Court competent to entertain the suit. ———S. 127—Scope of old and amended section—'Holding over', if can confer any title.

S. 127 of the Oudh Rent Act as it stood prior to its amendment in 1921 did not refer at all to the power of the landlord to eject a person in possession as trespasser. It only provided for the payment of rent by a person in possession of land occupied without the landlord's consent. The section as amended provides both for the payment of rent and for ejectment and makes liable for such payment and ejectment a person who takes or retains possession without being entitled to such possession, and not only a person who has come into possession without the landlord's consent. That is to say, under the section as amended a person who has come into possession with the landlord's consent becomes liable to ejectment as soon as he ceases to be entitled to possession. A person against whom a decree for ejectment has been passed cannot be said to be entitled to possession. Only the landlord is then entitled to possession and the failure of the landlord to execute his decree cannot restore the tenant to his former possession so as to enable him to resist a suit under S. 127, because he retained possession without being entitled to, and by so doing made himself liable to such a suit. The term 'holding over' is not to be found in the Oudh Rent Act and any temporary occupation of the trespasser that may be acquiesced in by the landlord would not confer any title on the former to possession. As there is no limitation for suits under S. 127 the only way in which a person without title can obtain title is by adverse possession for the necessary period. The language of S. 151 does not rule out the possibility of a case where the application for execution against the moveable property may have become time barred and consequently the satisfaction of the decree could not have been obtained against the moveable property of the judgment debtor. Where in an appeal against the dismissal of objections to partition certain mortgagors of one of the parties were not impleaded as respondents, but they along with that party filed a cross objection to that appeal and the appeal was allowed and the cross-objections dismissed, in an appeal by such cross objectors, it was held that it was not open to them to raise the question as to the Collector's order in appeal not being binding on them as they were not impleaded in appeal. By their conduct in filing the cross appeal they had believed themselves to be actual respondents to the appeal and hence they could not raise the technical objection as to non impleading in appeal. PARTNERSHIP—Accounts—Suit against managing partner two years after dissolution—Interest, if chargeable.

In a suit brought nearly two years after the dissolution of a partnership against the former managing partner, who has been retaining in his hands and for his own purposes assets of the firm without accounting for them or their proceeds to his copartner, interest is properly chargeable against the accounting defendant even though he has not acted fraudulently. ———Accounts—Suit for particular item—Maintainability.

The general principle that as between partners there can be no suit for any particular item of partnership account is quite sound and must be enforced under ordinary circumstances. If, however, special circumstances arise which render the application of this principle unfair and inequitable there is no reason why justice and equity should not come to the help of a prrtner who is being involuntarily saddled with liability which must be shared by his co-partners and for which he has no means of relief except a suit for contribution. ———Contribution — Suit by one partner against another in respect of joint decree against them—Maintainability—Prayer for dissolution and accounts—Necessity—Parties to suit—Rule.

Where some of the partners of a firm borrow money from a third party and on a joint decree being obtained by the creditor, one of them pays up the amount, he cannot sue his co-judgment-debtors (other partners) for contribution in the absence of the other partners and with adjustment of the partnership accounts, in the absence of special circumstances such as an express promise by the co-borrowers to indemnify the plaintiffs. The only remedy of the partners against other partners in respect of partnership assets is by way of a suit for accounts and not a suit for contribution. This rule only applies where the debt is really a partnership debt. Where, however, the debt is collateral to or independent of the partnership this principle has no application. In the latter case, a partner may have a right of action against another for contribution. But when the debt is a partnership debt, a suit for contribution is not maintainable in the absence of a prayer for dissolution or for accounts. ———Suit for accounts—Appeal—Parties—Duty of appellant—Failure to add some—Effect—Abatement—Test.

In a suit for partnership accounts all parties are interested in the directions for account and the result of the account and the presence of all such persons is necessary before the Court in appeal, and the decree of the lower Court cannot be varied in the absence of any one of them. In order to decide whether owing to the failure to add the legal representatives of deceased parties to an appeal, the appeal abates in its entirety or only against the deceased party the test often applied is whether in the event of the appeal being allowed there would or would not be two contradictory decrees in the same litigation with respect to the same subject matter. If it is likely to result in two contradictory decrees owing to non-joinder of necessary parties in appeal or on account of failure to bring on record the legal representatives of the deceased respondent who was also a necessary party to the appeal, the Court will have no alternative but to dismiss the appeal as a whole. ——S. 69 (1) and (3) (a)—Suit for dissolution of unregistered firm—Prayer for accounts—Competency.

When a partner sues for the dissolution of an unregistered partnership, it is a compendious form of asking for the reliefs covered by the matters referred to in O. 20, R. 15, C. P. Code. A prayer for accounts is quite competent in such a suit, for S. 69 (3) (a) of the Partnership Act exempts suits for accounts of a dissolved firm from the embargo placed by S. 69 (1). (Bose, J.) DAMODHAR v. KHUSAL. 203 I.C. 43=15 R.N. 105=1942 N.L.J. 485=A.I.R. 1943 Nag. 12.

——S. 69 (2)—Applicability and construction—Unregistered firm—Dissolution and taking of accounts—Agreement by one partner to pay definite sum of money to another—Suit to enforce—Maintainability.

S. 69 (2) of the Partnership Act does not apply to a suit for the enforcement of an agreement entered into after the dissolution or at the time of the dissolution between the partners of an unregistered firm under which some definite sum of money was payable by one partner to another. S. 69 (2) applies only to a suit on behalf of the partnership. The section has to be strictly construed and the bar imposed by it cannot be extended to suits for recovery of money due on a contract entered into between the partners of an unregistered firm in pursuance of an agreement entered into after dissolution and taking of accounts. ——S. 69 (2)—Applicability—Conditions—Suit by partner individually on personal contract by him—If falls under S. 69 (2)—Plea of non-maintainability of suit in appeal.

A point of law, e.g., that a suit falls within the mischief of S. 69 (2) of the Partnership Act, can be raised for the first time in appeal if all the facts necessary for its determination are on the record. S. 69 (2), which is a stringent provision and which must therefore be strictly construed, will only apply to a suit if it is instituted either by or on behalf of a firm, that is to say, ex facie it purports to be filed either by or on behalf of the firm or in the interests of the firm. But this must be clear from the plaint itself and must not in any case depend on the liability of a plaintiff to restore the benefits he has received out of that suit to the firm of which he is a partner eventually. Where on a reading of the plaint it is found that the suit is instituted not by or on behalf of the firm, but by a partner in his individual capacity, S. 69 (2) would not apply. A contract entered into by a partner personally constitutes a personal contract and he is entitled to bring a suit on it in his own name without joining his partners as plaintiffs ——Ss. 69 (2) and (3) (a)—Debt due to dissolved unregistered firm—Suit by a partner to recover—If barred by S. 69 (2).

A debt due to a firm is part of its property. A suit to realise such a debt is a suit to enforce a right to realise the property and it would seem to fall within the exception in S. 69 (3) (c) of the Partnership Act. Hence a suit by a partner to realise a debt due to an unregistered dissolved partnership is not barred by S. 69 (2) of the Act. (Bose, J.) MOTILAL MADANAGOPAL FIRM v. SHANTI. 1942 N.L.J. 227.

——S. 74—Scope—Suit on accounts—Right to sue arising and acknowledgment before 1st October, 1933—Suit by unregistered firm after 1st October, 1933—If barred—Limitation Act, Art. 85—Effect of.

The terms of S. 74 of the Partnership Act save not only the rights accrued before 1st October, 1933, but also the remedy to enforce those rights. When the right to sue arose on 30th July, 1933, the bar of S. 69 does not apply to a suit by an unregistered firm after 1st October, 1933, in respect of the right which accrued due before that date. The fact that Art. 85 of the Limitation Act applies to the account on which the suit is brought and that time is extended under that Article to the last date of the accounting year of which the plaintiffs can take advantage, that being a date after 1st October, 1933, would not affect the date on which the cause of action accrued for purposes of S. 74 of the Partnership Act. Such last date of the accounting year if necessary and relevant only for the purpose of deciding the question of limitation, Art. 85 of the Limitation Act only extends the time for the purpose of calculating limitation, but does not affect S. 74 of the Partnership Act which saves in certain cases the right to sue for a debt due and acknowledged before 1st October, 1933. Code, is not illegal. Under S. 28 of the Cr. P. S. 86, I. P. The section does not say that a person who does the act in a state of intoxication shall be liable to be dealt with as if he had the same intention as might have been presumed if he had not been intoxicated though it says that he shall be liable to be dealt with as if he had the same knowledge as he would have had if he had not been intoxicated. There is no presumption with regard to intention although as far as knowledge is concerned, it must be taken that the accused had the same knowledge as he would have had if he had not been intoxicated. Where an accused who is drunk and intoxicated stabs the deceased with a knife and causes an injury which any sober man must surely know would be likely to cause death and which is sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, it must be held that the accused is guilty of murder under paras. 2 and 3 of S. 300, I. ——S. 124-A—Law of sedition—Guiding principles—Criticism of Government—Vulgar abuse—Duty of Courts to take broad view.

Gwyer, C.J.—The time is long past when the mere criticism of Government was sufficient to constitute sedition, for it is recognized that the right to utter honest and reasonable criticism is a source of strength to a community rather than a weakness. Criticism of an existing system of Government is not excluded, nor even the expression of a desire for a different system altogether. The language of S. 124-A, I. P. Code, if read literally, even with the explanations attached to it, would suffice to make a surprising number of persons in this country guilty of sedition; no one however supposes that it is to be read in this literal sense. The language itself has been adopted from English law, but it is to be remembered that in England the good sense of jurymen can always correct extravagant interpretations sought to be given by the Executive Government or even by Judges themselves; and if in this country that check is absent, or practically absent, it becomes all the more necessary for the Courts, when a case of this kind comes before them, to put themselves so far as possible in the place of a jury, and to take a broad view, without refining overmuch in applying the general principles which underlie the law of sedition to the particular facts and circumstances brought to their notice. Sedition embraces all those practices, whether by word, deed or writing, which are calculated to disturb the tranquillity of the State and lead ignorant persons to subvert the Government. The objects of sedition generally are to induce discontent and insurrection, to stir up opposition to the Government, and to bring the administration of justice into contempt; and the very tendency of sedition is to incite the people to insurrection and rebellion. Sedition has been described as disloyalty in action, and the law considers as sedition all those practices which have for their object to excite discontent or disaffection, to create public disturbance, or to lead to civil war; to bring into hatred or contempt the Sovereign or Government, the laws or the constitution of the realm and generally all endeavours to promote public disorder. Public disorder, or the reasonable anticipation or likelihood of public disorder, is thus the gist of the offence

PENAL CODE (1860), S. 147.

The acts or words complained of must either incite to disorder or must be such as to satisfy reasonable men that that is their intention or tendency. Abusive language, even when used about a Government, is not necessarily seditious. Sedition is a grave offence, a prosecution for which is a formidable weapon in the hands of a Government; but for that very reason it is all the more necessary to remember that opinions, and even the violent expression of opinions, do not necessarily fall within it. The deceased was involved in an altercation with three of the eight accused who were armed with lathis. The deceased was attacked by these three, and they were joined by the remaining five accused of whom one had a spear and the others lathis. The deceased fell dead. At the post mortem no trace of lathi injuries were found, but the body was then in a highly decomposed condition. There were, however, three wounds which could have been caused by a spear, near the chest; and one at the back which could have been caused by a spear or gurasa. No bones were broken and it was therefore probable that any injuries inflicted by a lathi must have been of a simple nature. The prosecution failed to establish the motive suggested by them, namely that the accused came armed with the object of killing the deceased. It was however, clear that there were some old grudges between the parties.

PENAL CODE (1860), S. 149.

When a person has already attained or caught up with his object and passes beyond it, he can no longer be said to be pursuing or prosecuting it. The phrase "in prosecution of the common object" in the first clause of S. 149, I. P. Code, must be strictly construed as equivalent to "in order to attain the common object." Where the common object of an unlawful assembly is found to be only to cause hurt, but two of the members of the assembly commit murder by killing two persons in prosecution of that common object, it cannot be said that the murders are committed in prosecution of the common object of the unlawful assembly so as to render the remaining members of that assembly guilty of murder under the first clause of S. 149, I. P. Code. In order to justify the conviction of the remaining members of the offence of murder it must be found definitely that the members knew that murder was likely. It is contrary to all principles of criminal responsibility to convict an offender for an offence which he neither committed himself, nor intended should be committed, nor even contemplated as likely to be committed by his associates. In order that S. 149 should come into effect the offence need not be committed in direct prosecution of the common object of the assembly; it is sufficient that the offence should be such that the members of the assembly knew it to be likely to be committed. But this does not mean that where an offence under S. 182 is complete, and the prosecution is lodged under S. 182, the proceedings under S. 182 must subsequently be quashed because the accused not content with the false report to the police, subsequently makes a false complaint to a Magistrate in addition and thereby exposes himself to a prosecution under S. 211, I.P. Prosecution witness who was a sales officer of a credit co operative society went to a house in a village with the intention of entering it to seize some moveables in the house alleged to belong to the second accused, in execution of decree obtained by the society against the 2nd accused. The 1st accused who was the wife of the second accused, slammed the door in the face of P. W. 1 just when he was about to enter the house, and prevented him from entering the house to do his duty. It was undoubtedly part of the duty of P W. 1, to take property in execution of the decree of the society.

Held, (1) that the shutting of the door in P.W. 1's face amounted to "obstructing" him within the meaning of S. 186, I. P. Code, and there was no more effective method of obstructing P. W. 1 in the performance of his duty of attaching the property inside the house than by shutting the door in his face, and the accused were therefore liable under S. 186; (2) that it did not appear that the offence fell under S. 52 of the Co operative Societies Act so as to be triable only by a First Class Magistrate under S. 56 of that Act, but even if it did fall under that section, the offence under S. 186 being more serious, a second class Magistrate was competent to try the accused for that offence; it could not therefore be said that the second class Magistrate clutched at jurisdiction and acted improperly. Any blow on the head with a heavy implement is liable to cause a momentary disturbance of the faculties, if not actual concussion. The first normal reaction of a person so injured would be to make any possible movement which might have the effect of warding off any further blow, but without any fully conscious realisation of what he was doing. If the victim was carrying anything in his hand, the first reaction would be to raise it in the direction from which a blow had been directed. If a blow was given by him while he was reeling under the effect of the blow received on the head it is reasonable to assume that it was given as a purely defensive measure and probably without any conscious intention beyond that. injury as is likely to cause death. In the case of a charge under S. 302, I.P.Code, it is the duty of the Judge to consider first of all whether the case is not murder as defined in S. 300 and if he considers that it does not fall within the definition, to give reasons. Knowledge in such a case is a matter of presumption and a person must be presumed to know the natural consequences of his act. If the accused intended to cause such injuries as were likely to cause the death of the deceased it must be presumed that they knew that such injuries were likely to cause death. ——S. 376—Conviction—Charge of rape—Necessity for corroboration of complainant's evidence—Nature of corroboration—Charge to jury—Duty of Judge—Non-direction—Effect of.

It is a very well-settled rule of practice in India that in rape cases the evidence of the complainant must be corroborated The nature of the corroboration must necessarily depend upon the facts of each particular case. Where rape is denied, the sort of corroboration to be looked for is medical evidence showing injury to the private parts of the complainant, injury to other parts of her body, which may have been occasioned in a struggle, seminal stains on her clothes or the clothes of the accused or on the places where the offence is alleged to have been committed; and in all cases importance is attached to the subsequent conduct of the complainant whether she makes a charge promptly or not is always relevant. Subsequent conduct, by itself, though important, is not enough, because a witness cannot corroborate himself or herself. It is the duty of a judge in a trial on a charge of rape to sufficiently direct the jury on he question of corroboration. He is bound to tell the jury that it is a rule of the Court, in cases of rape, not to act on the evidence of the complainant without some corroboration, and when there is no corroboration, to direct the jury that their proper course is to return a verdict of not guilty. Where the Judge does not tell the jury that it was their duty not to act on the uncorroborated testimony of the complainant in view of the experience of the Courts that such evidence is not sufficiently reliable, there is in law non-direction and a verdict of guilty cannot stand. (Beaumont, C.J., Wadia and Wassoodew, JJ.) EMPEROR v. MAHADEO TATYA. 200 I.C. 261=15 R.B. 1=43 Cr.L.J. 621=44 Bom. L.R. 216=A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 121 (F.B.).

It is an essential part of the proof in rape that there should have been not only an assault but actual penetration. The only witness who can prove that is the woman. In practice, a conviction for rape almost entirely depends on the credibility of the woman so far as the essential ingredients are concerned, the other evidence being merely corroborative. Her testimony is vital in a case where the woman is married and the medical evidence in no way corroborates the charge of rape. The presence of spermatozoa indicating semen found in the woman's genitals or on her saree is by no means final in the case of a married woman (Mockett, J.) KARICHIAPPA GOUNDAN, In re. 199 I.C. 742=14 R.M. 667=43 Cr.L.J. 576=A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 285.

Where a motor lorry bought under a hire purchase agreement is seized for non-payment of the instalments due by the purchaser complainant, the taking over of possession of the lorry without the consent of complainant even if it be with the consent of the driver and cleaner thereof, is an offence under S. 378, Penal Code. The possession of the driver and cleaner is only possession of the master and when their master that is the complainant has not consented to such possession being taken by the accused, it amounts to taking possession without the consent of the person in whom the legal possession is vested and the offence falls under S.378. In such a case the question whether the ownership had or had not passed to the complainant is wholly immaterial, as S. 378 deals with possession and not ownership. ——S. 378—Theft—Fish in pond—When can form the subject of theft.

As long as water flows in and out of a pond thereby enabling fish to enter and leave it, the fish are free and in a state of nature, and so no more belong to the owner of the pond than a bird that settles on a tree in a person's garden belongs to that person; but when once the water has fallen to such a level that fish cannot leave it, then they are trapped and consequently in the possession of the owner of the pond. Then any person who takes fish from that pond without the owner's consent with intent to cause him loss, necessarily commits theft. ——S. 399—Ingredients of offence—"Preparation"—What constitutes—Preparation and assembly—Distinction—Inference of intention from conduct of members of party—Relevancy and value of—Presumption as to intention.

Ordinarily it is no offence to make preparation for committing a crime until the stage of preparation has passed and that of attempt is reached. But under S. 399, I.P.Code, it is an offence to make any preparation for committing dacoity. S. 399 is one of the three sections in the Code in which the preparation to commit an offence is made punishable. It is not possible to lay down any hard and fast rule that any particular act or any particular kind of step towards the commission of the offence is necessary to constitute "preparation." The essential thing is that the prosecution must prove that there were persons who had conceived the design of committing dacoity. Once the existence of such a conspiracy has been established, then any step taken with the intention of forwarding that design may justify the Court in holding that there has been "preparation" within the meaning of S. 399, I. P. Code. Where it is found that a large number of persons from neighbouring villages had gone in one or more groups to a destination to which they have not shown that they had any lawful purpose to go, and that there were meetings at a near place of persons who were subsequently found absent from their homes at the relevant time, that is an indication from which a concerted purpose can be inferred in the departure. The conduct of those members of the party, who are found at a near village, in failing to give any satisfactory explanation of their presence and also in the inquiries made by some of them as to who in those villages had money, can be taken to suggest that the object of the journey of these persons was a raid on property. Inference from these individual acts is no way conclusive, but the intention underlying the conduct of any individual can seldom be conclusively established. But if the prosecution does establish that the character and circumstance of an act suggest that it was done with a particular intention, then under S. 106, Ill, (a) of the Evidence Act it may be assumed that he has that intention unless he proves the contrary. Where all the circumstances proved are in every way consistent with the setting out of an expeditionary party with a view to the commission of a violent crime, and lead to the inference of a design to commit dacoities it can be taken that it was for this purpose that the members of the party had gone out, although it is not proved that they were carrying arms when that was the intention in their minds, the going out for that purpose would be a "preparation" for the fulfilment of that purpose, i.e., dacoity.

Varma J.—From the wording of Ss. 399 and 402, I.P. Code, it is clear that the Legislature wanted to draw a distinction between preparation for a dacoity and assembling for the purpose of committing dacoity. In the case of assembling for dacoity there may be assembling for dacoity without preparation and something would be required before members of an assembly can be said to be preparing to commit dacoity. When it has been proved that the members of the assembly covered a distance of about forty miles and that some of them were inquiring about substantial men, it must be held that they passed the stage of assembly and were making preparation to commit dacoity so as to be liable under S. 399. Once the prosecution proves that it is stolen property, the Court may presume that the person in possession is either the thief or receiver of stolen property. The question whether the offence was one of destruction of property under S. 425 or theft under S. 379 is, however, rather academic; for the Court could change the conviction from S. 425 to S. 379 of the Penal Code, the ingredients of the charge being properly set out and the evidence being the same; for the gravamen of the offence was that the cattle grazed the crop belonging to the complainant. ——S. 463—Offence under—Fabrication of document to support false defence.

If the accused, in order to make good a false defence and to cause justice to miscarry, fabricates a document, his act clearly comes strictly within the definition in S. 465, I. P. Code, within the part of the definition which relates to the intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any person. The proper administration of justice is so vital to the ordered existence of a civilized community that an intent to defraud justice is something very closely, very nearly, affecting the public, and the complainant. ——S. 480—Essential ingredients which go to prove use of a false trade mark—Fact of identity of the marks, if dispenses with proof of their use as required by S. 480.

PENAL CODE (1860), S. 486.

There are two essential ingredients which go to prove the use of a false trade mark as defined by S. 480, Penal Code. They are (1) Marking any goods or any case, package or receptacle containing goods or using any case, package or receptacle, with any mark thereon and (2) such marking or using must be in the manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the goods so marked, or the goods in the marked receptacle, are the manufacture or merchandise of a person whose manufacture or merchandise they are not. The mere fact of identity of the marks concerned cannot dispense with proof of their use as required by the section. Hence where the evidence on the point as to whether the trade mark in dispute was used by the party complained against in the manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the goods marked were the manufacture or merchandise of the complainant is unsatisfactory a conviction for the false use of the trade mark cannot be upheld. ——S. 486—Counterfeiting of trade marks—"Side by side" test—If sound.

In a case under S. 486, I. P. Code, the test of comparison of the marks side by side is not a sound one, since a purchaser will seldom have the two marks actually before him when he makes his purchases and marks with many differences may yet have an element of similarity which will cause deception, more especially if the goods are in practice asked for by a name which denotes the mark or the device on it. Where a husband lived in the place where he was employed and his wife lived with his father in another place and she was enticed away from her father's place where she had gone on a temporary visit, it was held that a complaint by the father of the husband was by a proper person. ——S. 499—Fair comment—Conditions—Press, if has any special privilege—Position of men in public positions.

"In order that a comment may be fair it (1) must be based on facts truly stated; (2) must not contain imputations of corrupt or dishonourable motives on the person whose conduct or work is criticised, save in so far as such imputations are warranted by the facts; and (3) must be the honest expression of the writer's real opinion." The question to be considered would be, would any fair man, however prejudiced he might be, or however exaggerated or obstinate his views, have written the criticism in question. The press and the authors and publishers of books have no special privilege. They are in no better position than any other man. If they make assertions of facts as opposed to comments on them and those assertions are defamatory they must either justify those assertions, or, in the limited cases specified in the ninth exception to S. 499, I.P. Code, show that the attack on the character of another was for the public good and that it was made in good faith. Men in public positions can claim no immunity from criticisms even when the positions they hold are official. It is the penalty they pay for the honour and privilege of occupying posts of exceptional responsibility, power and advantage. But there are limits to the attacks which may be made upon them. ——S. 499, Ex. 1, 2 and 9—When available.

Where a newspaper editor is accused of having published defamatory statements about the conduct of a Jail Superintendent with reference to the treatment of the prisoners, in order to claim the benefit of the first, second and ninth exceptions the accused must show that the opinion respecting the conduct and character of the official concerned was confined to his character so far as it appeared in his conduct in the discharge of his official duties and that the opinion was expressed in good faith. He must show that he had reasonable grounds for believing the allegations to be true and that the complainant was responsible for the mismanagement and that he could have remedied it, but he being naturally disposed to cruelty, preferred not to. Where the accused had accepted the allegations against the Jail Superintendent, as true upon an ex parte enquiry, after hearing one party only, and that party a very interested party, without giving the other party concerned an opportunity to refute them, it was held that it was impossible to hold that the accused acted with due care and attention and that his opinion was expressed in good faith. Where both sides have produced evidence the question of burden of proof is not of much importance. It was held that the question, whether the rule that where a will executed under suspicious circumstances is challenged on the ground of fraud, before the question of fraud could arise the party propounding the will must remove the suspicion arising from the circumstances connected with the execution of will applies also to the cases of adoptions and gifts under suspicious circumstances was not necessary to be decided for the purposes of the case before their Lordships. It was held that even if the rule was applied to the facts of the case before them, the trial Judge could not be said to have misdirected himself or to have not applied his mind to the right issue. Where a suit is instituted by the Crown for declaration of title to and possession of property on the ground that the property had devolved on the Crown by escheat, it has first to be ascertained whether the necessary requisites for the establishment of that title have been made out. Where the Crown's title to get the property rests not in possessing any special qualification but in the assertion that no other preferential claimant was in existence at the time of the last owner's death, the onus of proving that no such person was in existence would lie on the plaintiff and since a negative fact has to be established by the plaintiff, the prima facie proof of such non-existence would be obviously enough. But that proof must be of such a character that firstly it may put the matter beyond any reasonable doubt, thereby discharging the onus probandi, and secondly, of such a nature as may shift the burden of proof on to the defendant to rebut the evidence adduced on behalf of the plaintiff which, if not rebutted would entitle the latter to the relief asked for. While certain Ranees sought execution of a decree obtained by them, negotiations for a compromise ensued, in which X acted as adviser to the Ranees. The negotiations resulted in a compromise under which the defendant agreed, among other things, to pay certain creditors of the Ranees, of whom X was one. It was arranged that the Ranee's creditors thus to be paid by the defendant should be given promissory notes by the defendant to the amount of their respective debts, and that the Ranees should thereupon be absolved by them from liability for those debts. In a suit by the representatives of X for the balance due on the promissory note given by the defendant to X.

Held, (i) that the defendant was not entitled to establish that the Ranees, if they had been sued by X could have resisted the payment to him of the whole or part of the amount which, as part of the compromise, the defendant had bound himself to the Ranees to pay to X; (ii) that the defendant could not suggest that X had intervened in the litigation between the defendant and the Ranees as adviser to the Ranees for the purpose of making money for himself out of the litigation, and was on that ground disentitled as against the defendant to derive any advantage for himself. When it was once admitted by the defendant that he did not seek to upset the compromise (as indeed he could not possibly do in the present suit, to which the Ranees were not parties), it must be taken as against him that the sum which he had by the compromise undertaken to pay, by virtue of the promissory note, to X, was, as he had agreed with the Ranees, a sum for which he was liable to X, and the impropriety of X's conduct in regard to the litigation became, as between the defendant and X or his representatives, completely irrelevant. Nor could the defendant's case be bettered by the fact that he paid to X and X accepted a bribe to facilitate the negotiations. While that circumstance might well give the Ranees certain rights, it could not possibly operate to relieve the defendant in any measure from the obligation he had undertaken to the Ranees as well as to X to discharge the burden which he had taken upon his own shoulders as part of the compromise. There are of course exceptions to this general rule. If parties to a suit are charged with fraud or mi-appropriation or breach of trust, they are fully entitled in defence of their character to employ such solicitor and such counsel as they think fit. Where there are different charges of fraud against different defendants, they are entitled to employ different counsel separately, as it cannot be said that the defences are common. The question whether any particular term of a petition of compromise incorporated in a decree relates to the suit or is covered by its subject-matter must be decided from the frame of the suit, the relief claimed, and the relief allowed by the decree on adjustment by lawful agreement. The mutual connection of the different parts of the relief granted by a consent decree is an important element for consideration in each case in deciding whether any portion of the relief is within the scope of the suit. The facts undoubtedly have to be looked at as a whole and matter which is not covered by any of the issues in the suit may come within its scope if it constitutes a consideration for any of the matters in

A Court is not competent either in review or in exercise of its inherent powers, to set aside a compromise decree on the ground that the consent of the parties to the compromise was obtained by fraud. The only remedy of the injured party is to institute a suit to set aside the decree on the ground of fraud. Where, however, it is found that the aggrieved party had not in fact consented to the compromise and was not party to it, the Court has inherent power to set aside a decree based on such a compromise. ——Decree—Construction—Decree passed on compromise—Reference to pleadings and agreement—Natural meaning of words.

The appellant and respondent were interested as tenants-in-common in a village, the appellant being entitled to one-third and the respondent to two-thirds, of the nanja and punja lands in the village. In 1908, the respondent brought a suit against the appellant on the allegation that the appellant used the water of a channel marked B in the plan filed along with the plaint, for irrigation of about 14 Kulis of his punja land, marked C in the plan and praying for a permanent injunction against such use and against obstruction of the water flowing as wanted to the old nanja lands through the channel C. The suit ended in a compromise decree dated 7-7-1911, which provided that "the defendant shall irrigate only the 14 Kulis of land marked C in the plan filed along with the plaint, with the water from the channel marked B in the said plan. In other respects, the defendant should not, in future, convert the punja lands belonging to him in the village, as nanja lands, and irrigate them with water." The description of property and the plan attached to the plaint were subjoined to the decree. On 13—11—1935, the respondent applied for execution of the decree under O. 21, R. 32, C.P. Code, for breach of the decree by the appellant on the ground that the appellant, "for the first time after the compromise decree, had newly brought under nanja cultivation in addition to the extent of 14 Kulis and extent of about 5 Kulis which were punja and situate adjacent to and around the plot marked C in the plan in or about the last two months, despite the protest of the plaintiff and his men and is attempting to extend the nanja cultivation in the plots marked blue around the land marked C in the plan. The appellant in answer pleaded that the 5 Kulis only received water from channel B by percolation and drainage from the 14 Kulis and were extensively watered by a well sunk in the five Kulis, and contended that the decree only prevented the direct taking of water from channel B to any new land, and did not prevent him from taking water from another channel marked A in the plan to the 5 Kulis. It appeared that water channel A, flowed towards the north and into a tank, passing on the way the 14 Kulis marked C, which lay near to the channel A on its east side. Channel B took off from Channel A, at an earlier point and turned eastwards along the southern edge of the 14 Kulis. The punja lands of the appellant lay round about the 14 Kulis marked C, in the west, north and east sides of the 14 Kulis and adjoined channel A on its east side for a certain distance, with a small portion of them on the other side, the western side of channel A.

Held, confirming the order of the High Court, (1) that there was no serious ambiguity in the language of the decree and that there could be no doubt that the 14 Kulis referred to in the first sentence formed part of the punja lands belonging to the defendant in the village; (2) that the opening words of the second sentence, taken along with the description of property and plan attached to the plaint which were sub-joined to the decree, sufficiently identified the 14 Kulis as such without recourse to the pleading of the compromise agreement, which would equally place the matter beyond doubt; (3) that the words used in the prohibition in the second sentence in their natural meaning, referred to all the punja lands belonging to the defendant in the village other than the 14 Kulis, and the language used did not limit "water" to water from channel B; (4) that the appellant was, on a proper construction of the decree, prohibited from making use of the water not only of channel B. but also of other existing sources of irrigation in the village for any extra land which he might have converted or might thereafter convert from punja into nanja. ——Decree — Construction—Mesne profits—Decree against several defendants holding definite shares—Liability—If joint and several.

Where various sets of people, possessing different interests in land, are held liable for mesne profits, the executing Court will adjust and apportion the respective amounts of such mesne profits to be paid by each. Certain co-sharer maliks who had definite shares in the village and who claimed the right to settle certain diara land settled that land with third persons. The respondents brought a suit against the former on the ground that the co-sharer maliks had no right to settle the land and praying for possession and mesne profits. The suit was decreed and mesne profits were awarded against all the defendants (co-sharer maliks)

Held, that though the decree was in form a joint and several decree, it was in substance not a joint and several decree, but was, on a true construction, a decree against the defendants for their respective shares of mesne profits. Each of them would not therefore be liable for anything more than his proportionate share. ——Decree—Construction—"Suit dismissed with costs"—Meaning of—Separate sets of costs for different defendants.

It is settled that the expression "Suit dismissed with costs" means that the plaintiff is to pay the costs of all the defendants, i.e., two or more sets, if separate costs have been incurred. It cannot be read as meaning that only one set of pleaders' fees should be taxed in all cases. An order for a single set of costs must be asked for at the time of hearing. ——Decree—Declaratory or executory—Test—Decree to be taken as a whole—Directions as to rights to be ascertained in future on the happening of uncertain events—Executability of.

Where it is clear from the terms of a decree that it seeks to fix over a period of years the rights and duties of the parties, and particularly penalties to be incurred, on the happening of future contingencies, it must be held that the decree is clearly concerned not so much with the present right of the plaintiff to money or property, but as to his future rights on uncertain happenings in future, and since it is not possible to separate one term from another term of the decree (because the decree has to be taken as a whole), the decree cannot be held to be executable but merely declaratory. While the agreement contained therein may be an appropriate matter for a suit, it is not an appropriate matter for execution. An order or decree to be executable must be an absolute direction and not one dependent on any uncertain event in future; only absolute orders in respect of rights ascertained at the date of the decree are enforceable in execution. ——Decree—Setting aside — Grounds— Perjury—Finality of decision—Principle underlying.

There must be some finality to litigation and the rule that a title once settled by a decision should not be questioned again between the same parties is intended not only to prevent a new decision but also to prevent a new investigation so that the same person cannot be harassed again and again in various proceedings upon the same question. Hence a decree cannot be set aside merely because it is obtained by perjured evidence because, if the contrary were held, it would be necessary to hold new investigations again and again into the same questions, and would allow defeated litigants to avoid the operation, not only of the law which regulates appeals, but that of that which relates to res judicata as well. A final decree passed in a mortgage suit is not a nullity merely because it is based on the original preliminary decree and not on the modified preliminary decree made subsequently by the Court of appeal before the passing of the final decree. The Court passing the final decree has complete seisin of the suit and has jurisdiction to pass a final decree; and if it errs in passing the final decree on the original preliminary decree, though it had been modified in appeal, such error is one curable in appeal but does not make the final decree a nullity. The decree would still be binding on the parties unless it is corrected or set aside in appropriate proceedings. But the regularity of such a decree cannot the plaintiff must produce the written statement filed by the defendants in that suit in order to give the Court where the plea of estoppel is raised, a full and clear idea of the attitude adopted by the defendants. ——Execution—Dismissal of proceedings in default—Remedy.

A person against whom an order of dismissal in default has been passed in execution proceedings can certainly apply to the Court to use its inherent powers in order to restore proceedings dismissed in default. If this is dismissed and a fresh application is presented, the effect of the earlier dismissal can then be considered. Probably the safest course would be to ask for both in the alternative. In one case or the other an appeal would have to be accepted since at some stage the rights of the parties are to be finally determined, unless it could be held that an order of dismissal in default, is not only not appealable but final, so that no appeal would lie at any stage. Where in the final decree which was being executed the judgment-debtor was shown as a minor under the guardianship of his mother whereas in the preliminary decree he was shown as being under the guardianship of a pleader guardian, and there was nothing to show that the pleader guardian had been discharged.

Held, that it was for the judgment-debtor to show that he had not been properly represented when the final decree was passed and not for the decree-holder to show that the pleader guardian had been discharged and the mother appointed a guardian, that the presumption would be that all things were done properly and that the executing Court could assume that at the time the final decree was passed the minor was properly represented. (Harries, C J. and Manohar Lall, J) BADRI MAHTO v. LOCHAN SAH. 198 I C 821 = 8 B.R. 465 = 14 R.P. 505 = A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 264.

——Execution— Mortgage decree—Appointment of receiver of estate to pay rents and profits to decree-holder in discharge of his debts—Subsequent money decree against judgment-debtor and receiver in possession— Sale of property in execution—If barred—Extent of rights which can be put up for sale.

Where, in execution of a mortgage decree obtained by a Raj against an estate, a receiver is appointed to manage the estate and to collect the rents, etc. and to pay to the Raj the amounts due under the mortgage decree and other decrees held by the Raj, and subsequently another creditor obtains a money decree against the proprietor of the estate and the receiver in possession, it cannot be held that the holder of the money decree has no right to bring the estate to sale in execution of his decree. The right, title and interest of the judgment debtor (proprietor of the estate) can be put up for sale, viz, an equity of redemption in the estate, with no right to immediate possession and with no right to the rents and profits until the dues of the Raj have been settled Though the holder of the money decree cannot sell he estate free of the mortgage held by the Raj and of the order appointing the receiver, there is no reason why such rights as the judgment-debtor has should not be put up for sale. ——Execution—Plea in bar—Pre-decree agreement not to execute decree against particular defendant without proceeding against others—Agreement entered into before suit—If can be pleaded in bar of execution.

A pre-decretal arrangement cannot be pleaded in bar of execution if it attacks or varies the decree, but it can be pleaded if it relates only to the execution of the decree. A pre-decretal arrangement between the plaintiff and one defendant, compelling the decree holder to take out execution as against the other defendants before he proceeds either for the balance or for the whole of the decree amount against the particular defendant can be pleaded in bar of execution. Whether the agreement set up was entered into pending the suit or before the suit was filed makes little differences. Where such an arrangement is proved, the decree holder cannot claim to have fulfilled the terms thereof, by simply serving notices on the other defendants and taking no further action to attach their property or realise anything from them when they did not appear in answer to the notices. (Happell, J.) KANDASWAMI MUDALIAR v. PALANISWAMI GOUNDAR 202 I.C. 23 = 15 R.M. 421 = 1942 M W N 237 = 55 L W. 190 = A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 460 = (1942) 1 M.L J. 396.

——Execution—Plea in bar—Pre-decree agreement —When can be pleaded in bar of execution.

A pre-decree agreement which relates to execution only and does not strike at the decree itself is pleadable in bar of execution. There is little difference between a case where the decree is rendered inexecutable against some only of the defendants or against some only of the properties and a case where a decree is rendered inexecutable against all the defendants or all the properties. Nor is there any sound principle of distinction on the ground that the agreement was made before suit and not after the institution of the suit. A purchaser at an execution sale applied under O. 21, R. 95, C. P. Code, for delivery of possession and he was given possession of all the items purchased by him except one in respect of which he apprehended that there would be obstruction by the defendant. He therefore endorsed on the warrant that he would take possession of that item later on with police help. The Court recorded this on 21—9—1936 and dismissed the application. The purchaser filed an application on 26—8—1936, which was more than three years after the confirmation of the sale.

Held, that when the purchaser apprehended obstruction and desired to get police help, it was the duty of the Court to post the petition to another date in order to enable the purchaser to get the necessary police help. Since that was not done and the purchaser was not at default, the order of dismissal must be regarded as one adjourning the petition sine die and the second application must be regarded as a continuation or reminder of the previous application and hence not barred. Where in the course of an execution application, the parties settle the matter and the Court records that the decree being fully satisfied "the darkhast is disposed of" that clearly means that the application is dismissed. The fact that the compromise is subsequently held to be invalid does not have the effect of restoring or reviving the application for execution so as to save limitation for execution. The object of framing an issue is to direct the attention of the parties to the main questions of fact or law to be decided, and the duty of framing and recording the proper issues has been placed on the Court by C. P. Code. In framing such issues Courts of law should exert themselves so as to make them sufficiently expressive of the matters which they desire to consider under such issues. Where in a suit filed under O. 21, R. 63, C.P. Code, the issue raised was: "Is the suit maintainable according to law and in its present form?"

Held, that the issue did not cover the point whether the decree sought to be executed was not available against the execution debtors named in the application for execution, as it was not defect in the frame of the suit and did not touch the maintainability of the suit

———Jurisdiction—Absence of—Application to High Court for adjudication in insolvency—False allegation of residence within jurisdiction—Effect—Order of adjudication—If nullity for want of jurisdiction or for fraud.

A person really residing in Tanjore District falsely stated in his application for adjudication in insolvency and in the affidavit in support of the same before the High Court of Madras that he was residing within the local limits of the original jurisdiction of the High Court, and the High Court made an order on his application adjudicating him an insolvent. It was contended that the order of adjudication was a nullity being one made without jurisdiction.

Held, (1) that the High Court was a Court of competent jurisdiction for the purpose and the order of adjudiction was not rendered a nullity notwithstanding that the debtor falsely and deliberately alleged that he was resident within the High Court's jurisdiction; (2) that if the question which was alleged to create the want of jurisdiction was one which the High Court itself was bound to decide, the matter was not one relating to jurisdiction. It was a fact like any other fact which the Court had got to decide, and if there was any error in the decision, it could only be remedied by an appeal or other procedure known to law; (3) that the mere fact that a false allegation was made in the application and the affidavit in support thereof was no ground for holding that the order was procured by fraud or for treating it as a nullity. PRACTICE.

———Jurisdiction — Private international law—Decree of foreign Court—Adjudication of judgment-debtor in insolvency by foreign Court—Subsequent discharge by that Court—Executability of decree in Court of state against moveable property of debtor in that State.

Where a contract is made or is to be performed in a foreign country, so as to be a contract of that country, and there is bankruptcy law of that country, by which, in the circumstances that have occured, a party to the contract is absolved or discharged from liability, he will be discharged from liability in his own country as well. The decree-holder sued the judgment-debtor in the Madras High Court and got two decrees in that Court against him. The judgment-debtor later applied to the Madras High Court and was duly adjudicated insolvent under the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. The decree holder proved his claim in the Insolvency Court got some dividends and then applied for transfer of the decrees to the Court in Mysore State for execution of the decree by sale of the moveable property of the judgment-debtor which were in the Mysore State. He filed execution petitions in the Mysore Court which dismissed them on the ground that leave of the Insolvency Court had not been obtained under S. 27 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act prior to the filing of the execution petitions. In the meanwhile the Insolvency Court also made an order of discharge discharging the insolvent judgment-debtor. It was not alleged or shown that the contracts on which the decrees had been obtained were entered into in Mysore or that the liability under them arose in Mysore.

Held, that according to private international law the judgment-debtor was discharged from all liability by reason of the order of discharge passed by the Madras High Court in its insolvency jurisdiction and the decree-holder was not therefore competent to execute his decrees in the Mysore Court. ———Jurisdiction — Suit—Valuation for—Mahomedan Law—Co-heirs—Suit by one for share of inheritance in estate of deceased—Valuation for purposes of jurisdiction.

In a suit by a Mahomedan co-heir for recovery of possession his share of a deceased person's estate which he claims to have inherited and which he alleges is withheld from him by the other heirs, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is not the value of the whole estate but only the value of the plaintiff's share in the inheritance. Where the subject-matter of a suit is so related to things which have a real meney value that the relief asked for will affect these, then the value of the suit for the purpose of jurisdiction, in a case where no special method of valuation has been provided by statute, is to be taken as the market value of the property affected. Where, in a suit filed by a Mahomedan co-heir, though the primary object of the suit is for the plaintiff to obtain his or her own share of the deceased's estate, it is admitted that the suit must be regarded as a suit for the administration of that estate, the decree in that suit must necessarily affect the value of the whole estate.

PRACTICE.

Where the value of the estate is about Rs. 41,000 or more, though the plaintiff's share therein will come to only less than Rs. 5,000, an appeal from the decree made in such a suit lies only in the High Court and not in the District Court. ———Jurisdiction—Test—Application purporting to be under S 47, C.P. Code, not coming within its scope—Order passed on it—If without jurisdiction.

In order to determine whether a Court had jurisdiction to entertain the application which was made to it, and to make the order it did on it, the test should be, not how the application was described by the petitioner before it, but what it contained. It may be that an application which purported to have been made under S. 47, C.P.Code could not strictly come within the scope of that section, but that need not ipso facto deprive the Court of jurisdiction to deal with it, if there was some other section of the Code under which it could be dealt with. So, an order passed on such an application will not be without jurisdiction, if it could be justified by any other provision of the Code. ———Jurisdiction—Trust—Foreign charity—Suit for administration—Jurisdiction of British Indian High Court—Property belonging to foreign charity but situate in British India—Jurisdiction to protect.

It is a well-established principle that the administration of a charity depends upon the law, and is controlled by the Court, of the country where the charity is conducted. There is no jurisdiction in the Bombay High Court to remove trustees of a charity functioning in a native state, such as the Jaipur State, which is outside its jurisdiction and to appoint new trustees in their place. If, however, it be proved that property within the jurisdiction of the High Court belonging to a foreign charity is being misapplied, the Court can interfere to protect that property, the Court can grant an injunction restraining misappropriation of the property, or appoint a receiver, and then hold the property subject to the orders of the Court having jurisdiction to administer the property. If a person begins to assert that he is the owner of a plot of land over which his right of easement has not matured, he may not succeed in establishing ownership, but would, none the less, lose on account of his claim, the right of easement for which he was prescribing. But there is warrant for holding that an assertion of ownership, after the period of user has matured into an easement would be fatal to the right already acquired. A mere claim to hold the property as an owner cannot result in a plaintiff being deprived of his existing rights. A claim of ownership of property over which an easement right had already matured in favour of the plaintiff (claimant) would be insufficient to destroy the easement. ——Solicitor's lien—If can intercept set-off—Claim to set off in respect of different actions—Permissibility—Discretion of Court.

The Court has complete discretion to allow a set-off whether in the same action or different actions. Ordinarily as between the parties the Court should allow the set-off irrespective of the fact whether the set-off is claimed in the same or different proceedings; and a solicitor should not be allowed to intercept the set-off by his lien for costs due from one of the parties except under exceptional circumstances. Primarily the solicitor must look to his own client for his costs and there is no reason in principle or equity why a solicitor, because he has not taken the precaution of taking proper advances from his client, should compel a party who has to recover from the other party more than he has to pay to him to pay the solicitor's costs. There may be circumstances which would compel the Court to go to the rescue of the solicitor, e.g., where it may not be fair and just under certain circumstances to allow the set-off or where there might be a case of the parties colluding together, and practising a fraud or imposition upon an innocent solicitor. ———Right of—Material date for consideration—Date of sale or of suit.

A right to pre-empt arises as soon as a sale takes place and the vendee should not be allowed by his unilateral act to defeat the right which the pre-emptor has already acquired. The pre-emptor is given a certain period of limitation for instituting his suit and his right should not be made to depend on whether he brings the suit quickly or near the expiry of limitation or upon the time required for the disposal of the suit. Therefore, the date of the sale should be the date on which the rights of the parties are to be considered and not the date of the suit. ———Right of—Mortgage and sale of same property—Question if mortgage or sale was for benefit of person other than ostensible mortgagee or vendee—Onus of proof.

It is a question of fact whether in a particular case the mortgage or sale of the same property was for the benefit of a person other than the ostensible mortgagee or vendee. ———Right of—Mortgage with possession and sale of same property—Proof that real mortgagees are vendees—Onus.

Every case of pre-emption has its own merits and generally speaking in the case of a mortgage with possession and sale of the same property there is nothing to debar a pre-emptor from showing that the real mortgagees were the vendees themselves and that the mortgage had therefore merged into the sale. The onus, however, lies heavily on him. If the real mortgagees were the vendees and the names of the apparent mortgagees had been used benami to defeat pre-emption, the principle of merger will come into play and the mortgage will be taken to have been extinguished with the result that on pre emption the pre-emptor would be entitled to get immediate possession of the land. If the vendees were not the mortgagees, the pre emptor can get possession only after the expiry of the period of mortgage. He must satisfy the Court that the Official Assignee, in declining to give his name for the purpose of starting or continuing a litigation, notwithstanding that a full and proper indemnity has been offered to him, is not acting as a reasonable man would act if he were owner of and not merely a trustee of the estate. The effect of the proviso added to S. 7 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act by the amendment of 1927 is that when a person who is examined under S. 36 denies the claim of the Official Assignee with regard to any property in his possession, the Official Assignee can proceed against him only by way of suit, unless that person submits to the jurisdiction of the Insolvency Court The proviso, however will not apply when there has been no such examination. In such a case the Insolvency Court has a discretion. ——S. 30—Scope—Scheme sanctioned by Court—Subsequent arrangement giving undue advantage to creditor—Enforceability.

A scheme sanctioned under S. 30 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act is the only scheme which the Insolvency Court knows, and it is not possible for the Court to give effect to a modification of that scheme which has not been sanctioned by the Insolvency Court. An agreement which has the effect of giving undue preference to one of several creditors whose debts are included in the scheme of composition, and which is arrived at without the knowledge and behind the back of other creditors, cannot be enforced. A scheme of composition, even apart from S. 30, is not a nudum pactum but an agreement which is supported by good consideration, viz., the common sacrifice of the creditors who join the scheme. The Court will refuse to enforce agreements or transactions which are entered into in disregard of "commercial morality" even though the other creditors may not have been prejudiced in any way. No creditor should be allowed to score off a secret advantage for himself or to commit any act which may amount to a breach of faith with the other creditors. Such an arrangement which is held unenforceable in the Insolvency Court cannot also be enforced in the ordinary Courts. ——Ss 47 and 55—Assignment of life insurance policy by insolvent declared void—Effect of—Money due by insolvent on marine policies to same insurance company—Company's right to set off.

If an assignment of a policy of insurance by an insolvent is declared void as against the Official Assignee under S. 55 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, the position is the same as if there never had been any assignment and the life policy reverts to and is the property of the insolvent. As such the Official Assignee does not obtain the policy by a separate and distinct title but as property of the insolvent which vests in him under S. 17 of the Act. The insurance company is therefore entitled to set off under S. 47 of the Act the monies due to it from the insolvent upon the marine policies effected by him against the amount of the surrender value of the life policy which it is liable to pay to the Official Assignee. ——S. 55—Applicability—Joint family property—Settlement deed executed by karta prior to adjudication.

S. 55 of the Presidency Towns Insovency Act does not apply to property over which an insolvent in his capacity as karta of a joint family or trustee has a disposing power, at any rate with regard to the shares of other persons interested in it. Where within 2 years of his adjudication as an insolvent a karta of a joint family had executed a deed of settlement conveying the joint family properties to a certain person upon trust for the benefit of the members of his family.

Held, that all, that the Official Assignee was entitled to was a declaration that the deed was void in so far as it purported to affect the share of the insolvent in the property transferred by the deed and that he was not entitled to an immediate order for possession but that he must, if he saw fit, assert his right against the trustee and the other beneficiaries under the deed in other proceedings. ——S. 56—Burden of proof—Fraudulent preference—Onus—Materiality.

It is well-settled that the onus of proving that there has been a fraudulent preference lies on the Official Assignee even if the debtor was insolvent at the time of the payment and knew himself to be so. But the question of onus can only arise if the Court finds the evidence, pro and con, so evenly balanced that it can come to no definite conclusion. Then only the onus will determine the matter. If the Court after hearing and weighing the evidence comes to a definite conclusion, then the question of onus does not arise. (Lobo, J.) OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE, KARACHI v. ALIJAH HUSSEINBHOY. I.L.R. ——S. 56—Essentials of fraudulent preference.

The essentials of a fraudulent preference under S. 56, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, are that (1) the debtor must at the date of the transfer or payment be unable to pay himself on demand his debts as they become due; (2) the transfer or payment must be in favour of a creditor; (3) the transfer or payment must in fact prefer a creditor over others; (4) the transfer or payment must have been made with a view to giving such creditor a preference over other creditors; and (5) the debtor must have been adjudged insolvent on a petition presented within three months after the date of the transfer or payment. ——S. 56—Payment to avoid exposure—If preference—Payment to make good breaches of trust.

A payment made by a debtor in order to avoid exposure is not a fraudulent preference; and a payment by a trustee in order to make good breaches of trust committed by him, though there was no pressure upon him by the cestui que trust, does not amount to a fraudulent preference. (Lobo, J.) OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE, KARACHI v. ALIJAH HUSSEINBHOY. I L.R. (1942) Kar. 375 = A.I.R. 1943 Sind 1.

——S 56—Payment made by debtor from sense of duty—Preference.

A payment impeached as a fraudulent preference is none the less one because the debtor in doing what he did acted from a sense of duty, and acted from a sense of what he thought was right. (Lobo, J.) OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE, KARACHI v. ALIJAH HUSSEINBHOY. I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 375 = A.I.R. 1943 Sind 1.

——S. 56—Preference—Dominant motive of debtor in making payment or transfer—Payment to repair past wrong or to avoid evil consequences to debtor.

In determining whether a transfer or payment by a debtor to a creditor amounts to fraudulent preference, the Court has to consider whether the payment or transfer was made with a view of giving that creditor preference over the others. The true test is to find whether the debtor had a view of giving a preference to that debtor and whether that was the operative effect in view. The question is one of fact and every case has to be decided on its own facts. A mere making of a preferential payment cannot be a fraudulent preference. The dominant motive or real intention of the debtor in making it must be shown to be to prefer that creditor. If the transfer or payment is made with a view to repairing a past wrong or to evil consequences to the debtor himself, it will not be a fraudulent preference. ——S. 68 (b)—Scope—Settlement by Official Assignee—Failure to obtain leave of Court—Effect of—Settlement or compromise—If rendered null and void.

Cl. (b) of S. 68 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act does not make any distinction between compromises of claims in suits already instituted and those in respect of claims not brought before the Court. The omission on the part of the Official Assignee to obtain leave of Court to enter into a compromise or settlement does not vitiate it or render the same null and void as between him and third parties. Absence of leave does not render the act of the Official Assignee invalid or inoperative; only the Official Assignee will lose the benefit of a protection he would have got for himself had he obtained leave. The obtaining of the leave is a matter between the Official Assignee and the Court whose officer he is, and the only result of his neglect to obtain leave would be that he will not be allowed his costs, charges and expenses out

A handbill or poster announcing that nearly 1000 political prisoners are detained in India without trial can hardly be described as a newspaper or news-sheet, when this information has been in possession of the public for some time. ——S 2 (5)—"Public news"—Meaning of.

The expression "public news" in S. 2 (5) means something such as "current happenings or alleged current happenings of interest or likely to be of interest to the public or to a portion of the public" Anything new or unknown when communicated to another, is news, and news which is intended for, or is communicated to the general public, no matter what its nature is public news. An item of news irrespective of its nature when reported in a paper published for the general public, would be a public news, but if published only in a periodical intended for a small circle of readers interested in a particular subject would not be a public news. All news appearing in a periodical which is published for the general public is public news, and the paper is a "newspaper" within the meaning of the Act. If the proprietors of a paper choose to make week by week "news" of the activities or alleged activities of persons of sufficient importance to interest members of the public for whom the paper is published, and to whom it is sold or given away, they cannot fairly complain that it is not a newspaper, and that it does not contain public news. They must be taken to have themselves made what would otherwise be a matter of private interest, if of interest at all, 'public news." ——Ss 3 and 7—Scope—Press having same person as printer and publisher and press having different persons—Distinction.

Ss. 3 and 7 clearly contemplate action against both the keeper of the press and the publisher of the paper, and no distinction is drawn between the case where the printer and publisher are two different persons or one and the same. Consequently, where the printer and publisher is the same person the maximum security of Rs. 6,000 can be demanded from him under Ss. 3 (3) and 7 (3). ——S 4 (1) (e)—Construction—"Tend directly or indirectly"—Meaning of.

The words "tend directly or indirectly" in S. 4 (1) (e) mean something more than "have as a possible result." There must be something more than a mere possibility

PRESS (EMERG. POWERS) ACT (1931), S. 4.

The effect which words will produce upon he person to whom they refer may vary widely according to the nature and temperament of that person Not every newspaper attack, efamatory though it may be, is made with the intention of obtaining payment of money by the victim, nor every such attack can be said to have the "tendency" to induce payment of money S. 4 (1) (e) relates to private individuals and can be applied to protect private persons. The words in S. 4 (1) (e) are wide enough to cover what is commonly known as blackmail, and the fact that the person put in fear or annoyance may have another remedy by way of civil or criminal action, by a suit for defamation or a prosecution for extortion, does not exclude the application of S. 4 (1) (e) in appropriate cases (*Davis, C. ——S. 4 (1) (e)—Ingredients of offence.

To constitute an offence under S. 4 (1) (e) it is sufficient if one of the purposes of an article published in a newspaper falls within its purview. ——S 18—Power of arrest—Exercise of discretion.

Though an offence under S. 18 of the Act is cognizable and therefore the authorities are entitled to arrest, it is elementary that such powers ought to be exercised with discretion and arrests ought not to be made without necessity. ——S 23—"Order" — Meaning—Application to set aside order of forfeiture—Limitation—Starting—Date of order or date of notification of order.

The word "order" in S. 23 of the Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act of 1931 contemplates the notified order. It must be read as being the notified order because there can be no forfeiture until the declaration referred to in S. 19 has been notified. The period of limitation for an application under S. 23 for setting aside the declaration of forfeiture made under S. 19 therefore begins to run from the date of the notification of the order in the Official Gazette and not from the date on which the order is passed. ——S. 23—Scope of inquiry—Action under Act—Basis of—Question to be considered.

Under the Act what the High Court, and indeed the Provincial Government, is primarily concerned with is whether the words complained of have or have not the prohibited tendency and are of the prohibited nature. The Act does not require that it shall be proved that this is so. The words "whenever it appears to the Provincial Government" in Ss. 3 (3), 4 (1) and 7 (3) of the Act, have or are intended to have the same use and purpose. The essential condition of action under the Act is that the words complained of must have the prohibited tendency and be of the prohibited nature. It is the printing or publishing of the prohibited words which is the offence and the words must speak for themselves. In interpreting the meaning or the tendency of the words, the Judges should use their knowledge and experience of the habits and customs and thoughts of those upon whose acts they are called to sit in judgment. Indeed, S. 114, Evidence Act, permits a Judge to use his knowledge of human conduct and affairs having regard to time, place and circumstances in which the words were used. The general context in which the words are used can also be looked into. (Davis, C.J., Weston and Tyabji, JJ.) "NEW SIND," In re. I.L.R. PRESS (EMERG. POWERS) ACT (1931), S. 26.

——S. 23—Scope of inquiry—Expediency of action taken—Delay—Relevancy.

In dealing with notices issued by Government under Ss. 3 (3) and 7 (3) in respect of an offence alleged to fall within S. 4 (1) (e), the High Court is not much concerned with the promptness or lack of promptness with which Government took action. It is principally concerned with the nature of the words used in the newspaper. Nor is the question of the expediency of the action of Government a matter for the Court to consider. (Davis C.J., Weston and Tyabji, JJ.) "NEW SIND." In re I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 127=202 I.C. 405=15 R.S. 40=43 Cr.L.J. 838=A I.R. 1942 Sind 65 (S B.

——Ss. 23 (1) and 27, Rules under—Scope—If exhaustive.

Per Davis, C.J.—The rules framed under S. 27 by the Chief Court relating or pertaining to orders of forfeiture are not exhaustive and apply mutatis mutandis to orders for deposit of security falling within the first part of S. 23 (1). (Davis, C.J.; Weston and Tyabji, JJ.) "NEW SIND." In re. I.L.R (1942) Kar. 127=202 I.C. 405=15 R.S. 40=43 Cr.L.J. 838=A.I.R. 1942 Sind 65 (S.B.).

——S. 25—Scope—If exhaustive—Powers of interference

S 25 is not exhaustive. Where the security demanded by the Government under S. 3 (3) or S. 7 (3) is in excess of what is permitted by law, the High Court can interfere under S 25 But S 25 does not empower the High Court to reduce the security when the same is within the statutory limits. The fact that the maximum security of Rs. 3,000 has been demanded from the same person in his capacity as printer and publisher, is a matter for Government and not for the High Court. ——S. 26—Construction and scope—If exhaustive.

S. 26 is merely an enabling section and is not exhaustive. It merely permits the words to be considered in their general context. (Davis, C.J., Weston and Tyabji, JJ.) "NEW SIND." In re. I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 127=202 I.C. 405=15 R.S. 40=43 Cr.L.J. 838 =A I R. 1942 Sind 65 (S B.).

——Ss 26 and 27—Procedure—Evidence.

Per Davis, C.J.—The method whereby a fact is or is not proved is a matter of procedural law. S. 27 itself indicates the manner in which, apart from S. 26 the tendency of the words complained of may be proved. It does not contemplate the examination or cross-examination of witnesses. The procedure contemplated is the procedure of revision applications or refer ——Ss. 26 and 27—Scope and effect of—Evidence aliunde—Admissibility.

Per Weston and Tyabji, JJ.—S. 26 is nothing more than an enabling section permitting the words to be considered in their general context. It does not mean that the Court may consider no other evidence whatever. There is nothing in S. 26 or in any other section of the Act to suggest that, when forming its opinion under S. 3 or under S. 7, the Local Government is subject to any limitations as to the evidence it may consider. When hearing an application made under S. 23 (1), it is open to the High Court to consider evidence other than the words themselves or their context immediate or general, such as letters from aggrieved persons revealing the prohibited purpose of the articles published in a newspaper within S. 4 (1) (e) relied on by the Provincial Government in support of the issue of notices by it under Ss. 3 (3) and 7 (3) of the Act.

Per Davis, C. J.—There is nothing in the Act which precludes the Provincial Government from satisfying itself before taking action either under S. 3 or S. 7 of the Act, that the words complained of have in fact succeeded in their purpose, and that they have not merely the tendency to cause the harm which the Act seeks to avoid but they have caused that harm. This, however, is more a matter for the prudence and good conscience of Government than of law. The answer to the question whether the Provincial Government can lawfully support the notices issued by it under Ss. 3 (3 and 7 (3) of the Act by the evidence of the aggrieved persons must be found in the Statute itself and not in the rules framed under S. 27. The Statute does not contemplate that the Provincial Government shall support their notice, at least in the first instance by letters from aggrieved persons, stating that they have or have not paid money, as the result of the words complained of. The purpose or the intention of the printer or publisher is not to be proved from letters addressed to the Provincial Government by aggrieved persons which reveal the prohibited purpose within the meaning of S. 4 (1) (e). Neither Ss. 3 (3) and 7 (3) nor the rules framed under S. 27 empower the Provincial Government to do anything but serve a notice in which the offending words are stated or described and the deposit is ordered. The sections do not contemplate schedules to the notices in which documents other than those which contain the offending words are appended. They do not contemplate that letters from the persons aggrieved addressed to an Honourable Minister be appended to the notices. There is nothing in the rules under S 27 to indicate that the Special Bench has in the first instance to consider anything but the words complained of as contained in the newspaper, book or other document and set out in the notice issued by the Provincial Government upon the printer or publisher. It is contrary to all judicial principle that when an Official Receiver has allowed an order to be passed against him ex parte in proceedings under O. 21, R. 93, C.P. Code, by an executing Court, and has applied unsuccessfully to have that order set aside or reviewed, and fails to avail himself of his remedy by way of appeal or revision, he should be permitted to make use of S. 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act to reagitate a question which has been finally decided against him. The language of S. 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, though wide and comprehensive is not comprehensive enough to cover the case of a dispute between the Official Receiver, as representing the insolvent judgment-debtor's estate, and a person who has no connection whatever with the insolvency, such as an auction-purchaser in execution, when the subject-matter of that dispute is an order passed by an ordinary Court under O. 21, R. 93, C.P. Code, where the jurisdiction of the Court cannot be questioned. In such a case the Insolvency Court has no jurisdiction to interfere at the instance of the Official Receiver under S. 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act with the order passed by the executing Court under O. 21, R. 93, C.P. Where subsequent to the adjudication of a Hindu father as an insolvent, one of his creditors files a suit against the father and his sons in respect of a debt incurred by the father for family purposes without obtaining the leave of the Insolvency Court and obtains a decree against the insolvent personally and against the joint family property in the hands of the sons, it cannot be held that the decree in so far as it is against the sons is a nullity because leave of the Insolvency Court is not necessary under S. 28 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act to file suit against the undivided sons of the insolvent. It might be open to the sons to say that the suit would not be competent because leave of the Insolvency Court had not been obtained against the father and if the suit could not proceed against the father it could not proceed against them as well. The dismissal of the application for default and not on the merits is not "decision" which is final within the meaning of S. 4 (2) of the Act. Further, S. 5 (1) of the Act applies only to proceedings under the Act and does not bar a separate suit. ——S. 28—Hindu joint family—Adjudication of—Liability of minors—Extent.

There is no doubt that the minor coparceners of a joint Hindu family cannot be adjudicated insolvents. The question, however, of the liability of the share of the minors in the joint family property in an insolvency affecting the adult members is a separate matter. The minors would not of course have any personal liability nor would their property, other than their share in the joint family property, be liable. The liability of their share in the joint family property would depend on whether the debt in question was borrowed for the joint family business. If it was in fact so borrowed, the share of the minor members can be taken possession of by the receiver in insolvency. ——Ss. 28 and 37—Scope—Decree against Hindu father—Insolvency of father—Sale of assets of father and sons by Official Receiver—Annulment of adjudication—Attachment of sons' shares in execution of decree—Subsequent order re-vesting assets in Official Receiver—Effect—Rights of attaching creditor and of receiver.

It is well-established that the attachment of the sons' shares in a Hindu joint family property prevents the father from exercising over those shares his power to sell the property and utilise the proceeds for the discharge of his own just debts. Similarly when the shares of the sons have been attached by a creditor before the father's assets vest in the Official Receiver on the father's insolvency, the vesting in Official Receiver of the power of the father to dispose of his sons' shares for the payment of his own debts cannot enable that power to be exercised over the properties so attached. The plaintiff obtained a decree against a Hindu father on 16-12-1930. The father was adjudicated insolvent on 1932 and Official Receiver in the administration of the estate sold certain assets of the insolvent and his three sons. The plaintiff proved for his debt before 25—3—1935. Before the distribution of a dividend sanctioned by the Insolvency Court, the adjudication was annulled on 31—3—1936 for failure of the insolvent to apply for his discharge. On 24—9—1936, one of the creditors filed an application for a re-vesting order in respect of the assets, and pending this, the plaintiff on 6—10—1936, applied to execute his decree for attachment of the sale proceeds in the hands of the Official Receiver. An interim attachment was effected, but the Official Receiver who was served with the order on 20—10 1936 preferred a claim against the attachment a month later, by which time an order re-vesting the assets in the Official Receiver had been made and the claim was allowed. The plaintiff then filed a suit to vacate the order allowing the claim.

Held, (1) that at the time of the re vesting order, the sons' shares being under an attachment by the plaintiff, the re-vesting order would give to the Official Receiver no power to sell those shares or to use the proceeds of those shares for the satisfaction of the other debts of the father (insolvent) to the extent of the attachment; (2) that so far as the insolvent father's share in the property was concerned, the re-vesting order made the amount of such sale proceeds available to the Official Receiver, and the attachment would not create a charge, nor would it make the money which belonged to the insolvent any the less his property; (3) that the claim of the plaintiff to execute the decree obtained against the insolvent as against the shares of the sons was not barred by limitation, as the decree was kept alive by S.78 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, not only as against the father but also as against the sons, as the decree could not be executed under the father's power of sale (which was vested in the Official Receiver) without the leave of the Insolvency Court; (4) that under S. 37 (1) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, on the annulment of the adjudication, the proceeds of the sale would revert to the insolvent or his sons, as the case may be, and in either case the proceeds would be out of the reach of the Official Receiver by reason of the attachment effected before the re-vesting order began to operate. Leave of the Insolvency Court under S 28 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act is not a condition precedent to the filing of a suit against the son of a Hindu insolvent in respect of a debt incurred by the father for the joint family business of both. Where there has been a severance of interest between the father and son before the order of adjudication, the power of the father to sell the son's interest in the family property ceases, and will not therefore vest in the Official Receiver. ——Ss. 33 (3) and 64—Relative scope and effect of —Adjudication and discharge—Absence of proof of any debt—Right of a creditor to claim his debt.

The provisions of S. 33 (3) of the Provincial Insolvency Act and S. 64 of the same Act are not necessarily irreconcilable. It is not laid down in S. 33 (3) that the debt of a creditor must be proved before discharge. The rule is that the application to be included in the schedule must be made before that time and that it must be accompanied by proof of the debt. It may be that the proof is not considered sufficient by the receiver and, if that is so, there is no reason why further proof should not be provided after the discharge of the insolvent. The provisions of S 64 are subject to the rule laid down in S. 33 (3). They are provisions for the final distribution of assets of the insolvent and this distribution may or may not take place before an order of discharge is passed. If the distribution is to take place after the order of discharge, there would be no question of proof by any person who had not already made application supported by such proof as he himself thought sufficient under S. 33 (3) of the Act. Where there is an adjudication and a discharge before there is any proof of any debt and there has been no application by any creditor, it would be too late for a creditor thereafter to apply to the Insolvency Court to include his debt in the schedule and ask for its discharge by the disposal of any property which might be found to belong to the insolvent. The liability of a member of a Co-operative Society to contribute to the assets of the society in the event of its being dissolved before or during insolvency is a contingent liability and as such a debt provable in insolvency under S. 34 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act. The liquidator should either prove it or have it excluded from the schedule under S. 33 if it comes within the provisions of that section. If he does not do so, the member's liability for such debt ceases on his being granted a complete discharge by the Insolvency Court as expressly provided in S. 44 (2) of the Act. An order of the liquidator assessing the contribution of a member under S.42 (2) (b) of the Co operative Societies Act after he is granted a complete discharge will be in excess of the limit of his jurisdiction and therefore a nullity, and the Civil Court can decline to execute the order under S 42 (5) of that Act. Where an order of absolute discharge is granted to an insolvent who was adjudicated on his own application on the ground, inter alia, that no creditor had proved his debt before the Official Receiver, that means in effect that there is no chance of any administering of the insolvent's property. The administration of the insolvency is brought to an end by the Court's order granting the order of absolute discharge; and there is no longer any power in the Official Receiver to bring any of the properties of the ex insolvent to sale, on the application of a creditor made several years later, on the ground that the insolvent at the time of the discharge was possessed of assets. ——S. 37—Appointee—Powers and functions—Vesting order—Effect of.

The appointee in whom the estate of the insolvent is vested under S. 37 of the Provincial Insolvency Act on his adjudication being annulled, is not a mere passive trustee for the debtor retaining the estate for the benefit of the latter, subject to any order of attachment and sale that might be obtained at the instance of any creditor. The word 'vest' as used in the section connotes much more than physical custody or detention. It means that the title of the debtor inheres in the appointee, and he has the power to deal with the property. The purpose of "vesting" must be the distribution of the assets amongst all the creditors of the ex-insolvent and that is the only way of fulfilling the object for which the annulment order was made. The appointee therefore is to hold the estate of the debtor till it is completely administered, in accordance with the principles recognized in insolvency laws. It is true that all the provisions of the Insolvency Act may not be made applicable and the appointee may not have all the powers of the Receiver in insolvency, but the general principles of distribution embodied in the insolvency laws, which are based on broad principles of equity and justice, can certainly be applied. The Court by approving of a scheme cannot impose an obligation upon one creditor to give up his claim against another creditor; S. 39 of the Provincial Insolvency Act cannot cover the case of debts due to one creditor of the insolvent by another. Where in a scheme put forward by the insolvent there is a proposal that in consideration of the receipt of enhanced dividends, certain creditors should give up their claims against the surety (another creditor) and this is not consented to by the creditors concerned, it cannot be binding upon them under S. 39, although the scheme has been assented to by the requisite number and value of the creditors. Under S. 41 (a), (b) and (c) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the discharge may be either absolute or suspended or conditional. If the discharge is absolute, it must obviously come into operation at once. If the discharge is suspended, then obviously it does not come into operation at once but it does automatically come into operation at the end of the specified time. A conditional discharge operates immediately but the insolvency proceedings are not terminated until the conditions imposed have been fulfilled. ——S. 44 (2)—Applicability—Secured creditor—Security not realised during pendency of insolvency proceedings—Unconditional order of discharge—If bars remedy of creditor to obtain personal decree against mortgagor.

By reason of the provisions of S. 47 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the debt of a secured creditor is not provable until he has realised his security or has abandoned it or valued it. Until one of these events has happened there is no debt provable in the insolvency proceedings during the pendency of those proceedings, and S. 44 (2) of the Act has therefore no application. If a secured creditor has not during the insolvency proceedings realized his security, or surrendered or valued it, S. 44 (2) cannot affect him, as it applies only to debts provable in insolvency, and he is entitled to get a personal decree against the insolvent after he has got an order of absolute discharge, in respect of the balance due to him after sale of the mortgaged property. If he has realized his security before the discharge of the insolvent, and there is a deficiency, the balance of the debt constitutes a debt provable in the insolvency, and S. 44 (2) will operate to cancel it, and the creditor cannot afterwards obtain a personal decree in respect of such balance. Where after the payment of a dividend an application is made under S. 50 of the Provincial Insolvency Act for expunging the name of the creditor from the list of creditors, if there are no other assets to be realized by the Official Receiver and no prospect of any further dividend, an inquiry into the merits of the application is wholly unnecessary. ——S. 51—Construction and scope—Decree-holder purchasing property of judgment-debtor insolvent in execution of decree—Liability to pay bid amount to Official Receiver—Right to treat sale as cancelled and to restore property to Official Receiver.

There is no scope under S. 51 of the Provincial Insolvency Act for the passing of an order directing a decree-holder to restore to an Official Receiver property which he has purchased at an execution sale Where a decree-holder has purchased the judgment debtor's property with leave to bid and set off in execution of his decree against the judgment-debtor the intervention of insolvency can never bring about a cancellation of the execution proceedings including the sale. The benefit of the execution represents the bids made at a sale or assets realized otherwise in the execution. The decree-holder cannot therefore claim the right to hand back the property to the Official Receiver instead of paying the bid amount into the hands of the Official Receiver. The only adverse effects which S 51 has on the rights of the receiver are firstly, that if any assets have been realized in execution of a decree before the date of admission of the petition the receiver will have no right to prevent the decree holder from getting the benefit of those assets even if they are in the hands of theCourt and have not boen paid over to the decree-holder before the date of the admission of the petition by the Insolvency court; and secondly that an auction purchaser who can establish good faith can acquire a good title against the receiver. In admitting an insolvency petition all that the Court is concerned with is to see whether the petition itself complies with the requirements of the law. If it does, then it admits it. It cannot be said that such a petition must be deemed to have been admitted only on the date when the costs of publishing the notice of the petition are paid. Where properties are sold in execution in separate lots, the sale of each lot is complete when the whole of the balance of the purchase money of each lot is deposited in Court. There is no justification for holding that the assets cannot be deemed to be received by the Court until the purchase consideration for all the lots have actualiy been deposited into Court. The decree-holder is bound to return to the Official Receiver under S. 51 of the Provincial Insolvency Act the purchase price for that lot in respect of which the balance has been paid only after the admission of the insolvency petition. He can, in so refunding, deduct from the amount merely the costs of the execution proceedings and not the costs of the suit out of which the proceedings arose. The Court can, in a case of this kind, direct the refund to be made with interest under its inherent powers. (Leach, C.J. and Byers, J.) OFFICIAL RECEIVER, WEST TANJORE v. SAMBASIVA AYYAR. I.L.R. Once a receiver is appointed, all the insolvent's estate vests in him and it does not matter in the least whether the estate was in the hands of the receiver before his appointment or not. What is necessary for the Court to determine under S. 56 (4), Provincial Insolvency Act is whether there has been any loss 'to the property' and not to the insolvent. (Stone, C.J. and Bose, J.) CHANDULAL v. RAGHUNATH DAS. 1942 N.L J. 82.

——S. 56 (4)—Receiver—Proceedings against—Discretion—Principles governing exercise of.

Where in the circumstances of a case there is nothing to justify a positive conclusion of fraud and nothing but a doubtful enquiry on the hands of the Court, it would not be proper to pursue the proceedings against the receiver after several abortive attempts. This is a matter of discretion and should be exercised afresh in every case. Even in criminal matters the Crown does not always prosecute a second or third time when a previous prosecution has proved abortive, if it feels that they would savour of undue harassment or persecution. It is necessary to afford those who undertake the onerous responsibilities and heavy duties of officers of the Court the same general protection. (*Stone. ——S 59 and T. P Act (1882), Ss 2 (d) and 54 —Nature of sale by Official Receiver—Necessity for sale deed—Sale certificate if can be issued.

When an Official Receiver is appointed all the property of the insolvent vests in him under the Provincial Insolvency Act and he has power under S. 59 of the Act to sell all or any part of that property. It cannot be said that, when he sells property that it is transferred by operation of law or by, or in execution of a decree or order of a Court of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of S. 2 (d) of the T. P Act. Even if the insolvency Court ordered the sale and acceptance of the bid which it had no jurisdiction to do, it could not make any difference in the nature of the sale. It therefore cannot be said that S. 54, T.P. Act does not apply by virtue of S. 2 (d) of that act and that no sale deed is necessary. As the sale is not in the course of execution proceedings a sale certificate under O. 21, R. 94 could not be issued. ——S. 75—Appeal filed by insolvent—If abates on his death—Right of his legal representatives to prosecute appeal.

The legal representatives of a deceased insolvent are entitled to be brought on the record after his death to prosecute an appeal presented by him against the order of adjudication. If the Insolvency Court has on a creditor's application adjudicated the deceased as insolvent in spite of his opposition, the order very materially affects his heirs and they "being persons aggrieved" by that order have a locus standi to appeal if the debtor had died after the passing of the order of adjudication but before limitation for preferring an appeal had expired. Again, if the insolvent himself had filed the appeal but died after its institution, there seems to be still less reason why the appeal should abate. The order of adjudication adversely affects the heirs so far as the property is concerned and the validity of the order can only be effectively adjudicated upon an appeal in their presence. The same consideration will apply equally, if the debtor had been adjudicated insolvent on his own application and the creditors had appealed making him a respondent but he had died. In this case also the heirs have material interest in the decision of the appeal. (Tek Chand, Monroe and Mahomed Munir, JJ.) BHAGAT RAM v. DHANPAT MAL JAWALADAS I.L.R. ——S. 75—'Order' holding that 'Court had jurisdiction to entertain applications under Madras Act IV of 1938 and posting them for trial on merits—If appealable 'order'.

A decision upon jurisdiction has only the effect of regulating procedure and where it is not sufficient to dispose of the application hardly stands on a different footing from a ruling as to the admissibility of a document tendered or the relevancy of a question put and objected to in the course of the trial. Such decisions as to details of procedure and admissibility of evidence may, no doubt, be regarded as orders in a sense but it could not have been intended that such decisions should by themselves be open to appeal apart from the final decision disposing of the application or matter. Accordingly, an order merely holding that the Court has jurisdiction to entertain applications for scaling down debts under Madras Act IV of 1938, in respect of debts due by the insolvent and posting the applications for trial on merits, is not appealable under S. 75 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. The Official Receiver in whom the estate of an insolvent vested, started a proceeding under Ss. 4 and 53 of the Provincial Insolvency Act for a declaration that certain mortgages executed by the insolvent were void and were liable to be annulled on the ground that a right to future maintenance was not alienable in law under S. 6 (dd) of the T. Held, that in the circumstances the insolvent could be said to be a party aggrieved by the order and an appeal by him was competent, as a question was raised which was of vital importance to him, viz. to what extent the monthly maintenance allowances to which he was entitled would vest in the receiver under S. 28 (5) of the Provincial Insolvency Act. Defendant took from the plaintiff a house on a rent of Rs. 13 per month. It was agreed that in default of payment of rent the defendant was liable to be evicted on three days' notice and that interest was to be charged on rent at a particular rate. The defendant having defaulted, the plaintiff served a notice to quit, but the defendant failed to vacate. The plaintiff brought a suit for damages against the defendant in the Small Cause Court which held that it had no jurisdiction to determine the point.

Held, that the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction and could award damages. The remedy in a suit for damages for breach of a contract need not of course, be one of the terms of the contract, but becomes available under the law in case of a breach of a contract without any express stipulation. whether any place is a public place within the meaning of this section depends upon the character of the place itself and the use actually made of it. A public place is a place where the public go, whether or not they have a right to go. PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND (SECOND AMENDMENT) ACT (X OF 1938)—Validity—Discrimination on ground of descent—Government of India Act, S. 298 (1) and (2).

Per Gwyer, C. J. and Varadachariar, J. (Beaumont, J.. dissenting).—The Punjab Alienation of Land (Second Amendment) Act (X of 1938), contravenes sub-S. (1) of S. 298 of the Government of India Act so far as it makes it impossible for persons who are not descended from members of a particular community to acquire or hold on the ground of descent only, any interest in land of the kind included in the definition of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, as beneficiaries under a benami transfer in favour of a qualified transferee, and is to that extent inoperative. The provision in the Amendment Act of 1938 which is numbered as S. 13-A of the principal Act of 1900 is clearly discriminatory and taken with the notifications issued under the Act makes a discrimination on the ground of descent only within the meaning of S. 298 (1) of the Government of India Act. A prohibition against a person acquiring or holding property as a beneficiary offends this provision quite as much as a prohibition against his obtaining a transfer of the legal title. Sub-S. (2) of S. 298 of the Government of India Act saves provisions falling within sub-S. (1) only to the extent that they prohibit the sale or mortgage of agricultural land. Other kinds of alienations prohibited by the combined operation of the Act of 1900 and the Amendment Act of 1938 fall outside the scope of S. 298 (2). Sub S. (2) of S. 298 would hit the impugned Act as it was passed after the Government of India Act had come into force, even if it should be held that that subsection had no retrospective operation. The mere fact that it is an amendment of the Act of 1900 cannot place it on the same footing as the Act of 1900. "Prohibit" in S. 298 (2) can only mean the forbidding of a transaction and such a direction is appropriate only in respect of transactions to take place subsequently to the date of direction. The benefit of S. 298 (2) cannot therefore be claimed for the impugned Act so far as it purports to avoid transactions entered into or titles acquired before the impugned Act became law.

Beaumont, J.—The Principal Act is not open to criticism on the basis that it involves a prohibition against the acquiring or holding of land on the ground of descent only, and the impugned Act cannot be impeached merely on the ground that it fortifies, the provisions of the Principal Act. In applying the terms of S. 298 (1) of the Government of India Act it is necessary for the Court to consider the scope and object of the Act which is impugned, so as to determine the ground upon which such Act is based. If the only basis of the Act is discrimination on one or more of the grounds specified in S. 298 (1) then the Act is bad; but if the true basis of the Act is something different, the Act is not invalidated because one of its effects may be to invoke such discrimination. In the present case the true object of the impugned Act is to avoid a method of evading the principal Act, which itself is unobjectionable, and although some of the rights avoided by the Act may be vested in persons whose only disqualification is lack of a particular descent, such lack of descent is not the only, or even the primary, ground on which the rights are avoided.

PUNJ. ALIEN. OF LAND ACT (1900), S. 4.

Though descent has been made an element in determining the persons who fall within the description of agricultural tribes, the prohibition against alienation is based quite as much on the character of the land and the occupation of the holder, as on his descent. S. 13-A is not therefore ultra vires. (Gwyer, C.J., Varadachariar and Beaumont, JJ.) PUNJAB PROVINCE v. DAULAT SINGH. I.L.R. (1942) Kar. (F.C.) 86=I.L.R. ——S. 4 (2)—Petition for decision of tribal designation of petitioner—Power of Deputy Commissioner—Incorporation of his decision in revenue records—Procedure.

Under sub-S. (2) which was added to S. 4 of the Alienation of Land Act by the Punjab Alienation of Land (Second Amendment) Act, 1938, it is open to a person to submit a regular petition to the Deputy Commissioner for a decision on the point whether he is or is not to be deemed to be a member of an agricultural tribe If the decision of the Deputy Commissioner on such application is that the tribal designation of the petitioner is something different to that recorded in the revenue papers, it will be open to the Collector after the matter has been decided by the Deputy Commissioner to direct that the necessary steps be taken in entirely new mutation proceedings to incorporate his decision in the revenue records (Mitchell, F.C.) ABDUL JALIL v. CROWN. 21 L.L.T. 37.

——S. 4 (2) and (3)—Scope and effect—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

Sub Ss. (2) and (3) of S. 4, which were added by the Punjab Alienation of Land (Second Amendment) Act X of 1938, to have been intended to do away with the former provisions of the law under which decrees of Civil Courts passed in suits brought by individuals to have it declared that they do or do not belong to a particular tribe, were binding on Revenue Officers and executive authorities. Formerly, any order relating to this matter passed by them was subject to the decree of a Civil Court. For the future, it was laid down that the matter would be decided by the Deputy Commissioner whose order would be appealable to the Commissioner or Financial Commissioner, and that in coming to a decision these officers would not be bound by decrees passed by Civil Courts in suits instituted after a certain date. There is in the amending Act nothing to indicate that Sub-Ss. (2) and (3) of S. 4 were intended to, or did in fact, cut down or otherwise affect the jurisdiction of the civil appellate Court or the High Court in dealing with cases which are brought before these Courts by the Deputy Commissioner himself under the special procedure provided for in S. 21 A. Therefore, in cases in which a question arises whether the transferor or the transferee is, or is not a member of an agricultural tribe and the materials on the record are not sufficient to come to a decision on the point, the civil appellate Court or the High Court is competent to make remands to subordinate Courts for further enquiry and report. PUNJ. ALIEN. OF LAND ACT (1900), S. 16.

S. 7 of the alienation of Land Act applies solely to mortgages made by a member of an agricultural tribe in favour of a mortgagee who is not a member of the same tribe or of a tribe in the same group. This being so, the Deputy Commissioner has no authority to direct the redemption of a mortgage effected by the Official Receiver on behalf of an insolvent under the provisions of S. 7 (3) of the Act, when the insolvent and the mortgagee are members of the same agricultural tribe in the same village (*Mitchell, F. ——S. 16 (2) and (2-A)—Applicability—Temporary alienation by Official Receiver—Provincial Insolvency Act, S. 60 (2).

By the operation of S. 60 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act any temporary alienation effected by the Official Receiver in enforcement of an order of adjudication is subject to the restrictions imposed on a Civil or Revenue Court executing a decree or order by Sub-S. (2) of S. 16 of the Alienation of Land Act. Similarly Sub-S. (2-A) of S. 16 of the said Act also applies to all temporary alienations by an Official Receiver in enforcement of an order of adjudication made after the coming into force of the said sub-section. This being so it follows that any lease or farm made by an Official Receiver after the enactment of sub-S. 2-A of S. 16 of the Alienation of Land Act in enforcement of an order of adjudication is subject to the restrictions imposed on similar temporary alienations in execution of a decree or order of Court by the said sub-section and that such farm or lease can be determined at any time by the owner of the land by tendering to the Deputy Commissioner a proportionate amount of the original consideration. If, however, the temporary alienation was made by the Official Receiver before the enactment of sub-S. (2 A), that is, at a time when he was not precluded from making an unrestricted lease or farm for a period not exceeding 20 years, the lessor will have no right to obtain the determination of the lease on payment of part of the original sum before the end of the period of the lease, when it does not exceed 20 years. ——Ss 21 and 6—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Mortgage of land with possession before Act—After Act mortgagor taking further loan from mortgagee on security of same property on same conditions—Suit, it lies in Civil Court.

Under S. 21 the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is only barred in such cases in which the revenue officer is specifically empowered to deal with under the Act. Where a mortgagor having already mortgaged his lands with possession to the mortgagee before the Act takes a further advance from him after the Act on the security of the land already mortgaged to him on the same conditions as the original mortgage, such a transaction does not amount to a fresh alienation of an interest in the land and consequently the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act are not attracted and, therefore, a civil suit will lie. But if the new transaction purports to cancel the earlier one or contains conditions substantially different from those contained in the original mortgage or an additional area of land is included in the security, the old mortgage is at an end and a new and wholly different relationship between the parties is created to which the provisions of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act will be attracted. The High Court has the power to revise an order of a subordinate appellate Court accepting the Deputy Commissioner's petition under S. 21-A of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, provided appropriate grounds for revision are made out. The Subordinate Court will be acting illegally and with material irregularity if it does not make any enquiry of its own but merely bases its decision on a report submitted by the Naib-Tahsildar to the Collector in the mutation proceedings, and its order is, therefore, liable to be set aside by the High Court in revision. S. 21-A of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act is not limited to the correction of decrees, which on the face of the record, infringe the provisions of the Act. The section requires, the Court to "find" whether by the decree or order, which the Deputy Commissioner impugns, the provisions of the Act had been infringed, and if in order to determine this question it is necessary to go into the facts which are not apparent on the face of the record, it is not only competent to Court of revision, but it is its duty, to frame an issue, institute an enquiry and come to a decision on it. PUNJAB GENERAL SALES TAX ACT (IV OF 1941) S. 8—Basis of assessment.

S. 8 of the Punjab General Sales Tax Act contemplates the assessment of a dealer for the year for which he submits, or is asked to submit, his return though the tax can of course be levied in a subsequent year. An assessment for a year cannot, therefore, be based on a return of the aggregate sales for the previous year, as this would be in conflict with the provisions of the Act itself. Further S. 8 (1), (2) and (3) read with S. 3 of the Act contemplate the taxing of a dealer on his actual turn over in any year and not on a hypothetical turn over for that year. (Heaton, F.C.) DEVI DAS v. EMPEROR. 21 Lah.L.T. 41.

——S. 8 (2)—Legality of notice—Power of District Taxation Officer to delegate.

The District Taxation Officer is not empowered either in the Punjab General Sales Tax Act or the rules thereunder to decide about the legality of a notice issued under S. 8 (2) of the Act. The proper, in fact the only authority to pass an order regarding the legality, propriety or regularity of any notice or proceeding under the Act (other than an order on an appeal against an actual assessment) is the Financial Commissioner. (Heaton, F.C.) DEVI DAS v. EMPEROR. 21 Lah.L.T. 41.

——S. 8 (2)—Notice for submission of returns for any period to date—Validity.

S. 8 read with R. 1 (3) of the Punjab General Sales Tax Act does not contemplate the submission of a return for a year prior to the 1st April, 1941, the date on which the Act came into force, and the assessment and levy of a tax on the basis of it. Consequently a notice under S. 8 (2) of the Act requiring a dealer to submit a return of the turn over of his business for the year 1940-41 is invalid. (Heaton, F.C.) DEVI DAS v. EMPEROR. 21 Lah.L.T. 41.

——S. 13—Order framed under—Conflict between rules and Act—Which must prevail.

The rules framed under S. 19 of the Punjab General Sales Tax Act must be treated by virtue of sub-S. (3) of that section as though they were part of the Act itself. PUNJAB LAND REV. ACT (1887), S. 31.

——S. 19—Rules under, R. 5 (3)—Validity.

Rule 5 (3) of the rules made by Government under S. 19 of the Punjab General Sales Tax Act is in conflict with the provisions of the Act itself for the reasons (a) that the rule contemplates the levying of a tax on the proceeds of sales effected before the coming into force of the Act, and (b) that it is the actual turn over in a year and not the hypothetical turn over in a year which can be taxed. In such a matter it must be the provisions of the Act itself which should be the governing consideration and that the provisions of the rules must therefore give way to those of the Act itself. ——Ss. 31 and 44—Entry in record of rights—Presumption of truth—Statement made in Court—Statement in writing.

PUNJAB LAND REV. ACT (1887), S. 117.

The presumption of truth attaches to the entry in the record of-rights and the annual record and it lies heavily on the person who alleges that the entry is wrong, to prove that it is so. Surati Dehi is the result of a general survey and is not a part of the record-of rights and no presumption of correctness attaches to the entries made in it. The statements made in the Surati Dehi do not purport to have been made by any person and are the result of hearsay information gathered by the Surveying Officer. They are not signed by any individual. It follows that irrespective of their being a part of record of-rights or not, they cannot be preferred to the entries made in the record-of-rights and annual records which are based on available particulars and to which a presumption of truth attaches. PUNJAB LIMITATION (CUSTOM) ACT (I OF 1920), S 7 and Art 1—Disposition of property by registered will—Testator living more than six years threafter—Suit by reversioner for possession—Limitation

A person governed by custom made a disposition in ancestral immovable property by a registered will of 1925, but his reversioner did not have knowledge of the execution or contents of the will till after the death of the testator in 1935. The question referred to the Full Bench was whether his suit for possession instituted in 1937 was barred under S. 7 of Act I of 1920, because he had failed to sue for declaration within six years of the registration of the will under Art. 1 of the Act.

Held, that the suit was not barred under 7 of the Act and that the word "deed" in Article 1 (firstly) of the Act should not be construed as equivalent to the word "document" but should be construed to have its ordinary meaning which would exclude a will. PUNJAB MUNICIPAL ACT (1911), S. 61.

The provisions of S. 18 of the Punjab Municipal Act relating to the corporate character of the Committee and the manner of suing, must be read subject to the provisions of S. 238 (2) which lays down the consequence of a supersession. Where a Municipal Committee is superseded, the person competent to take proceedings on behalf of the Municipal administration is the Administrator and even if the true view should be that he should take proceedings in the name of the Committee, failure to take proceedings in the name of the Committe is a defect purely of a formal character, which could be cured by amendment. The imposition of an octroi duty on salt by the Municipal administration of Lahore under S. 61 (2) of the Punjab Municipal Act which empowers a Municipal administration to impose any tax which a Provincial Legislature has power to impose in the Province under the Government of India Act 1935, is invalid. Under entry 47 of List I of the Government of India Act, salt is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Central Legislature and by virtue of S. 100 (1) a Provincial Legislature is wholly precluded from dealing with salt and imposing on it either a tax or a cess. The powers of the Central Legislature to impose duties or taxes on salt must not be limited to those derivable under entries No. 44 and 45 of List I. Entry No. 47 is in unqualified terms, therefore it is not possible to put any limitation upon the extent of exclusion of provincial interference so far as this item is concerned. The general mention of a subject as in entry No. 47 was not meant merely to give a general power of control to the Central Legislature but includes powers of taxation (Gwyer, C.J., Varadachariar and Zafrulla Khan, JJ.) ADMINISTRATOR, LAHORE MUNICIPALITY v. DAULAT RAM KAPUR I.L.R. PUNJAB PRE-EMPTION ACT (1 OF 1913) S. 3 (1) and (2—Water rights sold independently of land—If agricultural land or village immovable property.

A right to water can be had only if it is enjoyed by the owner or occupier of land as such, that is to say, as an owner or occupier of some land. Where the water rights have been sold independently of the land to which they originally belonged the land having been taken away by the Government the water rights cannot be said to be "land" within the meaning of S. 2 (3) Punjab Land Alienation Act, and their sale is not a sale of "agricultural land" within the meaning of S. 3 (1) Punjab Pre-emption Act. But "water rights" are immovable property for they are rights to water which is attached to the earth and therefore they are village immovable property as defined in S. 3 (2), Punjab Pre-emption Act. PUNJAB PURE FOOD ACT (1929), S. 7.

When deciding the question of the superiority of the right of pre-emption under S. 15, cl. (b), thirdly, the Courts have only to keep in view the plaintiff and the vendee and no other relations of the vendor. They have to take it that the vendor has died and have to find out as to who of the parties before them—the pre-emptor and the vendee—is entitled to inherit his property to the exclusion of the other. The person who is so entitled has a superior right of pre-emption. If he is a pre-emptor he gets a decree; and if he is a vendee, the pre-emptor's suit is dismissed. On the other hand if it is discovered that they are entitled to inherit equally their right to pre-empt is declared to be equal and the pre-emptor fails. (Mir Ahmad, J.C.) MAHOMED ALI KHAN v. The patti or other sub-division of the estate contemplated by S. 15 (c) normally connotes the existence of a homogenous group of persons cultivating a block of land. When the land to which the water rights were attached has been sold, the existence of a Kandi in relation to mere water rights is a mere fiction and therefore the Kandi in which the land to which the water rights were attached was situate cannot be taken as a unit for comparing the rights of the pre-emptor and the vendee in a claim for pre-emption in respect of the water rights. The water rights in such a case must be regarded as independent of the land to which they belonged. Consequently the plaintiff cannot be said to have a superior right merely because he was the owner of the land and the vendee was not. (Agarwal, J.C. and Mir Ahmad, J.) ABDUL QAYUM v. The Inspector under the Act took into custody certain case of ghee suspecting it to be adulterated. Subsequently the Magistrate released the property as the ghee was not found to be adulterated and directed the Inspector to return the same to the owner. The Inspector instead of returning the tins destroyed the same.

Held, that (1) after that order of release it was the duty of the Inspector to see that the owner was called upon to take the tins back and it was idle to plead that it was the owner's duty to get them back. The destruction of the tins after the order of release by the Magistrate was unlawful; (2) when the Magistrate had found in his order directing the release of the ghee that the ghee was not adulterated, the Inspector could not be said to have destroyed the tins in the bona fide belief that he was entitled to do it according to the Punjab Pure Food Act which contained no provision for the destruction of goods after they were directed to be released to the owner; (3) therefore the suit to recover the tins or the

A certificate of the Public Analyst given under S. 11 of the Punjab Pure Food Act is not sufficient on which to base a conviction. The question whether the food is adulterated or not is one for the Court to decide and not one for the Public Analyst. The form prescribed by the Act clearly contemplates that the Analyst is merely to give his opinion as to whether the article which he analyses has an excess or deficiency in constituents which are shown in Cols. 4 and 5 of the schedule attached to rule 3 of the rules framed under the Act. It is then for the Courts to come to the conclusion after considering the opinion of the analyst on this point whether the food is adulterated or not. ——S. 3 (a) and (b) and (cl.) (iv)—Applicability—Pending suits—Policy of Legislature.

The Punjab Registration of Money-Lenders Act applies only to suits instituted after the date on which it came into force. It specifically exempts from its operation suits pending on that date. In those cases, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to get himself registered or licensed; they are to be decided as if the Act had not been passed. Obviously, Cls. (a) and (b) of S 3 both relate to the suits which have been instituted after the commencement of the Act, and lay down that plaintiff must be registered and must hold a license either at the institution of the suit, or if he is not so registered and licensed at that time he must get himself registered and licensed during the pendency or the suit. It is clear from cl. (iv) of the section that the policy and the intention of the Legislature was not to penalise a money-lender for omission to get himself registered or licenced before the institution of the suit, but to place facilities in his way to get himself so registered and licensed before the passing of the decree. ——S. 13—Discharge of debt—Order for—Power of Court to pass.

There is nothing in the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act, 1934, which gives the Board power to pass an order of discharge in any circumstances at all. What is actually provided in S. 13 is that if a statement of debts is not submitted in time, the debt shall for all purposes be deemed to have been duly discharged. It is thus for the executing Court to decide whether the debt should be deemed to have been discharged by reason of any failure on the part of the decree-holder or not. If there has been any such failure, no order of the Board for discharge of the debt is necessary. On the other hand, if there has in fact been no failure it is not in the power of the Board to discharge the debt. Even if the debt has been discharged, there is a further provision that either the Board may revive it on good cause being shown, and there is nothing in the Act to provide for any further discharge after revival. PUNJAB RESTITUTION OF MORTGAGED LANDS ACT (IV OF 1938)—Validity — Repugnancy to Existing Indian Law—Discrimination—Government of India Act, Ss. 107 and 298.

The Punjab Restitition of Mortgaged Lands Act (IV of 1938) is not void on the ground that it is repugnant to the provisions of an existing Indian Law or as contravening the provisions of S. 298 of the Government of India Act. Although the impugned Act excuses performance of a contract it cannot be said to be repugnant to S. 37 of the Contract Act inasmuch as the contract itself excuses performance of a contract where such performance is dispensed with or excused by any other law. Similarly the qualifying or saving words in S. 9, C. P. Code, preclude the contention that an Act which bars a civil remedy in certain cases is repugnant to the provisions of C. P. Code. There is no provision in the impugned Act which conflicts with the Indian Limitation Act, and if there were any, the saving of special or local laws in S. 29 (2) of the Limitation Act would preclude the argument of repugnancy. The Act also does not clearly or in terms take away any rights which a mortgagee may have under Ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act. If they are raised in the plaint, the suit would not be initially cognizable by a Civil Court. But, if they arise out of the pleas of the defendants, the suit may be initially cognizable by a Civil Court, but would cease to be so when the Court finds that there is a dispute or matter with respect to which a suit falling within one of the clauses of S 77 (3 could be instituted. ——S 77 (3) (d)—Applicability—Test.

Per Bhide, J.—In order to see whether S. 77 (3) (d) applies to the circumstances of a case it is necessary to see whether all its requirements are fulfilled. It is, therefore, necessary to consider not only the nature of the dispute, but also the status of the parties as mentioned therein. Unless it is shown in any particular case that there is a "matter" to be decided with respect to which one or the other party could institute a suit which would be cognizable by a Revenue Court only, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts will not be ousted. ——S 77 (3) (d) and Proviso (1)—Scope and applicability—Suit by occupancy tenant out of possession to recover possession from his landlord—If cognisable by Civil Court—Power of Civil Court to try question whether occupancy right has been extinguished by abandonment.

Section 77 (3) (d) contemplates suits either by a tenant, that is, a person, who claims to be a tenant and is a tenant to establish a claim to a right of occupancy, or by a landlord, that is, a person who claims, or is admitted to be, or is found to be the landlord, to prove that a person admitted to be a tenant has not a right of occupancy. S. 77 (3) (d) applies only when the relationship of landlord and tenant is admitted and the nature of the tenancy alone is in dispute. A suit by an occupancy tenant who is out of possession to recover possession from his landlord of the land to which he claims the occupancy rights does not fall within S. 77 (3) (d) because it is not a suit by a "tenant" to establish a claim to a right of occupancy and therefore is initially within the jurisdiction of the Civil Court. In such a suit the Civil Court is not precluded by reason of S. 77 (3), Proviso (1) from trying the question raised by the defendant that the occupancy right has been extinguished by abandonment because the suit as filed by the tenant does not come within S. 77 (3) (d) and if it were brought by the defendant landlord against the plaintiff tenant on the plea of abandonment it would not be within S. 77 (3) (d) because the landlord would not be admitting the plaintiff tenant to be a tenant in the hypothetical suit. (Tek Chand, Dalip Singh, Bhide, Abdul Rashid and Muhammad Munir, JJ.) BARU v. NIADAR. 202 I.C. 497=15 R.L. 133=44 P.L.R. 488=A I R. 1942 Lah. 217 (F.B.).

——S. 77 (3), Proviso (1)—Scope—'Matter'—Meaning of.

The word "matter" in S. 77 (3), Proviso (1) is more comprehensive than the word "dispute." A matter on which the parties are "at issue" may be described as a "dispute", but when the parties are not at issue, the matter could only be described as a "matter." The object of the proviso was that whether the parties are or are not at issue on a particular matter, if the matter is such that it can only be heard and determined by a Revenue Court and if a finding has to be given thereon the Court should adopt the procedure laid down in the proviso. Even if a point is not disputed, a finding may still be necessary and may have to be given on the admission of a party. The proviso must obviously be read with S. 77 (3). ——S. 15 (1)—Whole election when void.

If in any case it is found that there is wholesale bribery and corruption, which it is not possible to bring home to any particular candidate and which is so widespread that it cannot be said that there has been any real election, then the whole election is void; and, if there are two or more seats, the election of both or all of those who were returned will in such a case, be upset. But in a case where one returned candidate is to be taken to be without blemish, a guilty candidate whose election has been held to be not valid should not be enabled to upset the result as regards his innocent fellow candidate. There may sometimes be cases in which, owing to the number of votes polled for the various candidates, it would not be proper to say that the invalidity of the election is confined to invalidating the election of one candidate. Each case has, of course, to be considered in the light of its own particular facts and circumstances. (Sharpe, J.) PILLAI v. DANGALI. 199 I.C. 110=14 R.R. 231=A I R. 1942 Rang. 52 or inadvertence, or amend, alter or annul the rules already framed by the legislature in cases where such rules are found unsuitable, unworkable or defective. The idea underlying the delegation of part of their legislative power is to enable the latter body to discharge the functions entrusted to it efficiently. This is apparent from the wording of S. 235. The words 'generally for carrying out the purpose of this Act' in Cl. (iii) of S. 235 should not be read as being 'ejusdem generis' with what has preceded them in the said section. The words are so wide and general in their scope that they cover all the purposes of the Act for which no provision has been made by the legislature. It is a residuary clause. When a rule or bye-law is framed or passed under such powers, it must be treated as if it were enacted by the legislature itself, provided, of course, it is fair and reasonable and the rule-making body has not exceeded its rule-making powers. Rr. 4 A and 4-B of Chap. VI of Sch I to Rangoon City Municipal Act which enable it to impose conditions as to deposits in cases of tender and forfeiture of such deposits in cases of withdrawal of such tenders are intended to facilitate the carrying out of the provisions of Rangoon Municipal Act and come clearly within the rule-making power of the Corporation. The plaintiffs (appellants) who had mortgaged their lands with possession under a mortgage of 1868 sold their equity of redemption in part of the mortgaged lands to the 1st defendant for Rs. 3,000 under a registered sale deed dated 29th August, 1916; the sale price was to be spent in redeeming the mortgage on that part and the other lands and only the balance, if any, remaining after doing this and after deducting the cost of the litigation was to be paid by the plaintiffs. The latter agreed to pay the 1st defendant any excess over Rs. 3,000. The other mortgaged lands, after redemption were to be handed over to the plaintiffs. On the next day, 30th August, 1916, the parties entered into an agreement in writing, which was not however registered, under which the plaintiff gave up their claim to any balance there might be after paying off the mortgagee, and the 1st defendant on the other hand was to redeem the mortgage whatever it costs him. The 1st defendant filed a redemption suit in 1917 and obtained a decree for redemption in 1920 without having to pay any amount to the mortgagee. This was confirmed in appeal in 1921. The plaintiffs subsequently brought a suit against the 1st defendant to recover by sale of the property sold to him, the sum of Rs. 3,000 and interest less the expenses of litigation spent by him in respect of the redemption suit on the ground that he had a vendor's lien under S. 55 (4) (b) of the T. P. Act. The 1st defendant pleaded the agreement of 30th August, 1916, in bar of the suit, but it was contended that it was inadmissible for want of registration, and that it was compulsorily registrable under S. 17 (1) (b) of the Registration Act as it operated to extinguish the plaintiff's charge under S. 55 (4) (b), T. P. Act.

Held, (1) that the statutory charge under S. 55 (4) (b) was on the property sold, and in this case the property sold being the equity of redemption which was all that the plaintiffs had to sell, as the price was to be paid on redemption and not before, there could be no question of any charge on the equity of redemption there being an implied contract to the contrary; (2) that the plaintiffs were not seeking to enforce a charge on the equity of redemption but only seeking to recover their money by sale of the land after redemption of the mortgage, and it was therefore doubtful if S. 55 (4) (b) could operate to give the plaintiffs a charge on the land after redemption; (3) that assuming that there could be a charge, it would only arise when the ownership of the land passed to the 1st defendant after redemption of the mortgage; and since before that time there was a contract to the contrary by reason of which no charge for the unpaid price could arise, the claim to it having been abandoned, the agreement did not require registration, because it did not operate to extinguish any right or interest to, or in the land, the plain-——S. 17 (2) (ix)—Endorsement of payment on mortgage deed—Admissibility—Proof of extinguishment of mortgage.

The wording of Cl. (ix) of S. 17 (2) of the Registration Act clearly implies that an endorsement of payment on a mortgage deed is also regarded as a receipt since the expression used is "any other receipt" and the limitation of the exemption from registration intended to apply to all such receipts including those which might be endorsed on the mortgage deed itself. Although an endorsement made on the deed is inadmissible in evidence to prove extinguishment of the mortgage, this ban will not prevent its being taken into evidence in proof of the payment of the money. A mortgage is not extinguished only by a subsequent agreement between the parties. It is extinguished ordinarily by operation of law after satisfaction. Thus, a mortgage can come to an end without any subsequent registered agreement, and in fact ordinarily does. This being so, there is no reason why evidence, either oral or in the nature of unregistered receipts should not be led to prove actual payment of the mortgage dues. Once the payment of the full dues under the mortgage has been established, then the extinguishment follows as an inference of law. Where the full amount of the mortgage money is proved to have been paid and the mortgage bond is produced from the custody of the mortgagor, there follows a presumption under S. 114 of the Evidence Act that the mortgage has been discharged. ——S. 23 A—Application for re-registration—Limitation—Starting point—Validity of registration disputed in written statement—Finding by Court that it is invalid.

In a suit for possession on the basis of a registered deed, the defendant pleaded that the document was inadmissible in evidence as the registration was not valid. The plaintiff thereupon applied for return of the document for presentation for re-registration but the Court feeling doubt as to the invalidity of the registration went into the question and gave a finding that it was invalid. The plaintiff then applied for re-registration.

Held, that limitation under S. 23 A ran from date of the finding by the Court and not from the date when the plaintiff knew about the plea taken by the defendant. (Almond, J.C. and Mir Ahmad, J.) KHEM CHAND v. CHETAN SINGH 200 I.C. 632=15 R. Pesh. 8=A.I.R. 1942 Pesh. 37.

——S. 28—Sale-deed — Vendor residing in one district and conveying property in another district—Vendor asking vendee to accept conveyance of small property in his district also to enable registration in his district—If renders registration invalid.

There is nothing in law to prohibit a person conveying property in one district and residing and owning property in another district and asking the vendee to accept a conveyance also of some small property in the district in which he resides so that the sale-deed may be registered there and he may not be put to the trouble and expense of a journey to the other district. It is not correct to say in such a case that the sale-deed is not validly registered at the place where it is got registered. ——S. 28—Scope—Inclusion of property to procure registration of sale-deed in particular sub district—When fraud on registration—Property included existing and belonging to vendor—Title passing to vendee—Effect—Registration—Validity—Oral evidence to show intention—Admissibility.

Where some of the properties mentioned in a sale-deed does not exist at all or is property of which no effective use or enjoyment can be made, the sale-deed cannot be said to relate to that property within the meaning of those words in S. 28 of the Registration Act. But this principle does not apply when those properties, which are alleged to have been included to get the deed registered in a particular place, are described with such particularity that there is no difficulty at all in identifying them, and belong to the vendor. It cannot be said in such case the sale-deed is not validly registered on the ground of fraud on registration as the properties can be effectively used and enjoyed and as the title to them undoubtedly pass to the vendee. Oral evidence in such a case to show that the vendee intended not to take possession of these properties and intended ultimately to allow his title to it to be extinguished is irrelevant when the

The father of the appellant, the inamdar of a village executed on 4th November, 1918, a document purporting to grant in favour of the plaintiffs a perpetual tenancy of certain land on condition that they were to pay the assessment and local fund. The terms of the document were such that it would create a permanent tenancy, but the document was not registered. The plaintiffs, however, entered upon the land by reason of the deed and held possession under it till 1936 when the appellant forcibly dispossessed them. The plaintiffs thereupon brought a suit for possession. It was found that the possession of the plaintiffs from 1918 to 1936 was openly under the right created by the document and to the knowledge of the appellant, and that their ownership of the perpetual tenure had become complete.

Held that the document of 1918, being unregistered could not affect the property or be received as evidence of any transaction affecting the property by reason of S. 49 of the Registration Act, yet it could be looked at as evidence for the collateral purpose of showing the character of the possession taken and held by the plaintiffs (the grantees under the deed).

Held, futher, that the plaintiffs had acquired a permanent tenancy as mirasdars and occupants of the land by prescription, and such a limited interest could be acquired by adverse possession. ——(as amended in 1929), S. 49, Proviso—Unregistered sale deed—Suit for specific performance of contract to sell contained in—Maintainability—Law in Madras.

Under the proviso added to S. 49 of the Registration Act, by the amending Act of 1929 an unregistered document affecting immovable property may be, even if not registered, received in a suit for specific performance as evidence of a contract. An agreement to sell cannot, according to the view prevailing in Madras, be spelt out of a sale-deed and cannot form the basis of a suit for specific performance, and it may be that, in the absence of a specific agreement to sell a property, it is not possible in the Madras Presidency to regard an unregistered sale deed as sufficient to support a suit for specific performance of a contract to sell. But it does not follow that an express contract to sell must necessarily be regarded to have merged in a sale deed, when that deed is not accepted by the vendee or happens to be incomplete in regard to its terms or is otherwise legally inoperative (Abdur Rahman, J.) VENKASUBBAMMA v. SUBBIAH. 55 L W. 563=1942 M.W. REGISTRATION ACT (1908), S. 60.

——S. 60—Endorsement— Presumption—Admission of execution before Registrar.

Registration is a solemn act to be performed in the presence of a competent official appointed to act as Registrar whose duty it is to attend the parties during the registration and see that the proper persons are present, are competent to act and are identified to his satisfaction and all these things done before him in his official capacity and verified by his signature will be presumed to be done duly and in order. Consequently, where the thumb impression of the executant appears on the Registrar's endorsement and the Registrar apparently satisfied himself by enquiries from a witness to execution and registration who was known to him that the executant was the person who had executed the document and admitted its execution before him the admission of the execution of the document by the executant must be deemed to have been proved by the endorsement of the Sub Registrar in view of the provisions of Ss. 59 and 60. ——S. 60 and Evidence Act (1872), S. 67—Value of certificate of registration—It substantive evidence of execution—Mere proof of admission of execution—It satisfies requirements of S. 67, Evidence Act.

The certificate of registration has an evidentiary value attached to it by S. 60 of the Registration Act. But it is made applicable only for the purpose of proving that the document has been duly registered and that the facts mentioned in the endorsements made under Ss. 52 and 58 of the Act has occurred as there mentioned. It proves the admission of execution by the person who purported to execute the document. It may be considered for the purpose of corroboration, but it cannot serve as substantive evidence. Admission of execution though good against executants and their representatives would not be binding on third parties. Mere proof of admission of execution would not satisfy the requirements of S. 67 of the Evidence Act which requires that the signuture of the executant must be proved to be in his handwriting. SEA CUSTOMS ACT (VIII OF 1878), S. 30 (b) —False declaration of real value of goods imported—Prosecution for—Proof required.

In a prosecution of an importer of goods for abetment of cheating by causing a false declaration to be made of the real value of the goods as defined in S 30 (b) of the Sea Customs Act, it is not sufficient to prove that the Customs Officers in fact applied S. 30 (b) of the Act, or that the importer sought to have the real value determined under S. 30 (b) It is incumbent on the prosecution to prove that those conditions were fulfilled which entitled the Customs Officers to apply S. 30 (b) and not S. 30 (a). ——S. 30 (b)—Real value of imported goods—What is—Importer giving estimate of real value and furnishing false evidence in support—If guilty of cheating.

The mere fact that an importer paid a particular price for a particular goods is not sufficient to prove that that price is the real value for the purposes of S. 30 (b) of the Sea Customs Act. It must be shown that goods of the like kind and quality could not be delivered at that place at a lower price. Therefore, an offence of cheating by "causing a false declaration to be made of the real value" of goods cannot be made out against an importer, when all that is alleged against him is that he gave an estimate of the real value of the goods imported and furnished false evidence in support of that estimate. There is no express provision which makes the Special Criminal Courts ordinance applicable to offences committed before the ordinance came into force. There is no provision in the Special Criminal Courts Ordinace of 1942 or anywhere else providing any special period which the accused ought to have after the submission of the charge sheet and before the commencement of the trial. The accused were remanded on 26—8—1942 until 6—9—1942. A police report dated 30—8—1942 was received by the sub-divisional magistrate on 1—9—1942. On 3—9—1942, the District Magistrate submitted the case to the special Judge for trial on 4—9—1942, though remand had been given till 6—9—1942.

Held, that though it might have been desirable that the trial should not commence before 6—9—1942, it could not be said that in the matter of fixing the date of trial any provision of law was contravened or that there was any illegality. The Bihar Notification dated 21st August, 1942, declaring that the Special Courts Ordinance of 1942 is in force in the Province of Bihar, is plainly intended to refer to the ordinance in its amended form, i.e., as amended by ordinance XLII of 1942, and not in its original condition, although the amending ordinance was not published in the Bihar Gazette until the 26th August, 1942, it having been enacted on 19—8—1942 and published in the Gazette of India. S. 1 of the Amended Ordinance specially enacts that the ordinance shall come into force at once, which means, the date of its enactment. An offence committed in Bihar on 22—8—1942 and taken cognizance of on a police report of 30—8—1942 can therefore be tried under the ordinance as amended by the Amending Ordinance XLII of 1942. adjournment—Refusal—Omission to give reasons—Legality.

Where a charge is framed and the accused is asked which of the prosecution witnesses he wishes to cross-examine, the accused is permitted by S. 256, Cr. P. Code to ask for permission to answer the question at the next hearing of the case and to request an adjournment of the hearing for that purpose. Such a request under S. 256, Cr. P. Code, can be refused by the trying magistrate for reasons to be recorded in writing. The Special Criminal Courts Ordinance does not, however, require the special judge to give any adjournment for any reason unless he thinks it necessary in the interests of justice; and though it may be preferable for the special judge to give some reason for refusing the request for adjournment by the accused to enable him to say which of the prosecution witnesses he would cross-examine, it cannot be said that a bare refusal without giving reasons is contrary to law, nor would it be just to make too much of the fact that in certain aspects the accused has not been able to make a complete defence or to fully develop the points taken or suggested. ——(as amended by Ordinance XLII of 1942), S. 8—Review—Procedure to be followed.

S. 8 of the Special Criminal Courts Ordinance which provides for a review lays down no particular procedure to be followed in dealing with the proceedings in review. The procedure which is ordinarily followed in the High Court in dealing with a death reference under S. 374, Cr. P. The words "when the parties are of full age" and the words "when the bridegroom is of full age and the bride minor" in Bengal Forms Nos. 1622 and 1623 respectively which have been adopted without the slightest legal justification in supersession of the statutory form, are misleading inasmuch as a party may have attained the age of majority according to the personal law to which he or she is subject and still be under the age of 21 years and therefore incapable of contracting a marriage under the Act except with the father's or guardian's consent. A marriage between a bride below 21 years and a bridegroom over 20 years solemnised in Bengal Form No. 1622 without the bride's guardian's or father's consent is invalid. Defendant was paying maintenance to S and after her death to plaintiff for some years. When he stopped paying plaintiff brought a suit for maintenance under the terms of the compromise. Ss. 54 and 56 of the Specific Relief Act are to be read together as supplementing each other; the former defines the circumstances under which a perpetual injunction can be granted and the latter enumerates cases where an injunction must not be granted. The plaintiff was a mortgagee of a share which was owned by the defendant, who had executed the rehan, and the paintiff was entitled under it to collect the rents from the tenants, but he was not recorded in the Collector's register until some time after the mortgage. Meanwhile the defendant (mortgagor) sued a number of tenants for rent and got a decree in spite of the defence set up by the tenants that they had paid the rents to the plaintiff who was entitled to collect the same. The plaintiff thereafter brought a suit for a declaration that the rehan deed executed by the defendant still subsisted, that so long as it was not redeemed the defendant was not entitled to collect the rents from the tenants, and that the decree obtained by the defendant against the tenants was not binding upon him. He also prayed for an injunction to restrain the defendant from realising the decree amount from the tenants and to restrain the tenants (who were also impleaded as formal parties) from making any payment to the defendant under the decree. The defendant pleaded that no injunction could be granted in view of S. 56 (a) and (b) and that no injunction could be granted against the executing Court. The Court granted an injunction and directed a note to be made of it in the register of the Court which passed the decree. The plaintiff did not at all ask in his plaint for staying any judicial proceeding, but simply asked for an injunction against the defendant to restrain him from executing his decree.

Held, that the case clearly fell under S. 54, Specific Relief Act and did not fall under S. 56, and Cls. (a) and (b) had no application at all to the case.

Where the Court has drawn up a partition decree without the proper stamp whether after a considered decision or whether only by inadvertence, there is no lack of inherent jurisdiction, though there might be an irregularity or illegality in the exercise of jurisdiction and therefore it cannot be said that there is no decree in existence at all. There is a decree but not a decree that can be acted upon until proper stamp is supplied. but the decree can be validated by the addition of the proper stamp and therefore it cannot be said that there is no decree at all in the sense that that decree is merely a piece of waste paper which cannot be validated by the addition of the stamp unless the presiding officer re-signs the decree after it is stamped. ——S. 33—'Produced'—Meaning — Power of Court to compel production of document for impounding it.

The word "produced" as used in S. 33 of the Stamp Act means produced in the ordinary course of law and not produced under compulsion. Further a document is produced by a party only when it is sought to be proved and a witness is examined in respect thereof and not earlier. It is highly improper for a Court to compel a party to produce an original document with a view to impound the document, because the Court has been informed that it is not sufficiently stamped. ——S. 33 (1)—Essentials for the applicability of—'Produce'—Meaning.

The essentials required by S. 33 (1) of the Stamp Act which confers the authority to impound are that either the document must be 'produced' or come before the judge 'in performance of his functions.' The word 'produce' has a technical meaning and means either produced in response to a summons or produced voluntarily for some judicial purpose, such, for instance as evidence. It cannot refer to a document which falls accidentally or incidentally into a judge's hands. It carries with it, when used in this connection, a mental element just as the word 'deliver.' There must be an intention to produce, just as there must be an intention to deliver. The mere physical act of production is not enough when there is no intention to produce. It is further necessary that the document should come before the judge, 'in the performance of his functions' as a judge. Hence where a witness summoned to produce a document produces it along with others not connected with the case before the Court, the latter cannot be impounded under the provisions of S. 33 (1) of the Stamp Act (Bose, J.) NARAVANDAS NATHURAM, In re. 204 I.C. 94=1942 N.L.J 564.

——Ss. 35 and 36—Execution of unstamped partition decree—Subsequent objection that decree could not be acted upon—If barred.

STAMP ACT (1899), S. 56.

S. 35 is in terms wider than S. 36, for while S. 35 refers both to admission in evidence and to acting upon and to registration and to authentication, S. 36 only refers to admission into evidence. There is obviously a distinction in admitting into evidence and acting upon. Where the executing Court executes an unstamped partition decree it acts upon the decree within the meaning of S. 35. In such a case there can be no question of admitting the decree in evidence under S. 36 and inasmuch as S. 36 does not contain the words "acted upon" a subsequent objection on the ground that the decree could not be acted upon is not barred. (Dalip Singh, Din Mohammad and Sale, JJ.) GOPI MAL v. VIDYA WANTI. I.L.R. (1942) Lah. 307=203 I.C. 34=15 R.L. 162=A.I.R. 1942 Lah. 260 (F.B.).

——Ss. 35 and 2 (15)—Unstamped partition decree—Execution—Jurisdiction of executing Court.

Where a partition decree is drawn up without proper stamp and the executing Cout without objection proceeds to execution, there is no lack of inherent jurisdiction in the executing Court, to act upon the decree, that is to execute it but there is an illegality or error affecting its jurisdiction in proceeding to act upon a decree which the statutory bar provided by S. 35 forbids it from doing. Once the proper stamp is supplied, the validity of the decree would date back to the date of the decree and therefore the execution application instead of being struck off might proceed as from that date. But this would not validate the proceedings that had taken place before the proper stamp was supplied. Those proceedings would still be without jurisdiction in the sense that the Court was barred by statute from proceeding in the way it did without a proper stamp and therefore the proceedings were without any legal justification. (Dalip Singh, Din Mohammad and Sale, JJ.) GOPI MAL v. VIDYA WANTI. I.L.R. (1942) Lah. 307=203 I.C. 34=15 R.L. 162=A.I.R. 1942 Lah. 260 (F.B.).

——S. 38 (2)—Jurisdiction of Collector.

So far as S. 38 (2) of the Stamp Act is concerned, the Collector derives his jurisdiction only from the order which has been made within the Act, and if an order is made which is ultra vires even the Collector's jurisdiction is not being properly exercised. The proviso to S. 43, Stamp Act requires that unless the Collector is satisfied that the offence was committed with an intention of evading payment of the proper duty, no prosecution should be launched. ——Arts. 1, 5 and 15—Entry with respect to balance struck in account book—Construction—Acknowledgment, or agreement or bond.

The question whether an entry with respect to a balance struck in an account book is to be classed as an acknowledgment agreement or bond for the purpose of duty chargeable under the Stamp Act has to be decided on the basis of the language used. It is the phraseology used and not the legal implications following from it that determines the duty chargeable on such cases. Stamp duty is not based on the legal obligation flowing from a document but is based on the nature of the document itself. What is taxed in other words is not the transaction but the document and therefore whatever implied promise there may be involved in an unconditional acknowledgment, it can never be a bond unless the obligation is contained in the document itself in express terms. In most cases in which balances are struck from time to time, the object is to extend the period of limitation and nothing more. The promise to pay is made at the time when the original loan is advanced and there is no necessity to make any fresh promise to pay so long as the period for limitation has not expired. But when the debt remains unpaid and the period of limitation is about to expire, the creditor generally requires the debtor to make an entry in his account-book acknowledging the balance due so that it may serve to extend the period of limitation. Such entries usually fall within the category of "acknowledgments" as given in Art. 1, Sch. I of the Stamp Act, except when they are taken out of the scope of the Article by the proviso thereto. The phraseology employed usually is baqi dene, baqi lane, or baqi rahe, but all these expressions appear to mean really the same thing, viz, that such and such balance is payable. When this phraseology is employed and there are no other words expressing any promise to pay the entries should be taken to amount to mere acknowledgment and would be chargeable as such. Of course if the acknowledgment includes any stipulation as to interest or to deliver any goods or other property the entry will be taken out of the scope of the Article, by virtue of its proviso. If the phraseology of the entry itself contains a distinct promise to pay, it will be classed as an agreement. If the entry is also attested it will be classed as a bond. ——Arts. 23 and 55—Applicability—Deed called dastbardari transfering property to children and grandchildren of executant, a widow—If a conveyance or release.

Art. 55, Stamp Act obviously predicates the existence of a claim upon another person or against any specified property, which claim the person executing the document renounces by means of deed of release. Hence it cannot apply to case of a deed by a Hindu widow which though styled a dastbardari transfers possession of her property inter-vivos to her daughter and her children. It cannot be treated as a security bond under Art. 57 for the words 'executed by surety' in that Article must be given their plain and natural meaning and there is no justification for extending the scope of the word 'surety' to the case of principals who are parties to the proceedings on whose behalf the deed is executed. ——S. 213—Aimer-Merwara—Proof of will—Necessity for probate.

S. 213 of the Succession Act does not permit a will to be proved unless probate is taken out where the will is made by a Hindu in territories which in 1870 were under Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. As in 1870 Ajmer-Merwara was in the North-West Provinces and was under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, a will cannot be proved in the province unless probate is taken out. (Davies.) MANOHAR KANWAR v. NARAIN SINGH. 1941 A. M.L.J. 105.

Per Pal, J.—S. 213 of the Succession Act is not limited in its operation only to cases where the plaintiff brings a suit as executor or legatee or even to cases where the defendant claims as executor or legatee. It extends to all cases where it becomes necessary in the suit to decide that under the will the right as an executor or legatee accrued. It equally debars a person who is required to establish the legatee's right merely as a jus tertii for the purpose of his defence. The prohibition, however, does not extend beyond the question of establishment of the right as executor or legatee. The will can be looked into for all other purposes. ——S. 213—Title to property by inheritance—If can be defeated by unprobated will.

Per Akram, J.—A claim or title of a plaintiff to any property by inheritance cannot be defeated by an unprobated will left by the person from whom the plaintiff claims to have inherited. In this country intestacy is the general rule and unless a valid disposition of the property in suit is proved, the plaintiff is entitled to succeed by inheritance. The defendant, therefore, should prove the will in order to defeat the plaintiff's claim; this he cannot do under the terms of S. 213 of Succession Act.

Per Pal J.—In order to defeat the claim of the plaintiff on the basis of inheritance, it would not suffice to establish that his father left a valid will and that the intended dispositions of that will covered this property. The defendant must proceed further and must establish that the disposition in favour of the others was a successful one. This would really be establishing their right as legatees under the will. And this is exactly what is prohibited by S. 213, Succession Act, so long as the will remains unclothed with a probate. (Akram and Pal, JJ.) JOGENDRANATH BENERJEE v. MAKHAN LAL BANERJEE. I.L.R. ——S. 214—Applicability—Claim to restitution by party succeeding in appeal—If claim for recovery of "debt"—Succession certificate—Necessity.

An application on the part of the successful party in appeal in the appellate Court for restitution from the unsuccessful party, if that is expressed in terms of rupees, is one for the recovery of a debt. ——S. 214 (1)—Applicability—Claiming "on succession"—Receivers appointed by court in litigation after death of person with authority to sue in their own name to realise outstandings due to estate of deceased—Suit by such receivers—Succession certificate—Necessity.

It is only where a person claims to be entitled to the effects of a deceased person on succession that the provisions of S. 214 (1) (a) of the Succession Act will apply; where in a litigation arising subsequent to the death of a person, receivers are appointed by court with express authority to sue in their own names to realise outstandings due to the estate of the deceased, and such receivers sue in their own names to recover debts due under promissory notes executed in favour of the deceased, it cannot be said that the suits are by persons claiming "on succession" to be entitled to the effects of the deceased within the meaning of S. 214 (1) (a). It is not therefore necessary for the receivers so suing to produce succession certificates before they can get decrees passed in their favour on proving the claims. ——S. 258—Universal legatee—If he would be

SUCCESSION ACT (1925), S. 263.

Per Madeley, J.—Where an universal legacy is left to more than one person, there will be shares in that legacy and their shares in the legacy might well be specified in the will. Where the share of one is confined to the movable property and a life interest in all the immovable property except two houses in which that person has full estate and the interest of the other legatee is the reversionary interest in all the rest which will vest in him after the death of the former, these do not amount to particular legacies or to one particular legacy with a residuary. It is an universal legacy of all the property to two persons and any one of them would be a universal legatee.

Per Agarwal, J.—Where the testator gives one house absolutely to a legatee and a life estate only in his other property and another was to get the entire property after the death of the former except the house which is given absolutely to him, the former cannot be called a universal legatee. The issue of notices to the next of kin to show cause why letters of administration should not be granted to an applicant is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of S. 235 of the Succession Act. ——S. 278—Hindu joint family property—Essential features—Letters of administration—If can be granted.

The essential features of a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara are (1) unity of ownership of joint property and (2) unity of juristic existence in dealing with third parties. The family is a sort of corporation having a continued existence. Its constitution might change by birth, adoption, marriage or death, but as regards strangers it is deemed to be a single individual a separate legal entity. While this is so as regards outsiders, as between the coparceners there is complete community of owner-ship and unity of possession. No individual member of the family, while it remains undivided, can predicate of the joint and undivided property, that he, that particular member, has a certain definite share. He has an interest in the coparcenary and on his death this interest lapses to the coparcenary : it passes by survivorship to the other coparceners. He, therefore, has no power to devise it by will, nor is there any question of succession to it. In no part of the coparcenary property has he left an "estate" of his own, in respect of which letters of administration could be granted. This is the general rule. But the position is different where property purchased with the funds of the joint family and belonging to it, stands in the name of the karta or another member of the family in his individual name, so that while the legal estate vests in him, the beneficial interest is in the family. On the death of such person no change takes place so far as the beneficial interest is concerned. It continues to be, as it has always been, in the family. The legal estate, however, does not pass by survivorship to the other coparceners and, therefore, letters of administration may be granted to the surviving coparceners as his "heirs" to the legal estate in such property and limited to it alone. ——S. 299 — Construction—Right of appeal—If limited to orders made appealable by C.P. Code.

S. 299 of the Succession Act should be read as meaning that every order made by a District Judge by virtue of the powers conferred upon him by the Act is subject to appeal and that the rules of procedure under which the appeal must be brought are those contained in the C. P. Code applicable to appeals. The section cannot be read as limiting the right of appeal to such orders as are made appealable by the C. P. Code. Every order made by a District Judge by virtue of the powers conferred upon him by the Act is subject to an appeal by the High Court. ——S 299—"Order"—Meaning of—District Judge deciding under S. 271 to proceed with application for probate—Appeal—Maintainability.

When a District Judge exercises his discretion under S 271 of the Succession Act, he cannot be said to be making an order under the Act so as to give a right of appeal under S. 299. He is merely deciding to proceed with the application for probate and no formal order is really made by him. In such a case under S. 271, therefore no right of appeal is granted by S. 299. SURETY BOND—Construction—Liability of surety—When arises.

The general rule is that every surety bond must be construed strictly on its own terms. A surety bond recited (we) "would stand surety to the extent of Rs. 1,500 and bind ourselves to pay the said sum of Rs. 1,500 in case the decree of this Court is confirmed by the appellate Court and the amount is not recovered from the defendant." It was held that the word 'recover' had a special meaning in law and it therefore followed that the meaning of the clause in the bond was that the decree-holders were first to recover the money from the judgment-debtor by legal process and that if they failed to recover their decretal amount from the judgment debtor they would be entitled to recover a sum not exceeding Rs. 1,500 from the sureties and that the decree-holders could not proceed to execute the decree against the sureties before exhausting the remedy against the judgment-debtor. TELEGRAPH ACT XIII OF 1885), S. 16—Application for compensation—Jurisdiction of District Judge—Government refusing to pay any compensation.

S. 16 of the Telegraph Act does not refer to the sufficiency of the compensation actually paid but to the sufficiency of the compensation to be paid under S. 10. If damage is actually caused and Government proposes to pay nothing, while the other party insists that substantial damage has been done, then there is clearly a dispute with regard to the sufficiency of the compensation to be paid under S. 10, and the District Judge has jurisdiction to entertain an application for compensation by the party aggrieved. The District Judge is acting as a Civil Court in dealing with applications for compensation under S. 16 (3) of the Telegraph Act, and the High Court has, therefore, power to entertain a petition for revision of an order passed by him on such an application. The High Court's powers of revision are not barred by sub-S. (5) of S. 16 of the Act. A conspiracy to be actionable must be a combination of two or more persons maliciously to injure a person in his trade, business or employment, and resulting in damage to him, though the damage, if caused by a single person, may not be actionable. The plaintiff has to prove that a legal right of his was violated by reason of the concerted action of the defendants, that the defendants acted maliciously, i.e., with an improper motive to injure the plaintiff, and that their act caused him damage. Where the defendants who were members of one faction of a community issued notices to the members of their faction not to respond to the invitations issued to them by the plaintiff who belonged to the opposite faction in connection with his daughter's marriage and asking them not to attend the marriage in the plaintiff's house; and the plaintiff filed a suit for damages against the defendants.

Held, that the tort of conspiracy was not made out and the suit must therefore fail; and no damages could be awarded on the ground of defamation either. (Nagesvara Iyer and Venkataranga Iyengar, JJ.) PISSAY v. P. HANUMANTHA RAO. 20 Mys L J. 131.

for injury or liability suffered by the claimant on account of the wrongful act of another. In the latter case the injury complained of need not amount to any actual pecuniary loss to sustain a cause of action. The pecuniary loss comes into consideration only to help the determination of the measure of damages to be awarded in such a case. In cases where the elements of fraud, oppression, malice or the like are found, the law does not confine its remedy to the payment of compensation merely proportionate to any pecuniary loss actually suffered by the injured person. It can grant vindictive or exemplary damages by way of punishment to the wrongdoer. (Akram and Pal, JJ.) SHEIKH JARU BEPARI v. A. G. PETERS. 202 I.C. 181=75 C.L.J. 54=A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 493.

——Defamation—Libel—Privilege—Suit for damages for wrongful dismissal by teacher against headmaster—Defendant filing extracts from his report to managing committee to show grounds of dismissal—Extracts defamatory of plaintiff—If absolutely privileged.

The defendant, a headmaster, was sued for damages for wrongful dismissal by a teacher. He filed extracts from a report made by him to the school managing committee as he thought it necessary for the purpose of his defence to show the grounds upon which the plaintiff was dismissed by the Committee. The extracts were found to be defamatory of the plaintiff. The plaintiff filed a suit for damages for libel.

Held, that the occasion was one of absolute privilege as the statement was made in Court in the course and for the purpose of defence. Whether or not writs, pleadings and affidavits were governed by the law of absolute privilege would depend upon the nature of the statements in writing that were filed and the purpose for which they were filed. If they were documents considered by a party as being essential for his defence, they are covered by the doctrine of privilege. A permanent diminution in the accustomed supply of water to which lands in an estate are entitled is not merely an injury to the tenant but is also likely to affect the ultimate interests of the landlord as well. Accordingly where there is a diversion of the waters of a river through a newly dug channel which causes such a diminution in the accustomed supply of water, the injury though it might not have yet affected the landlord is likely in course of time to operate to his prejudice and therefore furnishes a sufficient cause of action for the landlord to sue. Neither the rule in Merrywather v. Nixon nor any rule which would rigorously divide up the liability into as many shares as there were persons liable, should be applied to Indian conditions where Courts do not merely administer the common law but decide in accordance with equity, justice and good conscience and where it is very desirable to exercise the power to differentiate between the various persons held jointly liable at the suit of the person injured. Where there was a partnership to cut timber in a forest and one of the partners was held liable to pay the whole damages and costs in respect of that transaction though he held only an eighth share and was hardly more blameworthy than the others in acting under a defective licence, the resulting loss should be so distributed that it falls as equally as possible upon all. ———Passing off—Trade name—Infringement—Passing off action—Foundation of—Deceit or fraudulent intention—If to be proved.

The foundation of a passing off action is always deception, or possibility of deception but it is not an action in deceit. It is never the case of the plaintiff in a passing-off action that he has been himself deceived by the action of the defendant. His case is that other people, the public, have been deceived, or are likely to be deceived. But a private individual cannot sue for a wrong done to the public. The plaintiff must therefore prove that the action of the defendant has infringed some proprietary right of his own. It is not necessary to prove any fraudulent intention on the part of the defendant, though, if a fraudulent intention is proved, that usually assists the plaintiff's case. ———Passing off—Trade name—Infringement—Question for consideration and decision—Nature of issues in suit.

Two issues must always arise in a passing off action. First, has the name or description or make up, or whatever it may be, of the wrongful user of which the plaintiff complains, come to be associated in the public mind with the goods, business or works of the plaintiff; secondly, is the defendant so describing or getting up, his goods or whatever it may be, as to be likely to mislead the public into believing that they are acquiring the plaintiff's goods, when in fact they are acquiring the defendant's goods, The foundation of a passing off action is that no body is entitled to represent his goods as the goods of somebody else. The issues in each case have to be framed with reference to the facts of that case, but the plaintiff has always to succeed substantially on the two issues. (Beaumont, C.J. and Somjee, J.) K. M. TRADE MARK—Infringement—Matters for consideration.

If in an action for an alleged infringement of a registered trade mark, no evidence of confusion either actual or probable is adduced, the question whether the mark which the defendant uses infringes the plaintiff's registered trade-mark must be answered by the Court, unaided by outside evidence, after a comparison of the defendant's mark as used with the plaintiff's registered mark, not placing them side by side, but by asking itself whether, having due regard to relevant surrounding circumstances, the defendant's mark as used is similar to the plaintiff's registered mark as it would be remembered by persons possessed of an average memory with its usual imperfections. Whether the defendant had acquired the good will of any business, and whether the defendant was properly on the register in respect of a mark which differs slightly from the mark actually in use by the defendant, are matters which are irrelevant to th question for determination. tions of the estate of T and that the sister's son should perform the funeral ceremonies of T. There was a transfer by the widows in pursuance of the award and the sister and the sister's son took possession. A few months after T's death, there was a partition between the two co-widows, and one of them brought a suit in 1938 to recover possession from the sister and the sister's son of the property transferred to them under the award made by the arbitrators.

Held, (1) that the transfer was forbidden by S. 6 (a), T. P. Act, and S. 6 (b) therefore applied to the case and rendered the transfer invalid; (2) that the fact that the sister's son performed the funeral ceremonies of T as part of the consideration for the transfer did not save the transfer, because if any portion of the consideration was forbidden by law, the necessary result must be that the whole transfer should be set aside; (3) that S. 65 of the Contract Act applied and it was obligatory on the plaintiff to make compensation to the sister and the sister's son before she could recover possession of the property in dispute. ——S. 6 (a)—Right to offerings made at place of worship—Transferability.

It cannot be laid down as a broad proposition of law that the right to a share in the offerings made at a place of worship, or in the income of fairs or other functions held in connection therewith, is a mere "possibility" and therefore not alienable on the principle of law embodied in S. 6 (a) of the T. P. Act. Nor can it be said that such a transfer is, in every case, void as being opposed to public policy, as the making of offerings by persons resorting to temples and other places of worship is a matter of volition with them and no one can compel another to make offerings on a particular occasion to him and him alone. The determination of the question depends on a variety of considerations (e.g.) the nature of the institution, the occasion on, and the purpose for which the amount, is paid; the capacity in which it is appropriated by, or divided among, the persons concerned. A distinction must be drawn between cases in which emoluments are attached to a priestly office, and the cases in which the offerings are made to a deity and the persons who receive the same have not to render services of a personal nature as a consideration for the receipt of the offerings. The emoluments of the former kind are not, in the absence of a custom or usage to the contrary, ordinarily transferable. But when the right to receive the offerings made at a temple is independent of an obligation to render services involving qualifications of a personal nature such as officiating at the worship, then the right to receive the offerings, when made, is a valuable right and is property and is, therefore, transferable. Where a person is given the rights of a perpetual lessee only there is nothing inconsistent with his rights as a perpetual lessee if he is given no power of transfer. A right of transfer is not a necessary incident of the legal status of a perpetual lessee. ——S. 14—Applicability—Heritable charge created in favour of a person at a partition in Hindu joint family.

Where at a partition among the members of a joint Hindu family a charge is created in favour of the son of Christian wife of one of the members and it is made heritable by his widow and children, S.14 of the T.P. Act has no application. If the creation of the charge was a transfer of property, that transfer took place when the partition deed was executed and was to be inherited by his widow and children Even if it be regarded as a transfer for life to that person followed by a transfer to his wife and children the latter would obviously be alive at his death or within a few months thereafter and transfer is valid. ——S. 40—Right of reconveyance of easement granted—Nature of covenant—If enforceable by vendee from original grantor, without assignment.

The right of reconveyance of a right of easement granted in perpetuity is a positive covenant arising out of contract and can be completely dissociated from the land itself as a right of reconveyance in respect of land sold. There is nothing which can fasten this condition on the land itself so as to make it a covenant running with the land : it is a personal covenant independent of the land. But it does not follow that his creditors have no right to attach the decree and to allege that the assignment was not fictitious and was not binding on them. If the Court finds that the assignment was fraudulent, it would refuse to recognise the assignment of the decree at least so far as the objecting creditors are concerned. S. 53, T. P. S. 53-A cannot be invoked by a lessor under an instrument not complying with the provisions of S. 107 of the Act to establish that she possesses any right of action under the instrument, considered purely as a lease. The main provisions of S. 53-A would protect the defendant lessee in his possession of the property if he proved that the necessary conditions had been satisfied. The lessor is debarred from enforcing against the lessee any right in respect of the property, 'other than a right expressly provided by the terms of the contract'. The implication is that while the instrument qua lease is invalid qua contract it can be enforced. Hence where one party has been in possession under an instrument which is defective in form, the contract can be looked into for the purpose of determining the rights and liabilities of the parties arising out of such possession. ——Ss. 60 and 82—Partial redemption, suit for—Nature—Special right to redeem when arises—Applicability to suit for foreclosure—Price of redemption how fixed.

A suit for partial redemption under S. 60 of the T. P. Act is a combination of a suit for redemption and one for contribution under S. 82 of the Act. Under S. 60 a person entitled to a share only of the mortgaged property cannot redeem his share only on payment of his proportionate share of the mortgage money except in the only case where the mortgagee or where there are more mortgagees than one, all of them has or have acquired in whole or in part the share of a mortgagor. This is a special privilege conferred in that limited class of case to avoid multiplicity of suits. S. 60 applies equally in suits for sale or foreclosure also. Hence the privileges which apply in a suit for redemption apply equally in a suit for foreclosure. Once a case falls within the above exception then in order to determine the price of redemption it is necessary to have recourse to the principles of S. 82 of the Act. ——Ss. 60, 65 (a) and 82—Suit to enforce subsequent mortgage—Duty to redeem prior mortgage on whom lies—Loss of mortgaged property in respect of prior mortgage—Apportionment of liability.

S. 65 (e) of the T. P. Act places the obligation of redeeming a prior mortgage on the mortgagor. It is true that a subsequent mortgagee is given an opportunity to redeem but that is a privilege of which he is not bound to avail himself. If he does, then the position is merely this. He steps into the shoes of the prior mortgagee and himself forecloses. He thus recovers what he has paid to the prior mortgagee in the shape of property freed from his own mortgage and still has the privilege of placing the whole burden of the debt due on his own subsequent mortgage on the rest of the property. There is no reason why the position should be different if he does not redeem. He is neither better nor worse off by redeeming. In both cases the property foreclosed is lost as part of the security for the subsequent mortgage. S. 65 (e) recognises this and so places the duty of redemption on the mortgagor. If he fails in this duty such loss as may ensue would fall on the mortgagor or those who represent him and not on the mortgagee. The mortgagee's position cannot be worsened by anything done by the mortgagor behind his back and subsequent to his mortgage. In such cases the whole of the debt after deducting the subsequent mortgagee's share should be spread over the remaining items of property and this share should be determined by taking the whole of the mortgaged property as existing at the date of the mortgage into consideration (Stone, C.J. and Bose, J.) SUNDER LAL v. PARASHRAM. 1942 N.L.J. 289.

Where a deed of mortgage satisfying the requirements of S. 58 (d) of the T. P. Act contains also a covenant by the mortgagor to repay the mortgage money or the balance remaining due at a certain date, and also contains an agreement, express or implied, that in default of payment the mortgagee shall be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale, then the mortgage is a combination of an usufructuary mortgage and a simple mortgage, recognised by S. 58 (g) of the T. P. Act as amended in 1929 and expressly recognised by S. 98 of the Act as it stood before the amendment. It is open to the mortgagee in such a case to select his remedy. If he is dispossessed, he may sue as usufructuary mortgagee under S. 68 (c) and therefore, in the absence of a contract for sale under S. 67. He may also as a simple mortgagee sue on the covenant to repay. The two rights are independent and the mortgagee may sue for sale though he may have given up possession, and the right to sue accrues immediately after the due date is passed. A covenant by the mortgagor to repay the mortgage money, in a deed of mortgage otherwise usufructuary, gives the mortgagee the right to sue for sale of the mortgaged property on failure of the mortgagor to make payment on the agreed date. The cause of action for a suit for sale arises on the date fixed for payment and not on the date of dispossession of the mortgagee, when such dispossession is before the date fixed for payment. A mere covenant to repay the mortgage money does not take what would otherwise have been a usufructuary mortgage out of that category. Where only a mere right to file a suit to recover the mortgage-money is given, the mortgagee in a suit by him is entitled only to a simple money decree and not to a decree for sale of the mortgaged property. This is particularly so when the contesting defendants are subsequent mortgagees. The mortgagee could not be allowed in his suit to change his case and claim a decree for sale on the ground that he had been deprived of his security or possession of the property. A mortgagee under a mortgage with possession who does not take possession but leaves the property in the possession of the mortgagor under a rental agreement is not liable under S. 76 to render accounts on the footing of wilful default in respect of the rents which could have been but were not collected by him. Where the mortgage deed contains provisions which show that the parties contemplate the mortgagor himself being allowed to occupy the property as a lessee from the mortgagee and simultaneously with the execution of the mortgage deed a rental agreement is also executed by the mortgagor in favour of the mortgagee, undertaking to pay as rent the exact amount which is fixed as the interest on the mortgage money, and the mortgagee fails and neglects to enforce the due payment of the rent stipulated, the mortgagee cannot be deemed to have taken possession of the mortgaged property, within the meaning of S. 76. The liability to account on the footing of wilful default under S. 76 (b) arises only when the mortgagee takes actual possession and control over the property. The rental agreement notwithstanding, the mortgagee is deemed not to take possession of the mortgaged property so as to charge him with a liability for the uncollected rents and profits. Where the mortgagor under the mortgage takes some money in cash and stipulates that the mortgagee is to pay off a prior mortgage by paying him a certain sum out of the consideration for the mortgage, and the subsequent mortgagee deposits the amount due to the prior mortgagee in Court under S. 83, T. P. Act, and the prior mortgagee accepts that amount in full satisfaction of his mortgage-debt and delivers possession of the lands to the subsequent mortgagee, the latter must be regarded as a person entitled to institute a suit for redemption under S. 91, T. P. Act, and as such clearly a person entitled to subrogation under the first paragraph of S. 92. There is no need for a registered agreement in such a case. S. 83 does not make any mention of an agent of the mortgagor or person entitled to redeem on behalf of the mortgagor. In view of the proceedings under S. 83, it cannot be held that the subsequent mortgagee depositing under S. 83 would not be entitled to subrogation under S. 92, first paragraph. A puisne mortgagee who pays off a prior mortgage as part of the consideration for the puisne mortgage gets no right of subrogation by his payment because he is using the mortgagor's money and not his own in so paying off the prior mortgage, therefore he cannot obviously acquire any right for himself by the payment. In a case of subrogation under S. 92, T. P. Act, the mortgage that is redeemed is not extinguished but is regarded as assigned to the subrogee. The period of limitation would consequently be that applicable to the original encumbrance irrespective of the date of its discharge. In other words, subrogation only operates as an assignment of the mortgage and limits the subrogee to the same remedy as was available to the mortgagee. It is in most cases rather an additional remedy than an additional right and may exist concurrently with and as a further security to the right of a simple action for reimbursement. The latter right arises not under S. 92 of the T. P. Act but under S. 82 and S. 85 read with S. 100 of that Act. (Niyogi, J.) BALCHAND v. RATANCHAND. I.L.R. Though in cases of merger ordinarily it is the holder of a charge or an encumbrance who acquires the equity of redemption subsequently, there may be cases where a person may have acquired the equity of redemption by inheritance or otherwise first, and subsequently came to be the holder of a charge or an incumbrance (e.g.) when he inherits the property from two persons, one of them being the owner and the other a charge or incumbrance holder. ——S. 101—Construction—Owner of property becoming charge-holder—Right to enforce charge by way of suit—Keeping alive—Presumption as to—Existence of intervening incumbrances—If necessary.

There is nothing in the language of S. 101 of the T. P. Act, as it stood before its amendment in 1929, which would entitle a person who has acquired an absolute title to the property or happens to become a charge or incumbrance holder of the property of which he was the owner to plead the charge or incumbrance only by way of defence and not enforce the same against the puisne or the mesne incumbrancer as a plaintiff by suit. The existence of another encumbrance is only one of the reasons which could lead a person acquiring an absolute title to the property or a charge or an incumbrance, as the case may be, to keep the charge or incumbrance alive and not the sole reason for its continuance. It cannot therefore be said that a mortgagee or an owner of an absolute estate can be held to have kept alive the previous charge only when there are intervening incumbrances in existence. (Pandrang Row and Abdur Rahman, JJ.) RAJAH OF KALAHASTHI v. PARTHASARATHY RAYANIMGAR. 202 I.C. 697=15 R.M. 542=A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 558=(1942) 2 M.L.J. 47.

——S. 101—Intention to keep alive charge—When to be declared—Reasonable time—Conveyance of security to wife benami—If declaration of intention to keep alive.

It is not necessary for the owner of a charge or incumbrance that he must, simultaneously with his acquiring the equity of redemption by inheritance or otherwise, declare his intention to keep the charge or incumbrance alive expressly or by necessary implication in order to prevent the extinguishment of the charge or incumbrance. It would be enough for him to do so within a reasonable time. If he conveys the security to his wife benami for himself, that would be a sufficient expression of his intention to keep the charge alive. ——S. 101—Scope—Acquisition of qualified estate—Impartible estate under Madras Impartible Estates Act—Mortgagee acquiring mortgagor's rights—Effect—Transfer of mortgage benami—If prevents merger.

No question of merger can arise in the case of a person who becomes entitled only to a qualified estate in the property, e.g., the holder of an impartible estate after the Madras Impartible Estates Act of 1904. A mortgage can therefore be enforced against the purchaser of the equity of redemption subject to the mortgage. The device of transferring his rights by a mortgagee for his own benefit to another person as his benamidar is not open to objection and has the effect of saving a merger if he happens to acquire the mortgagor's rights in the property subsequently—although the benamidar would have to hold any money recovered on the mortgage for the benefit of the mortgagor. ——S. 101—Scope and applicability of.

The principle underlying S. 101, T. P. Act, is that when a prior encumbrancer purchases property subject to a subsequent mortgage, it must be assumed until the contrary is shown that he intended to keep his prior encumbrance alive so that he could use it as a shield against the subsequent encumbrancer should that be necessary and for his benefit. But this cannot apply where there is no subsequent encumbrance at the time when the mortgagee acquires the mortgagor's interests and becomes the full owner of the estate. The section limits itself to cases in which 'any mortgagee' or 'person having a charge upon immovable property,' or any transferee from 'such mortgagee or charge-holder' pays off the prior encumbrancer. It does not apply to cases in which the owner himself pays. If there is no outstanding encumbrance on the date of the sale, the purchaser becomes the full and complete owner of the property and any dealings with it are by him as the full owner of the property and not as a prior encumbrancer. ——S. 101 (as amended in 1929)—Scope—Retrospective operation.

S. 101 of the T. P. Act, as amended in 1929, cannot be applied to a suit started two years prior to the amendment. It is impossible to hold that the other sections of the Act were retrospective in character, simply because some of the sections only were started not to have any retrospective effect. ——S. 107—Scope—Lease for residential purposes—Absence of registered instrument—Allegation of permanent tenancy—Sustainability—Tenant building pucca house—Landlord if estopped from denying permanency.

Whether a tenancy comes into existence before or after the passing of the T. P. Act, a landlord is prima facie entitled to the possession of his ghair mazrua land subject, of course, to such right (if any) as the tenant may show to have been conferred upon him by the landlord. A permanent right can only be based either upon a contract express or implied, or upon some statement of fact grounding an estoppel. So far as contract is concerned, it must be held that in the absence of a registered instrument there can be under S. 107, T. P. Act, no valid contract at all, in the case of a tenancy for residential purposes. Nor can oral evidence showing that the settlement was for residential purposes and the tenant built a pucca house on the land, give rise to any estoppel preventing the landlord from denying that the tenancy was permanent. A tenancy created for residential purposes only about 45 years ago (after the T. P. Act) cannot become a permanent tenancy merely because the tenant builds a pucca house on the land let without any protest from the landlord. Mere inaction on the part of the landlord cannot plainly take the place of the registered instrument which is essential under S. 107, T. P. Act, for the creation of any tenancy "for any term exceeding one year." The tenant's rights cannot be enlarged in defiance of S. 107, T. P. Act, merely because, having taken a settlement specifically for building purposes he proceeds to build a pucca house merely possibly under the impression that he has obtained a permanent tenancy. A payment by the debtor before notice is protected under the proviso to S. 130. ——Settlement—Provision for payments of income annually—Income larger than amount reasonably required for payments—Distribution of corpus—Permissibility—Practice—Conditions requisite for Court approving distribution.

It is a well-established practice of the Court that whenever there is a trust to make annual payments out of the income of property and the income is larger than is required for the purpose, the Court will sanction the setting aside and retention of so much of the corpus of the property as will be sufficient by its income to meet the annual payments in every contingency that is reasonably possible, and will permit the distribution of the rest of the corpus among the persons who, subject to the payment of the annual sums, are absolutely entitled to it. But this, of course, can only be done when the total amount of the sums payable out of the income is known, or the maximum amount that can ever be so payable can be ascertained with some degree of certainty. Where the amount that might be required in the future for the purposes of the trust is indefinite, speculative and entirely unascertainable, the Court would be acting rightly if it refuses to approve the distribution of the corpus. But the rejection of an application for such distribution would not bar a fresh application at a later date; and if, at a later date, the length of the further duration of the trust is known and can be ascertained with some approach to certainty and some reliable estimate can be made of the maximum number of persons capable of receiving the benefits of the trust, an enquiry can then be properly directed to ascertain what part of the corpus is reasonably required for the purposes specified. ——Suit relating to trust estate—Parties—Several trustees—All, if necessary parties.

It is a settled principle of law that several trustees form, so to say, one collective trustee and all of them should ordinarily be co plaintiffs in a suit in respect of the trust estate, and such of them as are unwilling to join as co-plaintiffs or have done some act precluding them to be plaintiffs should be made defendants. So far as British India is concerned, it is the law that the trustees of a charity would not be justified in changing the name of the charity without the permission of the Court. But the trustees, by merely changing the name of a charity without such permission cannot be held to be guilty of such a serious breach of trust as to justify their removal by Court. (*Beaumont, C. In a suit for damages against an ex-trustee of a Devasthanam (which was a big institution owning extensive properties in several villages and towns and derived an income of about two lakhs of Rupees annually) on the allegation that the plaintiff Devasthanam has suffered damage as a result of gross negligence of the defendant (ex-trustee) in allowing certain rents to become barred by limitation without instituting suits for their recovery, mere proof of negligence is not sufficient to make the defendant liable. It should be definitely proved that the plaintiff has suffered damage in fact as a result of the defendant's negligence. When there is neither allegation nor proof of wilful default on the part of the defendant, he cannot be made liable in the absence of any attempt to lead evidence to show that the rents due would have been recovered if suits had been instituted for their recovery within the period of limitation prescribed by law. The onus is not on the defendant to prove that no money would be recovered if suit

Each trustee is entitled to take part in the management of the trust estate. ——Trustee—Suit against his legal representatives for accounts or for moneys misappropriated—Maintainability—Items in account—Onus of proof.

The legal representative of an agent or trustee or co-trustee is not liable to render account of the estate which was in charge of his predecessor. A suit for account is accordingly not maintainable against such a person. But a suit for recovery of money misappropriated by a trustee or co-trustee or an agent will lie against his legal representative. In such a suit the decree will be against the assets of the deceased. A suit for recovery of a specific sum of money does not assume the character of a suit for account merely because in the determination of the questions in controversy accounts may have to be examined. In such a suit the defendant will be under no obligation to explain any item that may appear in the account papers, and the onus will be entirely upon the plaintiff to substantiate each and every item in the account papers on which he may rely or which he may challenge. TRUSTS ACT (II OF 1882), S. 62—Applicability—Public religious trusts.

There is no reason why the principle in S. 62 of the Trusts Act should not be held applicable to the case of public religious trusts. It is an equitable one which would apply to the case of a trust whether public or private. Where the trustee of a public charitable trust sells trust property and for the purchase price conveys his own property to the trust, if the sale of such property is subsequently set aside on the ground of absence of valid necessity, the trustee or his alienee would be entitled to call upon the trust to surrender the benefit which the trust had by virtue of the sale.

Held, further, that a sale of trust property without valid necessity is only a voidable transaction and not void. (Venkataramana Rao, J.) KANAGAVELU NADAR v. SUBBIER. 1942 M.W.N. 193=55 L.W. 183=A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 438=(1942) 1 M.L.J. 353.

Where an Indian Christian husband provides the money for the purchase of a property in the name of his wife, the property must be regarded as being his unless the evidence justifies the conclusion that he intends to make a gift to his wife. The English doctrine of advancement cannot be legitimately applied to Indian Christians, who are both Indians of the full blood. Religious belief is not a factor in the application of the doctrine and there is no reason for making an exception in the case of Indian Christians. ——Ss. 88 and 90—Applicability—Position of co-owners.

There is ordinarily no fiduciary relation between tenants in common so as to impose an obligation on one co-owner to protect the interest of the other co-owners. Nor can S. 90 of the Trusts Act apply unless one co-owner is placed in such a relation to another by the act or consent of another, that he becomes interested for him and with him in any subject of property or business and being in that position, he, acting for himself or as representing another, gains an advantage in derogation of another's rights. The U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act nowhere provides that in order to be an 'agriculturist' a person's name must be recorded in the revenue papers. Hence a member of a joint Hindu family can rank as an 'agriculturist' within the meaning of S. 2 (2) of the Act, though the land of the family is recorded in the revenue papers only in the name or names of other member or members of the family. Expl. VII to S. 2 (2) of the U. P. Agricultural Relief Act only explains the provisions of the main section. There is nothing in it to suggest that it was intended to apply to applications governed by Chs. IV and V of the Act. It is subject to proviso (1) to the section so far as applications specially exempted under it are concerned. Hence the restrictions which are specified in Cls. (a) to (h) of S. 2 do not apply to suits under S. 33 which happen to fall under Ch. V and they have to be ignored in deciding whether the plaintiff is an 'agriculturist' for the purposes of the Act (Iqbal Ahmad, C.J. and Dar, J.) SANWAL DAS MEHROTRA v. KRISHNA DUTT DUBE. 1942 A.L.W. 298.

——Ss. 2 (5) and 5—Application for fixation of instalments regarding decree of Revenue Courts—Forum.

According to S. 2 (5) of the U.P. Agriculturists Relief Act 'Court' means a Civil Court. It follows therefore that the Court to which an application should be made by a judgment-debtor for fixation of instalments under S. 5 of the Act, must be a Civil Court, even though the decree which is sought to be amended by the grant of instalments is a decree of the Revenue Courts. The word 'Court' used in S. 5 of the Act does not include a Revenue Court. (Ghulam Hasan and Madeley, JJ.) UMRAO PRASAD v. MOHAMMAD BAKHSH. 199 I.C. 383=14 R.O. 482=1942 O.A. 39=1942 A.W.R. (C. A non-agriculturist bought in execution of a money decree against an agriculturist mortgagor the mortgaged property subject to encumbrances and sold it to another non-agriculturist and reserved with the vendee funds sufficient to pay off the encumbrance on the property. The vendee made a partial payment to the mortgagee and executed a mortgage in his favour for the balance. In a suit on this mortgage the mortgagor vendee claimed reduction of interest under S. 30, U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act. It was held that the suit was not based on the original mortgage by the 'agriculturist' or on one in renewal of it, and that the mortgage which was the basis of the suit was a new mortgage by a non-agriculturist and for the recovery of loan entirely different from that incurred by the original agriculturist mortgagee. It was further held that the fact that the original mortgagor was an agriculturist did not affect the question and the defendant was not entitled to claim reduction of interest under S. 30, U. If a plaintiff wants to have the benefit of the Expln. to S. 34 of the U. P Agriculturists' Relief Act, he must bring himself strictly within the words of the explanation. The explanation requires that such a person should not only have kept his account, but also submitted the yearly statement of account, in the form and manner prescribed by Cls. Under the U. P. Court of Wards Act, the estate of a ward is under the superintendence of the Court of Wards, and of the Court of Wards alone and it is the Court of Wards on whom plenary powers of management have been conferred. The Court of Wards may exercise all or any of these powers through the Commissioners or Collectors or it may delegate its powers to them after obtaining the sanction of the Local Government. Hence, the Collector when he does any of the things which he is required by S. 19 of the Court of Wards Act to do cannot be considered to be 'an agent duly authorised in this behalf' within the meaning of S. 19, Limitation Act. When he prepares the schedule of debts for submission to the Court of Wards and signs them he is not 'an agent duly authorised in this behalf' as contemplated by Expl. II to S. 19, Limitation Act. ——S. 2 (9)—'Loan'—If includes a renewed loan.

Where an earlier transaction of loan is renewed, the new transaction itself is a 'loan' for the purposes of S. 2 (9) of the U.P. ——Ss. 2 (9) and 8—Meaning and effect of S. 2 (9).

The meaning and effect of S. 2 (9) of the U. P. Debt Redemption Act is that in cases where advance is recoverable both from the person and the property of an agriculturist in order to take benefit of S. 8 of the Act it must be shown that the claimant was an agriculturist both at the time when the advance was made recoverable and when the advance was made. But in the case of a workman or in a case where the advance is recoverable only from the property of an agriculturist or workman, it is not necessary that the advance should have been also made to a workman or to an agriculturist. Ss. 4 and 8 of the U. P. Debt Redemption Act are for the mutual benefit of the parties. If a judgment-debtor gets the benefit of reduction of interest under S. 8 by amendment of the decree the decree-holder also gets the benefit of being entitled to execute his decree against the land, agricultural produce or person of an agriculturist. ——S. 4 (3), Proviso—Scope and applicability—Decree-holder whose execution application has been disposed of prior to the Act, if entitled to make declaration under sub-S. (3) of S. 4—Effect of such declaration.

The words of proviso to sub S. (3) to S. 4 of the Act clearly show that the execution application, referred to therein, must be pending at the time or made after the Act came into force. Hence a decree-holder whose application for execution is made and disposed of prior to the Act coming into force, is entitled to make the declaration referred to in sub-sec. (3). ——S. 4 (3), Third Proviso—Meaning of expression 'already applied for execution' — Interpretation of statutes—Plain words

The words 'has already applied for execution' in the third proviso to sub-S. (3) of S. 4 of the U. P. Debt Redemption Act have reference not only to applications for execution made after the passing of the Act but also to applications for execution made before the Act came into force. To adopt the view that the words have reference only to applications made after the Act, would be to introduce words to the effect 'after the passing of the Act' in the third proviso—words which are not there. When the words used by the legislature in a statute are clear it is not permissible for the Courts to depart from the ordinary and plain meaning of the words used on the mere supposition that the intention of the legislature was otherwise than indicated by the plain and ordinary interpretation of the words used. The words 'has already applied' in the third proviso are words of general import and are not controlled by any restrictive provision. It, therefore, follows that the third proviso applies to all those cases in which the decree holder had put his decree in execution by one of the modes referred to in sub-S. (3) whether before or after the passing of the Act. (Iqbal Ahmad, C.J., Dar and Plowden, JJ.) MOHAMMAD ABDUL RAZZAK v. PARVATI DEVI. 203 I.C. 328=1942 A.L.J. 554=1942 R.D. 735=1942 A. W.R. ——S. 8—Construction—Liable to pay the amount due under a decree, if restricted to cases of personal liability.

The words 'liable to pay the amount due under a decree' used in S. 8 of the U. P. Debt Redemption Act are sufficiently wide to include the liability which is on person and property both jointly or on person or property alone singly. There may be decrees against agriculturists who are minors which cannot be personally enforced against them. There may be decrees against agriculturists in which their property alone is liable to sale. In both these cases and in all similar cases agriculturists are liable to pay the amount of the decree though the liability is not personal. ——S. 8 and C. P. Code, S. 47—Dismissal of application under—Appealability.

Generally speaking, an application by an agriculturist debtor under S. 8 of the U. P. As the share of each person is not ascertained before partition, the Court in such cases should ascertain the share to which each of the applicants would have been entitled in the joint family if the partition had taken place on the date of the application under S. 4 of the Encumbered Estates Act. If this share together with any other landed property which he may own in his own right is liable to pay a local rate not exceeding Rs. 25 then the whole of his property will be protected. The question of protection is one which must be decided in accordance with the status of the person and property to be protected at the time of the decision. It is a personal privilege and not one conferred on land irrespective of the question who its owner is and its extent is determined by the number of owners. Hence when one of two brothers who applied under S. 4, Encumbered Estates Act, dies and the survivor succeeds to his share he is entitled to protection only to the extent of a local rate of Rs. 25 and cannot in addition claim protection in respect of the share inherited by him. ——Ss. 17 and 3 (d)—Right to protection under—Test—Condition to be satisfied by member of joint Hindu family.

If a member of a joint Hindu family wants to get the protection under S. 17, U.P. Debt Redemption Act, in the Encumbered Estates Act proceedings, all that he has to satisfy in order to come within the definition of 'Agriculturist' is that he must be the proprietor of a mahal or of a share in a mahal or portion of a mahal or a tenant. The explanation in Cl. (d) of S. 3 of the U. P. Debt Redemption Act is an explanation only for the purposes of that Act. For the purposes of the encumbered estates all that has to be seen is whether the land of an agriculturist is land which would be protected from sale under S. 17 of the Debt Redemption Act. In order to decide whether a land is protected or not it is the present local rate payable that has to be taken into consideration and not the land revenue as it will be in future. Hence where the present local rate does not exceed Rs. 25 the fact that it may exceed that amount later on as the assessment is progressive cannot affect the question. (*Shirreff, S. M. and Sathe, J. The reference in S. 19 of the U. P. ———S. 22—Land protected from sale—Grove not tenant's grove—Effect—Scattered trees, if liable to be sold.

———S. 22—Scope and applicability of—Sale of grove without transfer of land—If possible.

Per Shirreff S. M.—S. 22 of the U. P. Debt Redemption Act relates to decrees to which that Act applies. The fact that land which would be protected under S. 17 of the Debt Redemption Act is deemed to be protected under the Encumbered Estates Act does not make a decree under the latter Act a decree to which the Debt Redemption Act applies. Even if it did the proviso under S. 22 of the Debt Redemption Act makes it clear that a decree can be executed by the sale of the interest of a grove-holder even if the land is not transferred. The land on which a grove-holder's trees stand is not his land in the case of tenant's groves. If they are zamindari groves, there is nothing in the fact that the land is protected to prevent the transfer of the grove. Although a proprietor who owns a grove is not a grove-holder within the meaning of the U. P. Tenancy Act, the grove can certainly be transferred, without the land, just as a grove-holder's grove can be transferred without the land. ——S. 22—Scope of—Liability of interest of grove-holder to sale apart from land.

All the provisions of the C. P. Code, except to the extent that they are inconsistent with the provisions of the U. P. Debt Redemption Act are made by S. 24 of the latter Act applicable to all proceedings under the Act. Where amendment of the decree under S. 8 of the Act is sought for it is asking for a reduction of the decretal amount and it is clearly a matter relating to execution or discharge of the decree under S. 47, C. P. Code, and an order refusing such amendment is appealable. Neither under S. 91 or under S. 98 of the U. P. District Boards Act, singly or taken together, is there any obligation laid down upon the District Board to make repairs of the road. In the absence of any such obligation there is no cause of action to a passer-by on the road in case he meets with an accident on account of the neglect of repair by the District Board authorities. —— Ss. 2 (a), 14 (4) and 15—Claims which lie within cognizance of Revenue Court—If can be inquired into by special Judge.

The object of U. P. Encumbered Estates Act appears to be to liquidate the debts, both private and public whether decreed or undecreed, of the landlord. There is no doubt that there is no specific provision to the effect that the claims which ordinarily lie within the cognizance of the Revenue Court can be investigated and enquired into by the special Judge under the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act. S. 14 (4) of the Act, however lays down clearly that the special Judge is to have and exercise all the powers of the Court in which a suit for recovery of the money due would lie, in other words, he has to exercise the powers of a Revenue Court in a suit instituted for the recovery of the money due either on account of profits or rent or on any other account. Where all the debts of both the applicants are not joint and the only common link between them is one debt which they owe jointly, the existence of that single common debt is not a sufficient justification for filing a joint application. Where two debtors have joined in a common application against the provisions of law, it is unnecessary to dismiss the whole application on that ground in view of amendments made to Encumbered Estates Act permitting applications to be corrected for formal defects. The name of one may be deleted. (Shirreff, J.M. and Sathe, A.M.) RAM SARAN DASS v. LUTF ALI KHAN. 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 30=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 30=1942 A.L.J. (Supp.) 25.

A joint application can be filed under S. 4 of the U.P. Encumbered Estates Act in two cases with certainty and also possibly in a third case. The first two cases are (1) when the applicants are members of a joint Hindu family and (2) when the applicants are heirs of a deceased debtor. The third possible case is when all the debts of the applicants are joint. Where the debts were contracted jointly by the fathers of the applicants the case would fall under class (2) and a joint application is maintainable. (*Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe, J. Though an application under S. 4 has been sent to the Special Judge, an objection as to the maintainability of the application can be raised before the Collector and at the same time a request may be made to the Special Judge to stay proceedings before him. Where the objection is one which is vital and goes to the very root of the case the fact that the application is made at a very late stage would not be a ground for the Special Judge to refuse to stay the proceedings when the objections had been preferred to the Collector. Where after the passing of an order S. 5 of the Regulation of Sales Act and before the sale deed was actually executed and registered an application was made by the debtors under the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act it was held that an order passed under S. 5 had necessarily to be completed by a sale deed and till the sale-deed was executed and registered the property remained in the landlord and if before that sale S. 7, U. S. 7 (b) of the Act does not bar the institution of an arrear of rent suit in respect of an agricultural holding. The two cases of property contemplated by Cls. (b) and (c) of S. 8 (1) are exclusive of each other and exhaust all the property of the debtor applicant. The debtor applicant's zamindari situated outside United Provinces falls in the second category of property mentioned in S. 8 (1) (c) and must be dealt with by the Collector under S. 24. Under S. 24 (3) he will have the power of realising its value in the capacity of a decree-holder and he must do so before proceeding to deal with the debtor applicant's property situated in the United Provinces. Where a decree-holder's claim is discharged under S. 13 on his failure to file his claim within time, he could proceed against his non-applicant debtor only for the amount which the Special Judge may have determined to be due by him. The mismanagement contemplated in S. 9-C of the U. P. When a receiver is duly appointed under S. 9-D of the Encumbered Estates Act, the money in his hands has to be treated by the Collector as a payment by the applicant in accordance with the provisions of S. 23. ——S. 9-D—Receiver— Appointment— Grounds—Small difference between decretal amount and transfer value.

Where the difference between the decretal amount and transfer value of the debtor's property is only Rs. 9,000 in a case where the property is worth Rs. 10,000, it is not enough to justify the appointment of the receiver. ——S. 9-D—Receiver— Appointment— Grounds—Sufficiency—Failure of debtor to pay anything towards liquidation of debt—Value of property less than decretal amount.

The fact that the debtor has not paid anything towards liquidation of the debt is no ground for appointment of a receiver for the debtors is not required under the law to pay anything to the creditors before the liquidation award is declared. The value of the property being less than the decretal amount would also be not a ground unless the difference is very great. (*Shirreff, S. ——S. 9-D—Receiver—Appointment—Proper stage—Decree by special Judge not passed—Appointment, if premature.

Under S. 9 D of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act the Collector may appoint a receiver of any property possession of which has been or might be delivered under the provisions of S. 35 of the Act. The latter section does not come into play until after the decrees awarded by the special Judge have been sent to the Collector under the provisions of S. 19. Before the decrees have been passed, it is too early to say whether any property might be delivered under S. 35 and hence the appointment of a receiver at that stage is premature. ——S. 9 D—Receiver—Grounds for appointment—Great portion of debtor's property being protected under Debt Redemption Act—Proper person—Debtor when disqualified.

The fact that a great part of the debtor's property will be protected under the Debt Redemption Act is a valid reason for the appointment of a receiver. In such cases the receiver should be the debtor himself unless there are reasons to the contrary—(e.g.) that he has been fined in guardian proceedings for failing to deposit certain ornaments of the minors and that it still remains unpaid. ——S. 9-D—Receiver—Grounds of appointment—Existence of liabilities for periodical payment.

The existence of liability to make periodical payments out of the mortgaged property is not a ground for the appointment of a receiver when those liabilities would lie on the creditors who created them and not on the debtors. ——S. 9-D—Receiver—Valuation for purposes of enquiry in regard to appointment of—Use of tahsil valuation statements not on the file—Propriety.

Where for the purpose of an enquiry into the necessity for the appointment of a receiver, the Court utilises figures taken from the tahsil valuation statements which are not on file, and appoints a receiver it is liable to be set aside and the application sent back to the lower Court for being heard after giving an opportunity to both sides to see the tahsil valuation statements and make their own objections thereto. It is most undesirable to appoint one of the creditors as receiver, for that would be perpetuating the old state of affairs and thus practically defeating the provisions of S. 35 of the U. P. It is not right to state that the special Judge becomes 'functus officio' after passing the decrees. No doubt under the Encumbered Estates Act the execution of decrees under Ch. Under sub-S. (1) of S. 14 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act, the special Judge is bound to give notice to all claimants of the date fixed for enquiring into the claims. In the absence of such notice, it is not incumbent on the creditors, to make private enquiries as to such date. A creditor is entitled to presume that a notice under S. 14 (1) would be sent to him. When in the absence of such a notice a decree is passed ex parte in the absence of a creditor, it is a fit case for rehearing by the application of S. 151, C. P. Code. The proposition that a Court should not make use of the provisions of S. 151, C. P. Code, where another remedy is available is not one of invariable applicability. ——S. 14 (4)—Powers of a Special Judge under—Debtor's claim for damages against mortgagee for loss caused by breach of contract of mortgage—Entertainability.

In determining the amount due to a creditor from the landlord debtor the Special Judge is invested with all the powers of the Court in which a suit for the recovery of the money due would lie. A claim for damages put forward by a debtor against the mortgagee for loss caused by breach of a term in the contract of mortgage must be determined before it is possible to ascertain how much money is ultimately due to the creditor. Hence there is no justification for a Special Judge refusing to entertain such a claim before him. (Ghulam Hasan and Agarwal, JJ.) ALIYA BEGAM v. MOHINI BIBI.

The provisions of sub-Ss. (4), (5) and (6) of S. 14, Encumbered Estates Act operate solely to limit the amount of interest which may be allowed under sub-S. ——S. 14 (4) (a), (5) and (6)—Construction and scope of—Later mortgage in lieu of principal and interest due on an earlier mortgage—Mode of calculation of interest.

The provisions of sub-Ss. (5) and (6) of S. 14 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act operate solely to limit the amount of interest which may be allowed under sub S. (4) of the section the construction to be placed on the word 'principal' for other purposes in examining and determining claims under this section being unaffected thereby. The view that in construing the words 'the amount of interest held to be due on the date of the application' in Cl. (a) of sub-S. (4) regard should be had to all interest which had accrued on the original transaction, the principal being thus limited to the amount stated in the original mortgage (in a case where the later mortgage is in lieu of principal and interest due on an earlier one) is not warranted by the language used either in this sub section or in sub-Ss. ——S. 14 (6)—Calculation of principal—Things to be excluded—Decree of Court if affected.

The things which have to be excluded for ascertaining the principal according to S. 14 (6) of the Encumbered Estates Act are 'statement or settlement of accounts or' 'any contract made in the course of the transactions.' Under S. 20-A of the Encumbered Estates Act as inserted by the Amendment Act it is mandatory on a Court to allow an amendment if the latter was dismissed for some defect in accordance with sub-S. ——Ss. 22 and 24—Deposit in cash—Time limit of two months—If a period of limitation—Deposit even after order for sale under S 24, if can be made.

It is open to the debtor applicants to pay up in cash whatever they can for the liquidation of their debts at any time up to the declaration of the final award. The period of 2 months prescribed by S. 22 of the Encumbered Estates Act is not a legal limitation after the expiry of which the right of the debtor applicants to pay up in cash is lost for ever. It is a minimum limit prescribed in favour of the debtor and not a maximum limit which cannot be exceeded. An application for depositing cash is entertainable even after an order for sale under S. 24 of the Act has been made and had become final. There is no provision either in the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act or the rules made thereunder specifically permitting the Court to extend the period of two months allowed by S. 22 of the Act. It is incumbent on the S. D. This is not a matter which can be left to the clerk or the Kurk amin. Further if the family of the debtor is very big, more than one house can be exempted. Any estimate of the value of a house to be sold under S. 24 of the U. P. Enc. Estates Act, must necessarily be vague. ——S. 24, Provisos second and third—Scope of exemption of residential house.

Under the second proviso to S. 24 of the Encumbered Estates Act the residential house is to be left to the debtor if it is free from any mortgage. This, of course, must be read with the third proviso, under which, if the debt can be liquidated under S. 27, the Collector shall not sell any property to the sale of which the debtor has objected. Where the debts amounted to about Rs. 8,000 and the instalment value of the debtor's proprietary rights in the land had been calculated at only Rs. 1,187 and there was no possibility of the debt being liquidated under S. 27 of the Act, it was held that a residential house subject to a simple mortgage was liable to sale under the Encumbered Estates Act. ——S. 24, proviso 2—One of the debtors living in separate house away from the rest—Exemption from sale.

——S. 24, Proviso 11—Scope of exemption under—If in addition to those provided by S. 60, C. P. Code.

S. 24, United Provinces Encumbered Estates Act, nowhere lays down that no property mentioned in the list sent by the Special Judge shall be exempt from sale except to the extent mentioned in the second proviso to S. 24 (1). The exemption given by this proviso is in addition to any exemptions to which the debtor applicant may be entitled under S. 60, C. P. Code, like any other Judgment-debtor. Hence where the mortgaged property mainly consists of sir only the debtor applicant would be an agriculturist within the meaning of S. 60, C. P. Code and he would be entitled to exemption from sale of his bullocks though the list sent by Special Judge includes them as being liable to sale and attachment. A residential house which had been mortgaged by the debtor cannot be claimed to be exempt from sale because the mortgagee creditor has obtained a simple money decree and the mortgage has been extinguished under S. 18 of the United Provinces Encumbered Estates Act and the house is thereby free from the mortgage. The provisions of S. 25 of the U. P. If a creditor wishes to take a mortgage, he has to comply with the provisions of S. 25 Encumbered Estates Act and must pay of all the claims of the other debtors besides also setting off his own claim as a consideration for the mortgage. It cannot be contended that where the other creditors are not likely to get anything, whatever mode of liquidation is adopted, then the payment of their debts should not be insisted upon. R. 43 (iii) only explains the procedure to be followed under Cl. The rule cannot be taken as laying down that protected property will in no case be transferred to the creditors. That rule comes into operation only after a decision as to whether the mortgage under S. 25 should be granted or not has been taken. Proceedings under the Encumbered Estates Act are judicial proceedings and orders should be passed on them only after giving due notice to all the parties concerned. Hence where in a case symbolical possession was ordered but the Kurk amin gave actual possession and objection is filed against it, orders on such objection could not be passed without giving notice to the other party. ——S. 35—Nature of proceedings under—Question of title, how affected by delivery of possession.

Proceedings under S. 35 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act are summary proceedings and do not settle question of title finally. ——S. 35—Orders under— Pendency of appeals against orders of special Judge—Proper procedure.

Where appeals are filed against the orders of the special Judge to the District Judge and High Court if the debtor applies under S. 35, it is futile to pass orders dependent on the varying fortunes of the appeals. The S. D. O. should delay the transfer of possession on the ground of the pendency of the appeals even in the very first instance. (Sathe, J.M.) RAM DAYAL v. SADHOO RAM. 1942 O.A. Proceedings under S.35, United Provinces Encumbered Estates Act, can start only after the decrees are sent by the Special Judge to the Collector under S.19 of the Act. Where on application under S. 35, proprietary rights are delivered to the debtor, a second application under S. 35 for the delivery of possession of a shop alleged to have been built by the mortgagee is quite competent. Where a permanent lessee of mortgaged property defaults to pay off the mortgage as agreed between him and his lessor and applies under the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act and shows the mortgagee as a creditor but the Special Judge feels unable to pass a decree in his favour, the debtor applicant cannot claim to be put in possession under S. 35, U. ——S. 35—Right to retain cultivatory possession—Facts to be proved—Nature of proceedings made—Rejection of claim—Remedy.

Before a person can claim to retain cultivatory possession of mortgaged property in an application for delivery of possession of such property under S. 35 of U. P. a bona fide lease. Proceedings uuder S. 35 are miscellaneous proceedings and do not settle the matters in dispute finally. ——S. 35—Right to transfer of possession of property given in lieu of interest—Onus—Rights of such transferee.

If the debtor applicant claims restitution of a plot on the ground that it was transferred only in lieu of interest, the onus is on him to show that it was so transferred where the plot is not specifically mentioned either in the list of property filed by the defendant applicant before the special Judge or in the list of property sent by the special Judge along with the decrees to the Collector under S. 19 of the Encumbered Estates Act, the debtor applicant cannot be given possession of it when the opposite party claims it as his statutory tenancy. A transaction involving a transfer of land in lieu of interest is not identical with a legal mortgage of the same where proprietary rights are transferred. When land is given to a person in lieu of interest without the fixation of any rent on it the transferee becomes its licensee and is liable to ejectment when the debt is repaid. But if a definite rent is fixed on it, then he becomes its tenant and the only effect of the circumstance that the land was given in lieu of interest will be that the rent will be liable to be set-off against the interest due on the debt. A debtor applicant's share in a temple offerings can be said to be his property and as such can form the subject of transfer of possession under S. 35, U. P. Encumbered Estates Act. ——S. 35—Time to creditor to file objections and to prove them—Necessity—Orders in a hurry—Propriety.

A creditor should be given some time at least to file his objections to the delivery to the debtor and to prove them. notice should be given before possession is transferred to the debtor under S. 35 of the U.P. Encumbered Estates Act as there may be many grounds on which a debtor's right to possesion under the section can be challenged. But where the creditor has had full knowledge of the proceedings and had even applied for stay long before the actual date of the order, the mere non-service of a notice cannot be urged as a ground for setting aside an order transferring possession. ——S. 35—Transfer of possession of property in hands of mortgagee's son—If and when can be had—Heir of mortgagee not added on latter's death pendente lite—Effect—Proper procedure to be adopted.

Where the property is in the possession of the heirs of a mortgagee creditor on the latter's death, it is only if the debtor is entitled to it in one of two ways, viz.: (1) by the passing of a money decree against him under S. 18 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act and (2) by the wiping out of the creditor's claim completely under S. 13 of the Act that it could be transferred to the debtor. Hence where during the pendency of the application under the Act the mortgagee creditor dies and his heirs are not brought on record, the proceedings abate as against him. After decrees are passed against the rest and forwarded to the Collector, the debtor cannot ask for transfer of possession of the property of the deceased creditor as there is neither a decree under S. 18 nor is the creditor's claim completely wiped out under S. 13 of the Act. In such a matter the proper thing would be to hold that proceedings do not abate on failure to add legal representatives and that it is the duty of Court to compel parties to bring the heirs on record so that the matter might be finally decided for the benefit of both parties. ——S. 35—Transfer of possession under—No notice to creditors—Objections—Proper disposal.

Where without giving notice to the creditors there is a transfer of possession under S. 35 of the U. P. Enc. The possession of a plot which is neither mortgaged nor included in the mortgage deed, cannot be transferred under S. 35, U.P. Encumbered Estates Act to the debtor. ——Ss. 45 (5) and 46—District Judge deciding appeal prior to Amending Act of 1939—Revision, competency—If affected by being filed after new Act—Conversion into second appeal.

Where a District Judge decides an appeal under the Encumbered Estates Act prior to Amending Act of 1939 the decision is final and Cl. (5) of S. 45 bars interference in revision with such an order. This position is unaffected by the fact that the revi ion is filed after the amended Act came into force. Nor could such a revision be converted into a second appeal as that would be giving retrospective effect to the provisions of the new Act introducing the right of second appeal. ——S. 46—Application under—Maintainability—Case not pending but decided.

An application under S. 46, Encumbered Estates Act, can be made only when a case is pending and not after it has been decided and hence S. 46 would be inapplicable to a case where the special Judge has already decided on a claim. ——S. 46—Competency of revision in cases appealable to Board under S. 45—Interference, if obligatory.

There is nothing in the provisions of S. 46 of the U.P. Encumbered Estates Act to bar the entertainment of a revision application even in cases which are appealable to the Board of Revenue under S. 45. Though such an application is not illegal the question whether in such a case the Board should interfere is entirely a matter of discretion of the Court. ——S. 46—Revision, if excluded by right of appeal—Discretion of Court.

The wording of S. 46, Encumbered Estates Act, is very wide and does not restrict revisions only to such cases in which no appeal lies. Where an application to postpone a pending mutation case till the disposal of proceedings under Encumbered Estates Act is rejected, it can only be taken up in appeal or revision under the provisions of the U. The intention of S. 49, U.P.E.Est. If he does not choose to do so, it cannot be done by the Revenue Court to which the Special Judge's money decree is merely sent for execution. The applicant has a remedy against such a refusal of the Special Judge to decide in the form of an appeal to the High Court under S. 45 (1) of the Act. The point whether the original loan was taken by the debtor himself or came to him as a prior encumbrance with the property which came to him as a gift can be considered only before a decree is passed by the special Judge. But once a decree is passed no such objection can be taken. The Sub-Divisional Officer has to assume in the liquidation proceedings under Ch. V of the Encumbered Estates Act that the decree passed by the special Judge is a valid one and the only point which he has to see in determining whether the land is protected or not is whether the land would have been protected under S. 17 of the Debt Redemption Act in execution of the decree to which the Act applied. The Sub-Divisional Officer cannot refuse protection to the property of a debtor on the ground that the decree passed in favour of the creditor did not fall within the category of a loan as defined in S 2(9) of the Debt Redemption Act. UNITED PROVINCES ENCUMBERED ESTATES ACT RULES, R. 6—Bringing of heir on record after transfer of decree to Sub-Divisional Officer for liquidation—Power and duty of Sub-Divisional Officer.

Under the addition to R. 6 of the Encumbered Estates Act Rules made in January, 1942, the power to bring heirs of the parties on record now lies with the Sub-Divisional Officer after a decree has been transferred to him under S. 19 for liquidation. The duty also to bring them on record at that stage lies on the Court; for none of the parties can be said to be an applicant at that stage and the duty of completing the liquidation lies on the Court itself. Hence an application by an heir to come on record at that stage cannot be dismissed either on the ground of delay or want of power in the Sub-Divisional Officer. (*Shirreff, S. M. and Sathe, J. ——S. 33—Application under—Maintainability—Claim to have share of property in name of another, transferred.

A request to transfer a share in the property standing in the name of another to his own name is a request which cannot possibly be granted in a correction application under S. 33 of the U. P. ——S. 33—Correction of papers—If can be made on the basis of a preliminary decree for partition.

An application under S 33 of the U.P. ——Ss. 33 and 40 (2)—Correction of papers—Question of possession doubtful—Proper procedure to be adopted.

Where in a correction of papers case the A. R. O. finds that the question of possession is doubtful the case has to be decided by a summary enquiry into title under S. 40 (2) of the U P. Per *Shirreff, J. It is not a question of making use of S. 33 of the Act to obtain an adjudication on long standing dispute as to title.

——Ss. 34 and 40—Mutation—Application by one of two vendees—Maintainability.

Where neither the sale deed nor the agreement between the two co-vendees under it mention the specific shares of the two co-vendees, an application for mutation by one in respect of a portion of the property sold cannot lie. Where one of the two co-vendees applies under the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act, there is no ground for refusing mutation on an application by the other on behalf of both. (*Shirreff. S. ——S. 34—Mutation on the strength of allowances made out of affection—If can be made—Proper procedure.

Where certain shares are allowed out of affections to persons who would have no title to succeed, mutation on the strength of such allowance cannot be allowed in mutation proceedings started on the death of a co-sharer. The proper procedure is to give those persons the shares by a separate transaction and then initiate separate mutation proceedings. ——S. 34 (2) and (3)—Mutation—Absence of physical or constructive possession—If affects right to.

Where the transferee has not obtained possession either physical or constructive, he is not entitled to mutation of names because S. 34 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act shows that possession is a necessary condition before a mutation application can be filed and S. 40 lays down that all disputes regarding entries should be decided on the basis of possession. (Sathe, A.M.) GIRWAR v. BIRJI. 1941 O.A. (Supp.) 940=1941 A. W.R. (Rev.) 1171.

——S. 34 (3)—Application under—Maintainability—Applicant not in possession.

——S. 34 (5)—Mutation application—Necessity irrespective of result.

The ultimate result of an application is not material so far as Cl. (5) of S. 34 of the U.P. Land Revenue Act is concerned. In fact a transferee of proprietary rights need not await the result of his mutation application before instituting other proceedings in the Revenue Courts in respect of the property. The futility of such an application is no answer to the mandatory provision of S. 34 (5). (Sathe, J.M.) PARMESHWAR v. RAM KISHUN MISRA. 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 89=1942 A W. R. (Rev.) 83=1942 O.W.N. ——S. 34, Expl.—Mutation—Right to—Compromise in partition suit with specification of shares—If a transfer entitling mutation.

A compromise in a suit for partition of joint family property in which the shares of the parties are specified amounts to a 'transfer' under the Explantion to S. 34 of the U P. Land Revenue Act and hence mutation can take place on the basis of such a compromise. (Shirreff, S. M.) TULSI RAM v RAMJI DAS. 1942 O W.N. (B R.) 371=1942 R D. 460=1942 A.W.R. Where a proprietor does not claim ex-proprietary rights either at the time of the transfer or of mutation ten years later or in the still later proceedings started on the patwari's report, no ex-proprietary holding can be carved out for the person entitled to ex-proprietary rights who does not wish to claim them. ——Ss. 36 and 42—Order under S. 36—Extent to which it operates as res judicata.

Orders passed in miscellaneous proceedings under the Land Revenue Act do not debar any person from establishing his right to the property claimed by him in a Civil or Revenue Court unless the proceedings fell under S. 42 of the Act. Where the question in proceedings under S. 36 of the Act was whether a person was a sir-holder or not, no question of the status of his tenants directly arises, though their status as tenants depended on the decision in the case. Such a case cannot be said to fall under S. 42 and hence the order passed therein does not operate as res judicata. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) SUKH RAM CHAMAR v. MST. ——S. 36—*Proceedings under—Compromise between ex-proprietor and former co-sir-holder—Competency—Mortgagee, if a necessary party.*

Where on the mortgage by one of the three co-sharing sir-holders proceedings are started under S. 36 of the U. P. ——S. 36—Proceedings under—Decision that no ex-proprietary rights have arisen in a particular plot—Subsequent suit for ejectment from that plot—Plea of ex-proprietary tenancy in defence—Bar of res judicata.

Where in proceedings under S. 36 of the U. P. No Court of concurrent or inferior jurisdiction is competent to question a judicial order on merits except when a question of fraud or want of jurisdiction is involved. S. 216 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act does not include in the various actions which an appellate Court can take, that of reference to the Board. Hence when a Collector feels in an appeal by a patwari against his transfer, that the punishment is inadequate and that it should be enhanced, the proper procedure for him to adopt would be to dismiss the appeal and then refer the case to the Board under S. 218 for enhancement as he is himself not competent to enhance. ——S. 218—Reference under—When could be made—Commissioner finding his own order irregular on reconsideration—Proper remedy.

Under S. 218 of the United Provinces Land Revenue Act a Commissioner can only refer to the Board cases disposed of by Subordinate Revenue Courts in which an irregularity has been committed. It does not empower him to refer orders passed by himself if he subsequently thinks that those orders were irregular. ——S. 233-K—Applicability.

——S. 233-K and C. P. Code (1908), S. 11—Bar of claim under—Distinction.

A claim may be barred under S. 233-K, U.P. Land Revenue Act, even when it is not barred under S. 11 of C. P. Code and the two bars though sometimes they may overlap are independent of each other and the question of res judicata arising in a Revenue Court partition is really a matter to be determined under principles of S. 11, C.P. Code. The bar of S. 233-K comes into play even when it is possible to grant the plaintiff a relief without disturbing the pattis or mahals formed at partition or the liability of revenue which was assessed on it and it is sufficient to attract the statute if a fraction of share or revenue is affected provided the title to that share or liability to pay revenue was adversely determined at the partition expressly or impliedly against the claimant who wants to avoid the effect of partition. S. 185 of the U. P. Municipalities Act contemplates not only the erection of a building but the beginning continuance or completion of the erection of a building. Reading sub S (3) with sub S. (5) of S. 180, it would appear that sub-S (3) would cover the case only of a person who is not already in the wrong. In order to get the advantage of sub-S. (3) an applicant must, first of all, make a valid application to the Board. Secondly he must wait for the expiry of a period of one month and after that he must make a written communication drawing the attention of the Board to the omission or neglect to pass an order and thereafter he must wait for a further period of 15 days. Under S 180 (5) it is incumbent on a person who has given notice under S. 178 not to commence any work of which notice has been given until sanction has been given or is to be deemed to have been given by the Board. It follows that it cannot be questioned in a Court of law. The Executive Officer is the Board within the meaning of S. 211. His order is subject to appeal to the whole Board under S. 318 but if no appeal is made or if the appeal being made is rejected, then the order of the Executive Officer would stand, and that would be an order of the Board and it cannot be questioned in a Court of law. As the provisions of para. 53 of the U. P. ——Para. 53—Power of appellate Court to add necessary parties.

In an appeal under the U. P. Land Revenue Act it is open to the Court to add the necessary parties because para. 53 of the U. P. Revenue Manual has made O. 41, R. 20, C. P. Code, applicable to appeals under U.P. Land Revenue Act. (Shirreff, S. M.) GAINDAN LAL v. RAM SARUP. 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 397=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 371=1942 O W.N. (B R.) 512.

Where on the sale of agricultural land in execution of a Civil Court decree the judgment-debtor fails to apply under either Paras 999 or 1000 of the U. P. Revenue Manual and the sale would have become absolute under Para. 1001 but for a stay order the fact that such stay lasted for nearly four years is no ground for permitting the judgment-debtor to reopen the questions of regularity of sale or the adequacy of the price. Nor is the fact that the debtor is not in a position to get the benefit of the U. P. Debt Redemption Act a ground for holding the sale anew. ——Ch. XL, Paras. 997 and 1011—Applicability—Decrees passed by Revenue Court.

Neither para. 997 nor 1011 in Ch. XL of the Revenue Manual has anything to do with a case in which the decree sought to be executed, had been passed by the Revenue Court. Ch. XL in which these paras. occur as the heading shows deals only with the sale of ancestral land in execution of Civil Court decrees. (Verma and Yorke, JJ.) HAKIM ALI v. SHANKER LAL. I.L.R. ——Para. 1011 (8)—Scope of right of appeal under.

Paragraph 1011 (8) of the U. P. Revenue Department Manual gives a right of appeal to the judgment-debtor only against an order confirming the sale and not against any intermediate orders which might be passed by the Collector on the objections of parties. Hence where an appeal is preferred against the dismissal of objections but no appeal is preferred against the confirmation of sale the judgment-debtor cannot get any relief in appeal.

UNITED PROVINCES TEMPORARY POST-PONEMENT OF EXECUTION OF DECREES ACT (X OF 1937), S. 5—Scope and effect of a temporary law—Benefit of S. 5—If available after the Act is repealed.

It is not the law that when a temporary Act comes to an end and ceases to be in force all rights which arose under some of the provisions of the Tem porary Act automatically disappear with the cessation of the Act. It is a question of the interpretation of the particular provision of the statute whether it was to remain in force or whether it was to remain operative even after the Act had ceased to be in force. The language of S. 5 of the U. P. Temporary Postponement of Execution of Decrees Act points to the conclusion that the benefit given by S. 5 was to take effect after the Act had ceased to be in force and the statute contem plated and provided that though it would cease to be in force rights arising thereunder would continue to be in operation. Hence notwithstanding the expiration of the Temporary Postponement of Execution of Decrees Act, 1937 on 31st December, 1940, and the repeal of the said Act by the U.P. Debt Redemption Act, 1940 on January 1st, 1941, creditors are entitled to exclude the time from January 1st, 1938 to December 31st, 1940, in computing the period of limitation applicable to their claims. UNITED PROVINCES TENANCY ACT (XVII OF 1939), Ss. 3 (1) and 230—Effect of S. 3 (1)—Suit by heirs of co-sharer for arrears of profits—Maintain ability.

S. 3 (1) of the U. P. P. Tenancy Act. Hence the heirs of a co-sharer can sue for arrears of profits due to the deceased co-sharer. (Shirreff, S. M, and Sathe, J. M.) ——Ss. 3 (6), 30 and 175—Effect of S. 3 (6) and S. 30 in regard to land occupied by guava plantation—Status and rights of tenants holding such land under the U. P. Tenancy Act.

According to S. 3 (6) of the U. P. Tenancy Act land occupied by guava plantations is grove land and by reason of S. 30 of the same Act hereditary rights cannot accrue in respect of such lands. Hence a person holding such land and recorded as a statutory tenant under the Agra Tenancy Act cannot be recorded as a hereditary tenant under the U. P. Tenancy Act but only as a non-occupancy tenant. Though recorded as such he is not liable to ejectment under S. 175 of the latter Act as a tenant from year to year, because the right which accrued under the old Act cannot be taken away by the new Act according to S. 6(c) of the U. As the heir of a statutory tenant is one of the classes of tenants enumerated in S. 10 of the Agra Tenancy Act, he is entitled under S. 20 of the Act to retain possession of the holding for 5 years. If he continues to hold for another 3 years and no proceedings are taken to eject him he is to be considered to have been admitted to the holding. But after the expiry of the 5 years, he has no title as the heir of the statutory tenant Where a decree for ejectment was obtained against such a person under S. 86 of the Agra Tenancy Act and it was stayed under the U.P. Stay Act and on the new Act coming into force and execution being revived the heir of the statutory tenant claimed that he had become under S. 29 of the U.P. Tenancy Act a hereditary tenant it was held that it was as a person holding over without title that his ejectment was decreed, and he could not therefore be held to have been a tenant when after the expiry of the 5 years and that not being a tenant he could not become a hereditary tenant under S. 29 (a) of the U.P. ——S. 33, proviso—Agra Tenancy Act (1926), S. 23 proviso—Co-tenancy—Recognition—Facts to be proved—Acceptance as tenant and suing for rent and enhancement—If amounts to recognition.

Under the proviso to S 23, Agra Tenancy Act, 1926 and the corresponding proviso to S. 33 of the U. P. Tenancy Act a person cannot be deemed to be a co-tenant unless he was a co tenant from the commencement of the tenancy, or has become such by succession or has been specifically recognized as such in writing by the landholder. From the mere fact that a person has been accepted as a co-tenant by the landholder in suit for declaration of right and division of holding, and has been sued for arrears of rent and for enhancement along with the other co-tenants, it cannot be said that there is a specific recognition in writing within the meaning of the above provisions of law. ——S. 33 (2), proviso—Creation of co-tenancy—Compromise of proceedings under S. 145, Cr. P. Code—Conditions to be complied with.

A compromise to create the rights of an occupancy co-tenant would have to be agreed to in writing by the landlords and also to be registered. Hence a compromise of proceedings under S. 145, Cr. P. ——S. 35—Joint holding—Death of one of the joint tenants—Question of co-sharing if can arise when collaterals of equal degree claim succession.

There can be no question of co-sharing when collaterals of equal degree claim succession on the death of one of the joint tenants of a joint holding. S. 41 of the U. P. ——S. 41—Exemption under—Blindness—Crucial point of time.

The exemption from restriction on sub-letting by disabled persons provided by S. 41 of the U. P. Tenancy Act would obviously apply only if the tenant is disabled at the time of sub letting. All transfers other than (1) certain sub-leases and (2) transfers in favour of co-tenants under S. 33 (2) (c) of the U. P. Tenancy Act are illegal under S. 44 of the Act. Hence where in a suit under S. 171 the defendant tenant is neither able to prove that the transferee holds a valid sub-lease from him nor is able to show that the transfer is a transfer to a co-tenant, the transfer is illegal. ——S. 47 (1) and (4)—Widow inheriting holding from her husband, re-marrying—Effect—Position of sub-tenants.

Where a widow inheriting a holding from her husband re-marries, her rights in the holding are extinguished. The extinction of rights is not governed by S. 47 (4) and so must fall under S. 47 (1) of the Tenancy Act and hence the rights of her sub-tenants must be deemed to be extinguished from that date. U. P. TENANCY ACT (1939), S. 49.

——S. 49—Consent of landlord—When necessary.

Under S. 49 of the U. P. Tenancy Act the consent of the landlord in writing is necessary in the case of an agreement between the co-tenants and not in the case of a decree in a suit brought for the division of a holding under S. 37 of the Agra Tenancy Act, but decided under S. 49 of the new Act. The landholder has only to be made a party to the suit under the new Act and decree is binding on him. (Shirreff, S.M.) RAGHUBAR v. SUKHNANDAN. 1942 A. W. R. (Rev.) 43 (2)=1942 R. D. 54 (2)=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 43 (2)= 1942 O.W. N. (B.R.) 38 (2).

An agreement not to enforce the right to division or share in a holding in consideration of fixed periodical payments does not contravene any mandatory provision of the Agra. Ten. Act or the U P. Tenancy Act and is also not against any public policy or morality. Such an agreement cannot be void; for it is always open to parties possessing rights to contract themselves out of these rights for a valid consideration provided the agreement is not barred by any provision of law and is not opposed to public policy or morality. Hence it will not be open to parties to claim division in violation of the terms of the agreement. The question whether such terms have been violated or not has to be determined by the Revenue Courts and not by the Civil Courts. ——S. 49—Division of holding when effective—Effect of absence of consent of landholder.

A division of holding without the consent of the zamindar is not a final division and does not extinguish the rights of the different branches in the holding as a whole. The rights of the co-tenants are not extinguished by a partition which has not been acted upon and which also has not been made binding on the landholder by his consent in writing. (*Shirreff, S. ——S. 49—Non-occupancy holding in Oudh—Heritability—Limits—Facts to be proved to establish a claim to share in it.

Non-occupancy holdings in Oudh are practically uninheritable except to the very limited extent allowed by S. 48 of the Oudh Rent Act. Further even in the case of heritable holdings unless the original holding has continued in an identical form throughout the period there can be no presumption that it is an ancestral one and that all the descendants of the original tenant are entitled to share in it. Before a claim to a share in it can be decreed it must be held that on the death of each successive tenant, the zamindar resettled the land with all his descendants. (*Shirreff, S. ——Ss. 49 and 59—Procedure to be followed when question of title is raised in suit for division of holding.

If in a suit for division of holding questions of title are raised they must be decided in that suit itself. It is wrong to say that title to share in the holding must be first established under S. 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act before division can be asked for. U. P. TENANCY ACT (1939), S.49.

——S. 49—Suit for division of holding—Alienations by predecessors in interest of the plaintiffs—If in representative capacity or for personal benefit—Onus.

Where in a suit for a division of the holding it is pleaded in defence that certain alienations made by the predecessors in interest of the plaintiffs were for their own personal benefit and should therefore be included in their share but it is denied by the plaintiffs and it is alleged that the alienations were made in their representative capacity, the onus of proving that the transactions were for the benefit of all co-tenants lies on the plaintiffs. (Sathe, J.M.) NAROTTAM v. SUNDER. 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 133=1942 O. W. N. (B. R.) 250=1942 R.D. 339=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 116.

——S. 53 (2)—Exchange—Conditions necessary for—Land belonging to applicant and other co-sharers, if can be given.

The only conditions according to S. 53 (2) which should exist for ordering an exchange of lands are (1) that the land must be under the cultivation of the applicant and (2) that it must be approximately equal in value to the land received by the applicant Hence there is no legal bar to the Sub-Divisional Officer giving a plot in exchange which does not exclusively belong to the applicant but belongs to him and other co-sharers. (Shirreff, S M. and Sathe J.M.) SUBHKARAM SINGH v. BALBHADDAR SINGH 1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 412 (2)=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 438 (2)=1942 O. W N. (B R) 643.

——S. 53 (4) (b)—Exchange of plots in different mahals—Legal bar, if any.

S. 53 (4) of the U. P. Tenancy Act only requires that the application should be for the exchange of land between persons who are landlords. There is nothing in the clause to suggest that the two landlords must belong to the same mahal. Hence exchange between landlords need not be between landlords in the same mahal. (Shirreff. S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) SUBHKARAN SIHGH v. BALBHADDAR SINGH 1942 A W.R. (Rev) 412=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 438 (2)=1942 O.W N. (B.R.) 643.

——S. 54—Application under—Reasonableness of—Collector, if has discretion to enquire into.

Where an application is made under S. 54 of the U P. Tenancy Act for acquisition of land, the Collector has a discretion to enquire into the reasonableness of the applicant's desire to acquire the land in question. ——S. 54—Right of a co-charer in joint mahal to apply under.

Under S. 54, U.P. Tenancy Act, any one co-sharer in a joint mahal is entitled to apply for possession of a particular piece of land and get it through Court as against all other co-sharers. The only restriction is that he can apply only to the extent of his share. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe. J. M) BIRBAL v. KALLU SINGH. 1942 O A. (Supp.) 370=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 344=1942 O.W.N. ——S. 54—Scope of—Extent of Collector's discretion under.

The terms of S. 54 of the U. P. Tenancy Act are not mandatory and the Collector has discretion to enquire into the reasonableness of the zamindar's desire for acquiring land. Where the landholders did not live in the village and their proprietary rights in the village were obtained by purchase and where they had already a grove in the village and the plot which they sought to acquire was situated at a distance from that grove it was held that the Collector was right in holding that the land was not required by them for a grove for their own enjoyment. U. P. TENANCY ACT (1939), S. 59.

——S. 54, Proviso (a)—Applicability—Conditions.

Cl. (a) of proviso to S. 54 of the U. P. Tenancy Act applies only to the village in which the land to be acquired is situated. Under this proviso the land is not to be acquired if the applicant possesses a grove in the village the area of which with that acquired will exceed 5 acres. Before the proviso comes into play at all, the applicant has to satisfy the Collector that the land is required. (Shirreff. S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) BIRBAL v. KALLU SINGH. 1942 O A. ——S. 59—Absence of evidence of plaintiff being out of possession—Dismissal of suit if justified.

In the absence of definite evidence and finding of the plaintiff in a suit under S. 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act being out of physical possession, his suit cannot be dismissed merely on the ground that there was a prior ejectment in execution of a decree under S. 61, Oudh Rent Act. ——S. 59—Compromise giving up 'pukhtadari' rights and getting 'qabzadari' rights in return—Status of such tenant.

Where by a compromise in a suit during the first settlement the plaintiffs gave up their claim to 'pukhtadari' rights and accepted 'qabzadari' rights in their stead it was held that the right of occupancy without right of transfer was given to the plaintiff in that case. ——S. 59—Decision under of suit filed under S. 121, Agra Tenancy Act—Suit being by only one of the claimants if bad on that account.

Where a suit filed under S. 121 of the Agra Tenancy Act is ultimately disposed of under S. 59 of the New Tenancy Act, it cannot be said to be bad on the ground that it was filed by only one of the several claimants and that the others had been made defendants, for S. 59 permits any person claiming even to be a joint tenant to file a declaratory suit. (Shirreff. S. M. and Sathe, J M) GIRDHAR DAS v. BINDESHWARI. 1942 R. D. 362=1942 O.A (Supp.) 177=1942 O. W. N. (B.R.) 273=1942 A.W.R (Rev.) 157.

——S. 59—Declaratory suit—Maintainability by one out of several joint tenants.

S. 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act permits even a person who claims to be one out of several joint tenants to institute and maintain a declaratory suit. (Sathe, J. M.) RAMDAYAL v. RAJ BANSIKUNWAR. 1942 O. W. N. (B R.) 288=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 194=1942 A. W. R. (Rev) 174=1942 R.D. 377.

——S 59—Dispossession after ejectment—Review of ejectment order—Failure to obtain restitution of possession—Effect—Suit for declaration—Maintainability.

Where a tenant dispossessed on ejectment fails to obtain restitution of possession when the ejectment order is cancelled on review and makes no attempt to assert his claim for over three years, he cannot thereafter sue for a declaration of his rights. ——S. 59—Effect of change in the language—Applicability of Proviso to S. 42 of Specific Relief Act to suits under S. 59.

Though it cannot be said that no suit under S. 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act can lie when the plaintiff is out of possession, the changed phraseology of the section does not remove the application of the proviso to S. 42, Specific Relief Act, to such cases. That proviso does not bar a suit in all cases where plaintiff is out of possession. (Shirreff, J.M. and Sathe, A.M.) RAGHUNATH SINGH v. RAM ADHAR. 1941 O. A. (Supp.) 919=1941 A W.R. (Rev.) 1138=1941A.L.J. (Supp.) 145.

——S. 59—Maintainability of suit against rival tenant alone.

A suit which is brought against a rival tenant alone and not against the zamindar must fail as the relief open to the plaintiff is only against the landholder. (Harper, S M. and Sathe, A. M.) LALLOO v. MUNNA LAL 1942 O.W.N. (B.R) 2=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 7=1942 A. W. R. (Rev.) 7=1942 R. D. 2=1942 A. L. J. (Supp.) 1.

——Ss. 59 and 63—Scope of—Applicability to suits between zamindars inter se.

Ss. 59 and 63 of the U. P. Tenancy Act contemplate only suits between zamindars and tenants. Hence no suit can lie under either of the sections for a declaration regarding exclusive khudkasht rights between zamindars inter se. (Sathe, J. M.) KUNJI v. DURGA SINGH. 1942 O. A. (Supp) 33=1942 A W .R. (Rev.) 33=1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 47=1942 R.D. 79.

——S. 59 and Evidence Act (1872), S. 116—Suit by ejected chief tenant who became a sub-tenant—Maintainability.

Where the chief tenant is ejected ex parte for non-payment of rent and the zamindar thereafter gives a lease in favour of his near relatives who in their turn give a sub-lease to the former tenant in chief it is not open to the latter to sue for a declaration that he is the tenant in chief on the ground that the lease in favour of the near relatives of the zamindar was fraudulent. (Harper, S. M. and Sathe, A. M.) RAM RATAN v. LACHHMAN. 1942 O.W N. (B R) 153=1942 R. D. 219=1942 O. A. (Supp.) 115 (2)=1942 A.W R. (Rev) 99 (2).

——Ss. 59 and 296—Suit by one of the joint tenants under S. 121, Agra Tenancy Act—Disposal after new Act—Law applicable.

A suit filed by one of the joint tenants under S. 121, Agra Tenancy Act, which is pending when the new Act came into force has according to S. 216 of the U. P. Tenancy Act to be disposed of according to S. 59 of that Act. Hence it cannot be dismissed on the ground that the suit was only by one of the joint tenants because S. 59 permits such a suit even if the others do not join. (Shirreff, S. M and Sathe, J.M.) JAIPAL v. BABBAN MISIR. 1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 333=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 359=1942 O.W N. (B.R.) 527.

——S. 59—Suit for declaration by a co-tenant out of possession—Maintainability.

The possession of one co-tenant is the possession of all co-tenants unless it is openly adverse. A co tenant out of possession cannot get that possession by a declaratory suit. But if he is not asking for possession at all and is content with the constructive possession that he is enjoying through his co-tenants and wants only a declaration regarding his title and the entry of his name in the papers his suit cannot be dismissed unless the co-tenants in possession are able to show that their possession had been openly adverse to him beyond the period of limitation or that the plaintiff has surrendered or transferred his share. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe, J. M.) SITLA BUX SINGH v. SHEO TAHAL. 1942 R D. 562=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 303=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 329=1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 445.

——S. 59 and Agra Tenancy Act (1926), S. 121—Suit for declaration of co-tenancy—Proof of possession and payment of half rent.

Where the plaintiff in a suit for declaration of co-tenancy with the defendant proves possession along with the defendant and payment of half the rent, he is entitled to get the declaration asked for. ——S. 59—Suit for declaration of joint tenancy—Evidence which could displace long standing entry in favour of defendants.

In a suit for declaration of joint tenancy, the evidence of plaintiff's possession, of his having paid rent canal dues, etc. and the fact of the landholder's written statement supporting the claim, are not enough to conclusively prove that the holding was joint when there are long standing entries in favour of the defendants. The best evidence to prove the case of the plaintiff is the production of the zamindar. No amount of other evidence can be believed against long standing entries in favour of the defendants. (Shirreff. S M. and Sathe, J. M) RAMCHANDRA v. ASA RAM. 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 256=1942 A W. R. (Rev.) 230=1942 O. W. N. (B.R.) 383=1942 R.D. 472.

——Ss. 59 and 29—Suit for declaration—Plaintiff in possession with consent of landholder—Admission to tenancy not proved—Status of such person.

Where a plaintiff suing for declaration of rights was found to be a de facto tenant of the whole holding from 1344 F and the facts indicated that he was so with the consent of the landholder, but the plaintiff had not proved that he was admitted in 1342-F. on a particularly low rent it was held that in such a case the correct finding should be that the plaintiff was the hereditary tenant of the holding but without the settlement of rent. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) GAVAN SINGH v. MIR SINGH. 1942 O. A (Supp.) 148 (2)=1942 O.W.N (B R.) 255=1942 R D. 344=1942 A. W. R. (Rev.) 128 (2).

——S. 59 and Specific Relief Act, S. 42, Proviso—Suit for declaration while admitting partial possession of defendants—Maintainability.

Though the plaintiffs in a suit for declaration that they are sole tenants admit the possession of the defendants in respect of a part of the holding, that alone cannot bar a declaratory suit in respect of the holding as a whole. ——S. 59—Suit for declaration without anticipation of further relief—When title proved.

Per Sathe, A.M.—Where a plaintiff has fair reasons to think that he is in possession but ultimately fails to establish his possession the suit should not be thrown out merely because he did not anticipate an adverse finding and include a prayer for possession in the reliefs claimed by him.

Per Harper, S. M.—It may be accepted as the view of the Board that if the plaintiff satisfies the Court that when bringing the declaratory suit he anticipated no further relief, he may get his declaration provided he proves his title. U. P. TENANCY ACT (1939), S. 59.

——S. 59—Suit to declare holding joint—Onus—Facts to be proved.

A tenancy is the result of a contract between the tenant and the zamindar and it must be shown that the zamindar agreed to admit all the persons to the holding before it can be held that it belongs to all the members of a joint Hindu family. The onus of proving that the zamindar did settle the land with all of them jointly and not only with the individuals in whose name the holding stands lies on the persons who claim the holding to be a joint one. The fact that the plaintiffs lived jointly with the recorded tenant is totally inadequate to prove that the holding was settled jointly with them. No amount of common living can make the parties joint tenants. (Shirreff, S. M. and Sathe, J. M.) SRI KRISHAN DATT DUBE v. BADRI RAI. 1942 O A. (Supp.) 198 (2)=1942 R. D. 381=1942 O W.N. ——Ss. 59 and 180 (2)—Suit to declare plaintiff hereditary tenant—Settlement of land though found against plaintiff found to be in adverse possession for over the statutory period—Relief on basis of S. 180 (2), if can be given by Court when not prayed for by party.

Where in a suit under S. 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act a plaintiff asks to be declared a hereditary tenant the Court though it finds that the land has not been settled with the plaintiff, nevertheless also finds that he has been in adverse possession for over the statutory period, it can decree the suit by applying S. 180 (2) of the Act even though relief on that basis has not been asked for. TheCourt cannot, no doubt, make out a new case on facts for the parties, but it also cannot refrain from applying statutory provisions of law to its own findings of fact irrespective of the fact whether the statutory provisions were mentioned in the pleadings of the parties or not. ——S. 59—Suit to declare plaintiff sole tenant—Plaintiff's prior admission in correction case as to defendant's right to be entered as co-tenant—Effect.

In a suit to declare the plaintiff as the sole tenant, his admission in prior correction of papers case that the name of the defendant might also be entered as a co-tenant though it may not operate as an estoppel, is nevertheless a piece of evidence which can be taken into consideration. The plaintiff cannot be believed when he tries to go back on his own admission. (Sathe, J. M.) NAHNEY v. RAJPAL. 1942 O. A. (Supp.) 242 (2)= 1942 A.W.R. (Rev) 216 (2)=1942 O.W.N. ——S. 59—Suit under—Defendant claiming to be tenant-in-chief—Desirability of impleading zamindar

Where a recorded occupancy tenant sues for a declaration regarding the status of the defendant who claims to be the tenant-in-chief holding the land direct from the zamindar but who is in fact entered in the papers as his sub tenant, it is desirable that in order to settle the dispute once for all the zamindar should also be made a party to the proceedings. Otherwise it will be open to the zamindar to disown the result of that litigation and to start a fresh litigation of his own. (*Shirreff S.M. and Sathe, J. ——S. 59—Suit under—Maintainability—Ancestral holding—Declaration of co-tenancy on that ground—Facts to be proved.

The mere fact that the plots comprised in the present holdings formed part of a much bigger ancestral sir holding which was sub-divided more than once in later years is not enough for the conclusion to be drawn that it still continues to belong to all the descendants of the common ancestor. In order to entitle a party to claim co-tenancy in a holding on the ground of its being ancestral it is essential however that the identity of the holding must have remained unchanged throughout the period. Where the identity of the holding had changed more than once and neither party was able to explain on what principle the original holding came to be sub-divided, it was held that the plaintiff's suit for declaration of co-tenancy was rightly dismissed on the ground that the holding was originally ancestral. ——S. 59 and Agra Tenancy Act (1926), S. 121—Suit under S. 121 disposed under S. 59—Non-joinder of other co-tenants as co-plaintiffs, if fatal.

Where a suit filed under S. 121, Agra Tenancy Act, has to be disposed of under S. 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act since it was pending after 1st January, 1940. the non-joinder of all co-tenants as co-plaintiffs cannot be invoked as a reason for the dismissal of the suit because under S. 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act any person claiming to be even a joint tenant may file a suit for declaration of his rights. (Sathe, J. M.) ANNU TEWARI v. CHITROO MISRA. 1942 O. W. N. (B R.) 426=1942 A.W.R. ——S. 59—Suit under, who can file—All co-sharers if should be impleaded.

A suit under S. 59 of the U. P. Tenancy Act can be filed by a person who even claims to be a joint tenant. It is not necessary to a suit under S. 25 that all the co-sharers in khewat should be impleaded. It is enough if all the landholders are added as parties. (*Sathe, J. ——Ss 59 (2) and 242—Suit under S. 59—Addition of party—Condition—Court competent to try.

In a suit under S. 59, U. P. Tenancy Act, if a person claims the land from the landholder in his own rights, he satisfies the requirements of S. 59 (2) and can be added as a party and such a suit would under S. 242 be triable only by a Revenue Court. ——S. 60—Suit under—Maintainability—Admission of person as co-tenant—Transferee of proprietary rights under exchange if estopped from denying status of tenant admitted.

Where a person has been admitted as a co-tenant of another by the manager of the proprietor, a transferee from the proprietor under an exchange would be estopped as his transferor from denying the status of the tenant so admitted and hence cannot sue under S. 60 of the U. P. Tenancy Act to declare that that tenant was not a tenant at all. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) BRIJ BEHARI LAL v. DEBI DAYAL. 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 488 (2)=1942 O. W. N. (B.R.) 671.

Since a set off in rent is not provided for in any of the clauses in S. 55 no declaration could be given in respect of it under S. 61. (Shirreff, S. M. and Sathe, J. M.) BALDEO DAS BIRLA v. SRI BALWANT RAO NAIK KATIA. 1942 O A. (Supp.) 419=1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 637=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 393.

Where the plaintiff in a suit for declaration of status and correct area maintains throughout that he is still in possession of the same area on the spot though the entries in the Patwari's papers show differently, he is perfectly entitled to this under Cls. (a) and (b) of S. 123 of the Agra Tenancy Act. Such a suit cannot be thrown out on the ground that the plaintiff is out of possession by applying the proviso to S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act. ——Ss. 61 and 123—Suit to declare the rent—Competency of Court to decide as to rate of slump remissions.

In a suit to declare what is the rent of a holding it is not competent for the Court to decide what the slump remission on the rent should be. ——Ss. 63 and 180—Plea of ejectment and declaration of title—If can be combined—Relief under S. 180, if can be obtained when section not referred to in plaint.

There is no legal bar against a plea for ejectment being joined with a plea for declaration of title. In fact a plea for ejectment involves adjudication on the question of title also. The omission of the mention of S. 180, U. P. Tenancy Act, in the plaint is not very material and relief under the section can be given nevertheless. (*Shirreff, S. M. and Sathe, J. ——S. 82—Occupancy holding—Husband allowing it to be entered in name of wife—Wife dealing with it as her own with consent of zamindar—Nature of her title.

Where an occupancy tenant permits the holding to be entered in the name of his wife and it continues for 39 years without a break and during that period she treats the holding as her own to the knowledge of her husband and with the consent of the zamindar, her title to the property is in no way defective. A tenant is entitled to surrender and the zamindar is entitled to admit a new tenant to the holding so surrendered. A grandson of the husband cannot as his heir succeed in a suit for possession based on the ground that her entry was only by way of consolation and that the husband continued to be the tenant always. Though a relinquishment in favour of one of the co-sharers is not valid, yet if it is for a money consideration, the co-sharer is not liable to ejectment as a trespasser until the question of the money transaction is settled by a proper Court. ——Ss. 83 and 85—Refusal of incorrect notice of surrender sent by registered post—Incorrect notice served through Tahsildar—Suit under S. 85 to contest notice on technical plea—Maintainability—Limitation.

When a notice of surrender containing correctly all the particulars required by S. 83 sent by registered post is refused, it is sufficient service of such notice. The fact that a similar notice served through Tahsildar contained wrong or incorrect particulars, cannot give the Zamindar an opportunity to contest the notice on the technical plea of containing incorrect particulars. There has been a proper service of a proper notice already and the commencement of the cause of action for a suit to contest the notice is the date of such service. ——S. 87—Abandonment—Failure to prove arrangement with sub-tenant—Status of sub-tenant.

Where the recorded tenants were found to have left the village 30 or 35 years ago and they failed to prove any arrangement between them and their former sub-tenant it was held that the sub-tenant must be held to be the tenant in chief. ——S. 87 and Agra Tenancy Act, S. 107—Abandonment—Landholder aware of arrangement of tenant leaving holding in charge of sub tenant—Absence of written notice to landholder—Abandonment, if could be presumed.

Where it is clear that the landholder was fully aware of the arrangement by which the tenant left the holding in charge of the sub-tenant, and had also realised rent from both the tenant and sub-tenant, abandonment could not be presumed from the mere absence of a written notice of the arrangement to the landholder. ——S. 87—Abandonment—Question, if can be decided by occupier—Plea of adverse possession, relying on alleged abandonment—Maintainability.

It is for the zamindar to treat a holding as abandoned and not for the actual occupier of the land to do so. Where the zamindar has always issued receipts of rents to an occupier as marfat on account of the tenant-in-chief who has not been heard of for over seven years, it shows that the zamindar did not treat the holding as abandoned. The occupier, a sub tenant cannot claim the period of his possession during that time to be counted towards a plea of adverse possession. (Sathe, J.M.) NAND KISHORE v. JANGJIT. 1942 A. W. R. ——Ss. 87 and 180—Abandonment—Starting point of limitation against Zamindar.

U. P. TENANCY ACT (1939), S. 87.

In cases of abandonment it is for the Zamindar to treat the holding as abandoned and not for the man in actual possession. Hence where the name of the last recorded tenant is expunged and the name of the person in actual possession is entered in the patwari papers as a tenant without fixation of rent, from that date the limitation against the Zamindar begins to run. ——S. 87—Abandonment—Zamindar remaining in possession for long time as his tenant's sub-tenant—Presumption, if any—Zamindar, if can be compelled to plead abandonment.

Where a zamindar is in possession for over 30 years as his tenant's sub-tenant in lieu of interest on loan advanced to the tenant, he cannot be presumed to have ousted the tenant and particularly when he is willing to treat himself as the sub-tenant. It is for the zamindar to treat a holding as abandoned and the plea of abandonment cannot be forced on him at the instance of third party. (Sathe, J.M.) GOKUL v. LALA RAM 1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 456=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 482=1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 714.

——Ss. 87 and 180 and Agra Tenancy Act, S. 107—Liability to ejectment of sub-tenant after surrender by tenant in chief—Tenant giving up cultivation for over 20 years and sub-tenant paying rent to zamindar direct.

Where a tenant had given up cultivation for over 20 years and the sub-tenant had been paying during all that time rent to the zamindar direct at the same rate as the tenant in chief when he ceased cultivation and there was subsequently a surrender by the tenant, in a suit for the ejectment of the sub-tenant it was held.

Per Shirreff, S M.—that the tenant in chief had lost his interest in the holding by abandonment and the suit for ejectment was barred by limitation.

Per Sathe, J.M.—dissenting that it was for the zamindar to invoke the provisions of S. 107 of the Agra Tenancy Act and to treat the holding as abandoned and as he had not so done there was no abondonment and hence the rights of the sub-tenants continued till the surrender by the tenant and the former was liable to ejectment as a trespasser. ——S. 87 (1)—Abandonment—Migration by tenant leaving another in charge of holding—Receipt of rent from both by zamindar—Absence of written notice—If justifies zamindar in treating the holding as abandoned.

The mere absence of a written notice to the zamindar as required by S. 87 (1), U. P. Tenancy Act, cannot justify a zamindar in treating a holding as abandoned when in fact he has been receiving rent both from the tenant who migrated to another village and from the person left by him in charge of the holding. ——S. 96—Applicability—Tenants of waste lands becoming statutory tenants and subsequently hereditary tenants under the New Act—Earlier commutation of rent.

Where certain tenants of waste lands became statutory tenants by a notification and subsequently hereditary tenants under the New Act, and had in 1345-F. got the rent commuted to cash rent which was higher than the circle rates and sued in 1347-F for abatement it was held that the plaintiffs were hereditary tenants whose rent had been agreed upon in accordance with the provisions of the Oudh Rent Act and that S. 96 of the U. ——S. 98—Agreement to enhance—Tenant admitting in agreement that correct rent was higher than recorded rent—Effect.

An agreement by which the tenant agrees that the correct rent was higher than the recorded rent which was incorrect does not amount to an agreement to enhance the rent. It only amounts to admission that the correct rent was higher than the recorded one and it is rebuttable. (Sathe, J.M.) MUNESAR KURMI v MAHARAJI. 1942 R.D 719=1942 O. A. (Supp.) 408=1942 O. W.N. ——S. 98—Quabuliyat, in effect an agreement to enhance rent—If null and void on the ground that it is not specific.

Even though a quabuliyat does not specifically state that it was an agreement to enhance rent, its effect was to do so. There is no reason why such a quabuliyat should be considered to be null and void simply because it does not specifically mention that it was an agreement to enhance the rent. ——S. 114 and Agra Tenancy Act (1926), S. 54—Right to sue for abatement—Permanent lease under Agra Tenancy Act of 1901 providing against abatement or enhancement of rent.

A permanent lessee under the Agra Tenancy Act of 1901 under a lease providing against abatement or enhancement of rent without any rights of transfer or of putting the land to any use as the lessee liked is not a lessee of a proprietary or sub-proprietary rights and hence could sue for enhancement under S. 54 of the Agra Tenancy Act of 1926 which if pending on 1st January, 1940 would be decided under S. 114 of the new Tenancy Act. ——S. 114—Suit under—Maintainability—Existence in force of prior slump remissions—Nature and scope of such remissions.

Remissions given by the order of Government are always temporary in nature and do not modify the legal rent in any way. Remissions only mean that the zamindar is not entitled to realise the amount remitted during the period for which remissions are to remain in force, the legal liabilities of the parties otherwise remaining the same. Hence the fact of the slump remissions of 1339-F remaining in force is not a bar to the institution of a suit under S. 114 for abatement. Nor could it be contended that the period of 10 years prescribed by S.96 (1) should elapse before such a suit can lie. (Shirreff, S. M. and Sathe, J.M.) DHANRAJ KURMI v. MST. if some only of the tenants file an appeal in respect of their holdings the appellate Court is not entitled to interfere with the decree passed by the trial Court against others who did not join in the appeal for O. 41. ——S. 133—Claim to reinstatement—Dispossessed lessee under lease by one of the co sharers collecting rent jointly—Validity of such lease.

Where all the zamindars collect rents jointly in a patti one of them alone is not entitled to lease out the land to a tenant. Where a tenant-in-chief who was entitled to sub-let, sub-leases a plot to the daughter-in-law of the zamindar but it is not registered as required by S. 42 of the U. P. Tenancy Act, the zamindar cannot take advantage of this and seek to eject the tenant-in-chief. He is not entitled to a decree because he was in 'pari delicto' inasmuch as his daughter-in-law, that is himself was a party to the illegal sub-letting. A landlord is not entitled to take advantage of the U. P. Tenancy Act to deprive a tenant of a right which accrued to him under the old Act. Where after the decree in a suit under S. 82 of the Agra Tenancy Act, the tenant is permitted to retain his holding provided he ejected his sub-tenants and he takes the necessary steps by filing a suit under S. 83 of that Act and would have succeeded in ejecting him but for the stay of proceedings by the Stay of Proceedings Act, he cannot be sued once again under S. 171 of the new Act and deprived of the benefit of S. 83 of the Agra Tenancy Act which had accrued to him under that Act. ——S. 171 and Agra Tenancy Act (1926), S. 83—Scope and effect of S. 83, Agra Tenancy Act—If applicable to suit under S. 171 of the New Tenancy Act.

The provisions of S. 83 of the Agra Tenancy Act only conferred a locus penitentiae on the tenant in chief and did not give him any rights or privileges which must be held to subsist even after the repeal of the old Act. It was held that inasmuch as the granting of this locus penitentiae was only discretionary on the Court and not obligatory in every case, S. 83 could not be applied to a suit under S. 171 of the New Act brought on a cause of action which arose prior to its enactment. (Shirreff, J. M. and Sathe, A.M.) ASA RAM v. JAGAT RAM. 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 30=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 13=1942 A. W.R. (Rev.) 13=1942 R.D. 46.

——S. 171—Suit under—Competency—Absence of registered sub-lease according to S. 25 of the Agra Tenancy Act (1901)—Continuing cause of action.

Where there is nothing to show that a sub-lease during the time when Act II of 1901 was in force, was by a registered instrument as prescribed by that Act, the sub-lease is as it were renewed annually and a fresh cause of action accrues at every fresh renewal and hence the zamindar has a right to sue the sub-lessee for ejectment under S. 171 of the U. P. Tenancy Act. (Shirreff, S M.) NABI-UN-FATIMA v. JAWAHAR MAL. 1942 A.W R. (Rev.)) 164 (1)=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 184 (1) =1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 192=1942 R.D. 258.

——S. 171—Suit under—Competency—Cause of action arising under old Act.

A suit for ejectment under S. 171, U. P. ——S. 171—Suit under—Competency—Illegal subletting not taking place under new Act.

The fact that there was no illegal subletting under the new Act is no ground for holding that suit under S. 171 of the U. P. Tenancy Act was premature. ——S. 171—Suit under—Competency—Illegal subletting under old Act.

S. 171 of the U. P. Tenancy Act only requires that the land in suit must be illegally transferred or sublet at the date of the institution of the suit. Hence the mere fact that proceedings have been taken by a tenant in chief for the ejectment of his sub-tenant or even the fact that an order for the ejectment of the sub-tenant had been passed before the suit under S. 171 was filed would not be a sufficient answer to the suit since the sub-tenant's rights would persist till he is ejected on the spot and the illegal subletting would continue in force till then. In applying S. 296 of the U. P. Hence if a suit, for the ejectment of a grove-holder on the ground of an act detrimental to the land he is holding brought under S. 84, Agra Tenancy Act, has to be decided under S. 172 of the new Act the proviso to that section also becomes applicable. ——S. 180—Liability to ejectment—Prior decree for ejectment and execution against some of the co-tenants—Subsequent suit for ejectment against all.

Where a decree for ejectment is passed against some of the co-tenants and executed against them in spite of the legal defect of one of the co tenants not having been impleaded who sued for a declaration that he was an occupancy tenant but he was found to be only a tenant of sir, in a later suit for ejectment against all on the ground of their having again forcibly taken possession, it was held that the execution of the earlier decree had not the effect of extinguishing the rights of the excluded co-tenant and that he remained in possession as tenant of sir and not as a trespasser and could not therefore be ejected though the rest could be ejected. ——S. 180—Right to sue under—Zamindar, in respect of land let to tenant.

Though the language of S. 180 of the U. P. If a tenant does not choose to take action against a person who has committed a trespass against him, it is still open to the zamindar to take action against the trespasser on his own account if he considers that the trespass committed against the tenant is likely to affect his constructive possession over the land. Where in a suit under S. 180, U. P. Tenancy Act, the defendant is found to be holding under a colourable pretext of proprietorship, that is no ground for dismissing the suit. S. 180 of the U. P. Tenancy Act is not meant for the ejectment of only those people who are admittedly trespassers. It cannot be said that it is not meant for the ejectment of persons with a colourable pretext of title. ——S. 180—Suit under by proprietor of new patti formed in partition—Limitation—Starting point.

For the purpose of determining the starting point of limitation for a suit for ejectment of the old proprietor by the proprietor of a new patti formed in partition the proper date is the date from which the partition takes effect for it is only from that date that the proprietor of the new patti has the right to sue as proprietor. ——S. 180—Suit under—Maintainability— Hereditary tenant seeking to eject his mortgagee after new Act.

A tenant who enters into a void transaction cannot seek the help of the Court in repudiating the same transaction. Hence a hereditary tenant who had mortgaged a plot cannot after the U P. ——S. 180—Suit under—Onus of proving plea of tenancy—Evidence of defendant—Sufficiency.

Though the onus of proving the plea of settlement with him is on the defendant in a suit under S. 180 as there is no minimum evidence prescribed by law for the proof of any issue, it may be decided on the strength of the oath of the defendant that he took the land himself 10 or 11 years prior to the suit. It is fairer and equitable to ascertain the land revenue payable on the holding by ascertaining the rent of the holding at standard settlement rates and then working out the land revenue by applying the percentage of the total land revenue to the total assets of the mahal. ——S. 205 and Agra Tenancy Act, S. 196—Mortgagee in possession, if can lease land for planting a grove.

Mortgagees in possession are not landlords within the meaning of the definition of landlord in the Agra Tenancy Act and S. 196 of that Act does not give him the right of leasing land for the purpose of planting a grove without the consent of the mortgagor. (Shirreff (S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) GHASI RAM v. SARUP NARAIN. 1942 R.D. 569=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 315=1942 O.A. (Supp) 341=1942 O.W N. (B.R.) 452.

——S. 206 (c)—Construction—If affects past transactions.

S. 206 (c) of the U. P. Tenancy Act cannot be construed as affecting past transfers, that is, as meaning that whenever the question of the validity of the sale of a grove prior to the enforcement of the U. P. Tenancy Act comes before a Court, it is incumbent on the latter to hold that the sale is valid, even though under custom which was in force at the time of the sale it was invalid. ——S. 210 and Agra Tenancy Act (1926), S. 200—Effect of use of the word 'only' in section—Omission to execute lease by lessor if fatal to creation of tekadari rights.

The language of S. 200 of the Agra Tenancy Act (S. 210 of the U. P. Tenancy Act) is very precise. It says that a theka may be made only by a written instrument executed by the landlord. The presence of the word 'only' in the section makes the section mandatory. Hence the omission to execute a lease by the lessor is fatal to the creation of tekadari rights. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) MIHILAL v. MUTTRA PRASAD. 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 239=1942 A. W. R. (Rev.) 213=1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 389=1942 R.D. 478.

——S. 210 and Evidence Act (1872), S. 115—Omission to execute lease—Effect—Conduct of lessees creating an estoppel.

Though an omission to execute a lease on the part of the lessor is a fatal defect to the creation of thekadari rights, if the lessees by their action persuaded the plaintiffs to believe that they had taken a theka of the land in dispute from the plaintiffs and to act upon that belief and the theka has been given effect to, then the lessees would be clearly estopped from denying the existence of the theka under S. 115 of the Evidence Act. In a suit against three persons jointly for arrears of revenue without specifying the amounts payable by each separately, where it is found that one of the defendants holds only abadi land over which no land revenue is payable, no relief could be given as against the remaining defendants only because the plaintiff claimed relief jointly against all the defendants and did not claim any separate relief against each defendant severally. ——S. 231—Suit for profits and accounts—Excess collections found to be made by different sets of defendants—Proper decree—Decree against one of the sets of defendants alone, when justified.

When different sets of defendants are found to have made excess collections, the plaintiff in a suit for profits and accounts should be given a decree against all such sets of defendants in proportion to their excess collections. A decree against one set of defendants alone is not justified unless the understanding between the co-sharers is shown to be that the excess was to be so collected. ——S. 236 (a)—Collection of excess knowingly—Circumstances—Execution for arrears after accepting full payment of rent.

Execution for arrears of rent after accepting a money order in full payment of rent for the period concerned, is a collection of rent in excess knowingly and compensation is payable under S. 236, U. S. 242, U. P. Tenancy Act, bars Civil Courts from hearing and disposing of even pending suits if they were of the nature specified in Sch. IV of the U. P. Tenancy Act. Hence a suit under S. 108 (10) of the O. R. Act pending when the new Act came into force cannot be dismissed on the ground that dispossession of the plaintiff was only by some only of the co-sharers forming the coparcenary body, because such a finding if arrived at before 1st January 1940 would have entailed a return of the plaint to be presented to the Civil Court and which is now barred by S. 242. So the suit would have to be tried and decided by the Revenue Court. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) RAM NATH SINGH v. BALBHADDAR SINGH 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 443=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 417=1942 O.W.N. ——Ss. 244, 180 and 183—Conversion of suit under S. 180 into one under S. 183—If should be allowed.

There is no legal bar to prevent an application by a plaintiff to convert a suit under S. 180 to one under S. 183, U. P. Tenancy Act. In fact it should be granted in view of S. 244 of the U. P. Tenancy Act. (Shirreff, S. M. and Sathe, J. M.) BEHARI LONIA v. SARABJIT TEWARI. 1942 A W.R. (Rev.) 334 (2)= 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 528=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 360 (2).

S. 244 of the U. P. Where by a private arrangement between the co-sharer brothers their holdings are held in separate possession, all of them are landholders. The fact that only one of them has been collecting the rents would not preclude the others from suing for arrears of rent, for any arrangement that had been entered into between them could be put an end to by them and claiming arrears is one of the modes of putting an end to such arrangement. The power of summary dismissal of an appeal under the U. P. Tenancy Act given to the Board of Revenue by S. 263 of the Act has not been given to any subordinate Court by the Act. Where a suit under S. 226 of the Agra Tenancy Act for profits was decreed on 31st August, 1939, for Rs. 380 though the plaintiff had valued his claim at Rs. 100 and the defendant's appeal to the Civil Judge was dismissed on the ground that the valuation of the suit did not exceed Rs. 200, it was held on reference in revision that the valuation of the suit should have been taken to be the value found by the trial Court and that therefore an appeal lay to the District Judge under the Agra Tenancy Act as the value was over Rs. 200. It was held further that as by the time the Civil Judge's order was passed the U. P. Tenancy Act had come into force and the requisite value was only 'exceeding Rs. 50', the reason given by the Civil Judge for rejecting the appeal was not correct and that it was hence a fit case for reference to the High Court under S. 289 (2) of the U. ——S. 265 (1) (a) and Agra Tenancy Act (1926), S. 242—Right of appeal—Governing date—New Act coming into force before filing of appeal.

The right of appeal is governed by the date of institution of the suit and not by the date of the filing of the appeal. Where a suit valued at something less than Rs. 200 was instituted while the Agra Tenancy Act was in force and though the new Tenancy Act had come into force prior to the filing of an appeal, no appeal would lie to the District Judge under S. 242 of the Agra Tenancy Act. Per Sathe, J.M., that since no minimum evidence was required for proving settlement of land and as the only evidence on record was that produced by the defendant and as forcible possession on the defendant's part of many sir plots was improbable, the Commissioner's finding that settlement of land had not been proved could not be maintained even though it was one of fact.

Where the finding of an additional Commissioner is not without any support whatsoever of evidence on record, the fact that he may have made certain mistakes in considering and interpreting certain documents, is no ground for interference with that finding in second appeal. ——S. 267—Second appeal—Interference with concurrent findings—Possibility of a different conclusion by second appellate Court—If a valid ground.

The mere possibility that a second appellate Court if it had been sitting as a Court of first instance or as a Court of first appeal it might have come to a different conclusion, would not justify it in rejecting the concurrent findings of facts arrived at by the two lower Courts. ——S. 267—Second appeal—Interference with findings of fact.

The fact that the Board might have, if it were sitting as a Court of first instance or of first appeal considered the evidence insufficient to prove a plaintiff's case, is no reason why it should interfere with the considered finding of fact to the contrary in second appeal. ——S. 267—Second appeal—Powers of Court—Material issue not considered by lower appellate Court—Procedure to be followed—Hearing on facts when justified.

Ordinarily if the first appellate Court neglects to consider a material issue, the appeal should be remanded to it for fresh disposal after considering material issues. But where both parties agree to argue the appeal on facts in the appellate Court, it would be justified in hearing the appeal on the merits of the case so that the matter might be decided once and for all expeditiously. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) RAGHUNATH RAI v. MAHADEO PRASAD. 1942 R.D. 355=1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 266=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 238 (2)=1942 O. A. (Supp.) 264 (2).

——S. 271 (2)—Appeal from Additional Commissioner's remand order, if lies—Re-opening of question of law decided.

An order of remand is not a decree but only an order. No appeal lies from an Additional Commissioner's remand order and hence it is open to either party to reopen the question of law in second appeal against the final order. (*Sathe, J. ——S. 271 (2)—Dismissal of appeal in default—When appealable.

Under S. 271 (2) of the U. P. Tenancy Act appeals lie from orders of dismissal of appeal in default of appearance only if made by an Assistant Collector of the 1st class or a Collector and as such no appeal lies from such an order passed by an Additional Commissioner. ——S. 272—Second appeal—Competency—Order in appeal against order under S. 144, C. P. Code.

No second appeal lies under S. 272 of the U. P. Tenancy Act against an order passed in appeal against an order under S. 144, C. P. Code. (Shirreff, S. M.) MAHOMED YAQUB v. SHAHZADE BEGUM. 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 202 (2)=1942 R.D. 268 (2)=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 165 (2)=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 185 (2).

——Ss. 272 and 294—Second appeal in proceedings under S. 294—If lies.

In proceedings under S. 294 U. P. Tenancy Act no second appeal lies under S. 272 of the Act. (Sathe, A.M.) SHIB LAL v. RAI SHAMSHER JANG. 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 1 (2)=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 14 (1)=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 14 (1)=1942 R.D. 1 (2).

——Ss. 273 and 274—Review—Mistaken view of law—Competency.

There can be no review on a mistaken view of law. (Harper, S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) NATHA RAM v. JHAMMAN SINGH. 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 121 (2)=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 85.

——S. 273—Review—Scope of powers—Practice as to exercise of powers—Review on an alleged mistake of law.

It is not the practice of the Board to review its own orders on account of any alleged mistake of law although S. 273 of the U. P. Tenancy Act gives unfettered powers of review. Such a practice is in accordance with O. 47, C. P. Code. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) DUNI CHAND v. RAM SINGH. 1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 126=1942 R.D. 252=1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 186=1942 O.A. ——S. 275—'Case decided'—Order of remand.

Where there is a remand without any decision in any way on any issue between the parties, the order is not open to revision. (Harper, S.M.) SADHO KUAR v. UMA CHARAN. 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 124=1942 R.D. 169 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 134=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 117 (1)

U. P. TENANCY ACT (1939), S. 275.

——S. 275—'Case'—'Decided case'—Restoration proceedings, if separate cases—Restoration if a 'decided case'.

Per Harper, S.M.—Proceedings for the revival of a suit are not part of the suit but are separate cases. When restoration is ordered under O. 9, R. 13, C. P. Code, the separate case started by such proceedings is duly decided and it becomes a 'decided case'. (Harper, S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) DAYA SHANKAR v. LALTA PRASAD. 1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 1=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 1=1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 53=1942 R.D. 85=1942 A.L.J. (Supp.) 8.

——Ss. 275 and 286—Case decided—Refusal to refer issue to Civil Court.

An order of a Revenue officer refusing to refer an issue on the question of proprietary right to the civil Court, is not a final order deciding the case and hence it cannot be interfered with in revision. (Shirreff, S.M.) KALYAN DAS v. DATA RAM. 1942 O.A. 485 (1)=1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 662 (1).

——S. 275—Findings of fact—Interference—Absence of evidence.

The Board is ordinarily reluctant to interfere in revision with findings of fact of an appellate Court. But where the appellate Court's order is not based on the evidence and leads to inequitable results, it is necessary to interfere with it in revision inasmuch as the appellate Court has acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction with material irregularity. (Harper, S.M. and Shirreff, J.M.) RAM SUNDER MISIR v. PALKI. 1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 27=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 27=1942 R.D. 372=1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 283.

——S. 275—Mere technical defect—If justifies revision—Material injustice by reason of irregularity—Necessity.

Where an appeal against an order for transfer of possession in execution of an ejectment order under S. 82, Agra Tenancy Act, is allowed ex parte on the decree-holder's agent refusing to take service of notice, though the absence of fresh notice is an objection of considerable force yet a revision of that order will not be allowed merely on a technical defect. The applicant must show that he has suffered material injustice by the irregularity committed in the lower appellate Court. (Sathe, J.M.) INDER NARAIN v. RAM RAJ. 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 44=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 34=1942 R.D. 76=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 34.

——S. 275—Mistake of facts—Absence of any injustice—Interference.

In the absence of any injustice, a mistake of facts made by the lower Court does not warrant interference in revision. (Sathe, J.M.) MURTA DEI v. SURESH DUTT SINGH. 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 536=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 411=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 437.

——S. 275—Revision—Bar of—Failure to avail remedy of appeal—Entertainment of revision—Competency.

The only bar contained in S. 275 of the U. P. Tenancy Act is against revision applications in respect of orders which are appealable to the Board or the District Judge. It is discretionary with the Board to entertain a revision application even if the party concerned has failed to avail himself of the remedy of filing an appeal. But where an applicant fails to avail himself of the regular ——S. 275—Revision directly to Board—Competency.

Though a revision has to be filed first before the commissioner and not to the Board direct, yet where an infructuous appeal had been filed before the Commissioner, such an objection cannot hold good. ——S. 275—Revision—Exercise of discretion in extending time for filing review application—Interference

Where a Collector sitting with the powers of an appellate Court having authority to apply S. 5 of the Limitation Act chooses to extend the time for the filing of an application for review it cannot be termed an irregularity and hence cannot be interfered with in revision. ——S 275—Revision—Failure to show sympathy—If a ground.

Where neither illegality nor irregularity in the trial Court's order could be shown in respect of an order of dismissal of a suit for profits for default, a revision of such an order could not be asked for on the ground that the party deserved sympathy and that the case should have been adjourned to another date (Sathe, J.M.) AMBIKA PRASAD v. MAHENDRAMAN SINGH. 1942 O W N. ——S. 275—Revision—Grounds.

S. 275 of the U. P. Tenancy Act provides for revision in three cases. The cases included in Cls. (a) and (b) of the section provide for those cases where a question of jurisdiction is involved But the cases included in Cl. (c) of the section are those where admittedly the Court had jurisdiction but where in the exercise of it the Court acted with some illegality or material irregularity. ——S. 275—Revision—Interference—Dismissal of rent suit on plea of payment to third party—Appeal and revision—Compromise without intervener as party—Orders in the case, if can be revised.

Where the plea of a defendant in the suit for arrears of rent, as to payment to third party bona fide, is accepted and the suit dismissed and on an appeal being dismissed a revision is filed and during its pendency a compromise is entered into between plaintiff and defendant to which the intervener was not a party, that is no ground for asking the order in the case being set aside in revision. ——S. 275—Revision—Interference — Question of irregularity in the assumption of jurisdiction by Assistant Collector—Absence of prejudice.

Where jurisdiction is assumed by an Assistant Collector not invested with such powers under S. 238 of the Agra Tenancy Act and an appeal is preferred to a Collector and decided by him though according to S. 248 (3) of the Agra Tenancy Act it ought to have been filed before the District Judge and decided by him, where there is no prejudice to the parties, it is not necessary for the Board to interfere in revision. ——S. 275—Sale of immovable property through a Kurkamin—Irregularity—Revision.

Where the irregularity in the matter of a sale of immovable property through a Kurkamin as movable property is brought to the notice of the Board, it will interfere in revision. ——S. 275 (c)—Illegality or material irregularity—Error of law or wrong exercise of discretion—Competency of revision.

An error of law or wrong exercise of discretion does not amount to an illegality or material illegality under S. 275 (c) and hence could not be a ground for a revision. (Harper, S M) SADHO KUAR v. UMA CHARAN. 1942 O W N. (B R.) 124=1942 R.D 169 =1942 O A (Supp) 134=1942 A.W R (Rev.) 117 (1).

——S. 276—Restoration of arrears of rent suit—Competency of Revision to Board when appeal from suit lies to District Judge.

Per Harper, S M—Though an appeal from a decision in a suit for arrears of rent for more than Rs. 200 lies to the District Judge, an order under O. 9, R. 13 for restoration of such a suit is revisable by the Board. ——S. 286—Question of proprietary right—If negatived by the absence of the name of person concerned from the khewat.

From the mere absence from the khewat of the name of a defendant in suit for arrears of rent who pleads that he is a mortgagee of proprietary rights, it cannot be said that no question of proprietary right arises. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) RAJDEO TEWARI v. SWAMI CHARAN. 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 670 (1)= 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 485 (2).

——S. 286 and Agra Tenancy Act, S. 271—Question of proprietary title—Partition subsequent to mortgage—Allotment to different person—Question of binding nature of mortgage.

Where subsequent to a mortgage there is a partition both in the Civil and Revenue Courts and the mortgag ed plot is allotted to the son of the mortgagor and he brings a suit to eject the mortgagee when the latter raises the plea as to his mortgage the question as to the binding nature of the mortgage is one of proprietary title and should be referred to the Civil Court under S. 286, U. P. Tenancy Act. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe, J.M.) DHONDHAI v. SHEO KUMAR SINGH. 1942 O.A. (Supp) 202=1942 R D 408=1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 319=1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 182

——S. 286 (1). Expl.—Applicability of the Expl.—Plea of under-proprietorship in defence to suit under S. 180—Reference to Civil Court—Necessity.

The explanation to S. 286 (1) of the U. P. Tenancy Act relates to cases where the defendant raises flimsy and untenable pleas as to existence of proprietary rights in order to delay the case. Where in a suit under S.180 the defendant pleads that he is 'britdar' which means an under-proprietor, and it is denied by the plaintiff, there is obviously a question of proprietary title involved which it is obligatory on the trial Court to refer to a Civil Court. The Expl. to S. 286 (1) has no application to such a case. (Shirreff, J.M. and Sathe, A.M.) SANKATA BUX SINGH v. MATA BADAL. 1941 A. W.R (Rev) 1122=1941 O.A. (Supp) 903.

U. P. TENANCY ACT (1939), S 294.

——S. 288—Applicability—Suit disposed of and pending appeal—'Suit' meaning of.

The word 'suit' in S. 288, U. P. Tenancy Act means suit only and does not include appeal. Hence S. 288 cannot apply to a suit which had been already decided before it was enacted and the decree was pending appeal. ——S 294—Applicability—Ejectment and delivery of possession in 1936—Appeal—Restoration—Revision—Restoration to Zamindar by way of restitution—Right to reinstatement under S. 294.

Where the actual delivery of possession in the ejectment proceedings had taken place in 1936 (i.e.) before the date specified in S. 294 of the U. P. Tenancy Act but on appeal was restored to the tenant and finally as a result of revision to the Board possession was restored to the Zamindar by way of restitution, the case does not come within the scope of S. 294 and the tenant is not entitled to reinstatement. The order under S. 144, C. P. Code merely restored the status quo and hence confirmed the fact that the tenant had been duly ejected in 1936 (i.e.) before the date specified in S. 294 of the Act. (Shirreff S. M.) BAKHTAWARI v KAMLA KANT 1942 A.W R. (Rev.) 263 (1)=1942 O A. (Supp) 289 (1)=1942 R D. 373=1942 O.W.N. (B. R) 284.

——S. 294—Applicability—Proceedings regarding suit for ejectment under S. 44 of the Agra Tenancy Act.

The proceedings in relation to a suit for ejectment under S. 44 of the Agra Tenancy Act are not governed by S. 294 of the United Provinces Tenancy Act. (Sathe, A M.) SHIB LAL v. RAI SHAMSHER JANG. 1942 O W.N (B.R.) 1 (2)=1942 O.A. (Supp.) 14 (1)= 1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 14 (1)=1942 R.D. 1 (2).

——S. 294—Applicability—Tenant ejected under Ss. 79 and 80 of the Agra Tenancy Act.

S. 294 of the U. P. Tenancy Act applies to tenants ejected under Ss. 79 and 80 of the Agra Tenancy Act (i.e.) ejected in execution of a decree for arrears of rent as much as to tenants ejected under S. 81 of the Agra Tenancy Act (i.e.) in default for payment of arrears, for, both amount to the same thing. ——S. 294—Application for reinstatement—Duty of impleading parties if on the applicant—Failure to implead person in cultivatory possession—If would entail rejection of application.

The very wording of S. 294 (1) of the U. P. Tenancy Act shows that it does not contemplate any formal impleadment of parties. Though it is desirable to have persons who are in cultivatory possession as parties in view of Cl. (3) of the section, the duty of making them parties is not definitely put on the applicant himself. Hence his omission to implead such persons cannot make his application liable to be rejected. (Shirreff S M. and Sathe, J.M.) DULLI SINGH v. BHUNESH-

Where only two out of seven tenants who held the holding jointly prior to their ejectment apply for reinstatement to the holding, the application is void ab initio. (*Shirreff, S. M. and Sathe, J. ——Ss. 294 and 246—Application for restoration by one of several ejected co-tenants—Validity—Curability.

Where several co-tenants are ejected an application for restoration under S. 294 by one co-tenant only is irregular ab initio in view of the provisions of S. 246 of the Act and an objection on this ground even if raised at a late stage cannot be overlooked under O. 1, R. 13 C. ——S. 294—Application under—Failure to file copies of and of the Khatauni—Rejection of application, if justified.

The mere failure of an applicant under S. 294 of the U. P. Though an ejectment order is passed before 1st April, 1937, if the tenant is ejected actually after that date, he is entitled to the benefit of S. 294, U. P. Tenancy Act. A tenant who is ejected for non-satisfaction of a decree for arrears of rent under Ss. 79 and 80, Agra Tenancy Act is also ejected for non payment of arrears of rent as a tenant ejected by notice under S. 81. Hence a tenant ejected under Ss. 79 and 80 of the Agra Tenancy Act is entitled to the benefits of S. 294, U. P. Tenancy Act like those ejected under S. 81. Where a suit under S. 44 of the Agra Tenancy Act necessitated by the tenant continuing in possession after ejectment for arrears of rent is pending when the New Act came into force and the tenant applies under S. 294 of the New Act for reinstatement though it may be the correct procedure to pass a decree for his ejectment it is unnecessary. ——S. 294—Reinstatement, right to—Some only of the ejected tenants applying—If and when entitled to relief.

Where there is no definite ground for holding that the applicants who are only some of the ejected tenants made the application on behalf of all the co-tenants, it is not admissible in view of the provisions of S. 246 (1) of the U. P. Tenancy Act. Before it is held that the persons who put in the application are acting as the agents for all the claimants strictest proof should be required. ——S. 294—Reinstatement under—Ejectment for arrears both prior to and after 1344-F.

Under S. 294 of the U. P. Tenancy Act it is only if the tenant has been ejected for arrears prior to rabi 1344 F that he is entitled to reinstatement. Hence where the arrears in respect of which a decree for ejectment was passed is not only on account of certain arrears of 1344-F but also on account of the full arrears for 1345-F, the tenant could not get the benefit of S. 294 because even if the amount decreed on account of 1344 F is excluded altogether the decree on account of the rent of 1345-F must stand and so also the judgment debtor's ejectment on that account. Though the heir of two out of three ejected co-tenants is entitled to apply for reinstatement as heir of the deceased co-tenants, if the third co-tenant who is absconding is not shown to have absconded for 5 years prior to June 1940, the heir of the deceased co-tenants alone cannot apply for reinstatement because the absconding tenant has still rights in respect of the holding which are capable of being reviewed by an application under S. 294 of the U. ——S. 294—Right to reinstatement under—Ejected tenant re-ejected on taking forcible possession.

A tenant who is once ejected for non-payment of arrears of rent and is reejected under S. 44, Agra Tenancy Act on his taking forcible possession is not entitled to claim reinstatement under S. 294 of the U. ——S. 294—Right to reinstatement under—Ejectment prior to date mentioned in S. 294—Restoration of possession on appeal and its deprivation under S. 144 C. P. Code on success in revision after new Act.

Where an ejectment was in fact before the date mentioned in S. 294, U. P. Tenancy Act but the tenant is restored to possession on his succeeding in appeal and is once again deprived of his possession which is finally restored to the Zamindar on his succeeding in revision after the new Tenancy Act came into force, the order restoring possession by way of restitution merely restores the status quo and confirms the earlier ejectment and hence such a tenant is not entitled to claim the benefit of S. 294 of the new Act. ——S. 294 (1), proviso—'Continuously so let'—Meaning of—Proviso, if would apply when land is let continuously but to different persons.

The phrase 'continuously so let' in the proviso to sub-S. (1) of S. 294, U. P. Tenancy Act merely means that the land must have been continuously let to other persons from 1345-F. It does not require that the land must have been let to the same persons from 1345-F onwards. The proviso will apply even if the tenant to whom the land had been let in 1345F- is changed afterwards provided that the land has always remained let to some tenant or other from 1345-F up to the date of the application under S. 294. ——S. 294 (1) Proviso—'Let'—If would include exchange.

The word 'letting' has nowhere been defined but in common parlance it means 'leasing'. There is no comprehensive definition of 'lease' in the U. P. Tenancy Act, but according to the definition of lease in the T. P. Act, S. 105, the essential ingredients are that the land should be transferred for a certain time or in perpetuity and that it should be transferred in consideration of a price or a periodical payment. Where certain plots from which a tenant was ejected was taken by the zamindar and given to other tenants from whom he took away other plots in exchange, it was held that it satisfied the conditions of a lease and that hence the plots in question were 'let' within the meaning of the proviso to sub-S. (1) of S. 294, U. P. Tenancy Act. (Shirreff, S.M. and Sathe. J.M.) INDRA BIKRAM SINGH v. RAM PHAL. 1942 A.W.R. (Rev.) 421 = 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 447 = 1942 O.W.N (B.R.) 623.

Where the landholder applies for possession after the passing of the new Act on the tenant failing to appear in answer to notice under S. 81 of the Agra Tenancy Act, the proceedings have to be continued under the old Act and a notice as required by S. 93 of that Act would have to be issued. ——Ss. 296 and 114 and Agra Tenancy Act, S. 54—Corresponding provision—Test to find out—S. 114 in the new Act if corresponds to S. 54 of old Act

U. P. TENANCY ACT (1939), S. 296.

The quashing of proceedings contemplated by S. 296 of the U. P. Tenancy Act has relevance where reliefs permissible under the old Act are not now permissible at all under the new Act, as for example, distraint of crops. The correspondence between sections in the old and the new Act to be sought for under S. 296 is the correspondence in the relief allowed by sections and not in the grounds on which such relief can be claimed. These grounds may vary. But if the new Act provides substantially for the same relief as the old Act, it must be held that there is a corresponding provision in the new Act and a pending suit should be disposed of in accordance with the terms of the corresponding section of the new Act. In this light S. 114 of the U.P. Tenancy Act must be held to be the section corresponding to S. 54 of the Agra Tenancy Act. Hence a suit filed under S. 54 of the Agra Tenancy Act is not liable to be dismissed, but must under S. 296 of the U. P. Tenancy Act be decided in accordance with the terms of the former section (i.e.) S. 114 of the U.P. Tenancy Act (*Shirreff, S. M. and Sathe, J. ——Ss. 296 and 148—Corresponding section—Procedure to be followed—Suit for arrears of rent under old Act against sub-tenant—Continuation after new Act—Procedure—Effect.

In cases to which S. 296 of the United Provinces Tenancy Act applies correspondence is to be sought only between the section of the old Act under which the suit was filed and the section corresponding to it in the new Act. Where a suit held under S. 132 of the Agra Tenancy Act against a sub-tenant remains pending at the time of the coming into force of the new Act, it has to be decided according to S. 148 of the new Act which corresponds to S. 132 of the old Act. Suits and execution proceedings pending on 1—1—1940 will be governed by the provisions of the new Act with reference to limitation. Suits and applications filed after 1—1—1940 on an earlier cause of action would be barred if their respective periods of limitation under the older Acts had expired prior to that date. But if they are not barred on that date the periods of limitation would be governed by the provisions of new Act. But where the period of limitation under the new Act is less than that fixed under the old Act, the limitation fixed by the old Act will have its full run and the suit or application would be considered to be time barred only if it is filed after the expiry of the old limitation. It is the position of debtors, not of the creditor which should be considered when estimating the risk in taking a loan. Under S. 3 of the Usurious Loans Act, it is compulsory for the Court on coming to a finding that the interest is usurious to reopen the transactions and to find out what is really due at the proper rate of interest from the defendant to the plaintiff. ——Evidentiary value—Record of custom clear as to tenant losing rights in grove on ejectment from tenanc land—Absence of verification by t·nants—It can affect.

Where the wajib-ul-arz of a village sets out in clear and unambiguous words the existence of a custom as to the tenants losing rights in grove on their ejectment from tenancy land, it must be taken that the existence of the custom has been proved. The contention that a wajib-ul-arz loses its evidentiary value in cases where it records a custom prejudicial to the tenants which is not agreed to by them is apparently based on the theory that the custom is unreasonable. But as the custom recorded is not unreasonable, a Court is not justified on rejecting the wajib-ul-arz as of no evidentiary value because of the absence of verification by the tenants (Ghulam Hasan, J.) BAJRANG BAHADUR SINGH v. RAM NEWAZ. 202 I.C. 743=15 R.O. 144=1942 O.W.N. 574=1942 A.W.R. There is no warrant for holding that Ordinance IX of 1940 does not apply to firms but only to private individuals trading as such. WILL—Bequest—Defeasance clause—Condition precedent and condition subsequent—Non compliance—When operates as forfeiture—Clause in terrorem—Gift over—If necessary to operate as forfeiture—English law and Indian law—Distinction.

Under the English law, certain conditions, if attached to a legacy of a specific personal estate or a legacy charged on personal estate only, may be void against the donee as made in terrorem, that is to say, as a mere idle threat to induce the donee to comply with the condition, but not to affect the bequest, unless the testator shows an intention that the condition is effective, such as by making a different disposition of the subject-matter of the gift in the event of non-compliance of the condition, i.e., by a gift over. In cases where such a condition is a condition subsequent, a gift over on non-compliance with the conditions is essential to, and sufficient for, the validity of the condition. Such a gift over may be specified, or may be made by a direction that on non-compliance the gift is to fall into residue, but not by a mere residuary gift alone. In cases also where such a condition is a condition precedent, the testator may show that the condition is not in terrorem by a gift over on non-compliance with the condition, and in this case a mere residuary gift would be sufficient. But under the Indian Law as provided in S. 134 of the Succession Act of 1925, a gift may be coupled with a condition that on the happening or not happening of a specified uncertain event it shall cease, and to effectuate the defeasance, a gift over is not necessary as required by English law. Under S. 134, if the condition subsequent is valid, if accompanied by a gift over, it will be equally valid without the gift over, while in English law it is treated as in terrorem. The condition referred to S. 134 is a condition subsequent which terminates an interest. It is not a conditional limitation which creates an interest in a third person. ———Charitable endowment—Scheme different from that provided in will—Sanction by Court.

A testator by his will provided for the establishment of a charitable out-door dispensary in his ancestral house and directed that the income derived from certain medical books of which he was the author and from his immovable properties should be spent towards the expenses of the said dispensary. The immovable properties left by the testator were in a very bad state of repair and would have required a large sum, which would have to be raised by loan, before they could be expected to bring in any income. The testator's medical publications had become obsolete and no income was derived from them. A scheme was proposed under which the testators' properties should be sold and a small plot should be purchased in the vicinity and a charitable dispensary should be constructed thereon and conducted from out of the income of the surplus sale proceeds which should be invested.

Held, that the divergence between the provisions of the will and the proposed scheme was not so great as to forbid the Court from sanctioning the scheme. (Panckridge, J.) RADHA GOBINDA KAR v. NALINI MOHAN KAR. 46 C.W.N. 106

———Construction—Absolute interest — Words "I leave in charge of"—Meaning of.

The relevant paragraphs of the will were as follows: "(1) I leave my house in the Horse Road in the charge of Madame Amina, Meriam Ali and my son Mama Ali. The said house is never to be sold but the rent received therefrom is to be divided equally between the said Madame Amina, Meriam Ali and my son Mama Ali. (2) I leave the land known as Ali's land behind the mosque at Zongo in the charge also of Madame Amina, Meriam Ali and Mama Ali".

Held on considering the will as a whole that the words "I leave in the charge of" in para. 1 and in para. 2 were equivalent to "I devise absolutely to". (Lord Romer.) ABIBA ALI v. ALHAJI MAMA ALI. 203 I.C. 561=9 B.R. 95=56 L.W. 1=15 R.P.C. 55=A.I.R. 1942 P.C. 69 (P.C.).

———Construction—Absolute or life estate—Bequest to wife—Use of word 'malik'.

The paramount intention of the testator must be determined from a reading of the will as a whole. The use of the word malik (owner) in a will must always be interpreted in relation to the context and in particular cases the circumstances or context may be sufficient to show that absolute estate was not intended. A will made by a Hindu testator devised his property in the following words: "On my death my wife be an owner and possessor like myself of the entire movable and immovable property owned by me. During her lifetime my children will have no connexion with my property whatever, and she will be at liberty to manage it in any manner she likes. My wife, however, shall have no right to alienate my property without any legal necessity."

Held, that the testator's intention was to confer a life estate on his wife since her power of alienation was expressly taken away by the testator and the will provided for the disposition of the property after his wife's death. ———Construction—Intention of testator—Language used sufficient to confer absolute estate—Such estate inconsistent with testator's dominant intention—Effect of.

On reading the whole of a will the dominant intention of the testator as expressed therein appeared to be two: (1) exclusion of his son from his properties and (2) that his estate in its entirety was to pass intact to his widow and grandsons in succession and in case of the death of the grandsons during the lifetime of the widow to certain specified objects.

Held, that the first dominant intention was made effective by the disposition of his entire estate to persons other than his son and that the second dominant intention could not be given effect to if the estate conferred on the widow be an absolute estate and that consequently the widow had only a life estate although the expressions used in the will would ordinarily be sufficient to confer an absolute estate on her. ——S. 2 (1) (d)—"Dependent" — Step-mother—Position of—"Mother" and "parent"—If include step-mother or step parent.

A step-mother is not a dependent within the meaning of S. 2 (1) (d) of the Workmen's Compensation Act. ——S. 3—"Out of and in the course of his employment"—Meaning of—Burden of proof—Workman sleeping on barge for night in course of employment—Death by drowning—Inference as to cause of accident.

Where an application is made for compensation on the ground of the death of a workman, the burden is on the applicant to prove that the accident arose out of the employment as well as in the course of the employment. Where it is found on evidence that a workman was sleeping for the night on a barge which was tied up alongside a steamer in the dock in the course of his employment, it is necessarily a risk inherent in the discharge of his duty in so sleeping that he may fall off the barge into water. If such workman is found dead and his body floating in the dock, the most natural inference is that the accident occurred because for some reason or other in the middle of the night the workman fell off the barge either in his sleep or when half awake and struck his head in the process. When the evidence further establishes that there was a storm on that night and that he was a good swimmer, and when there is absolutely no evidence to suggest suicide or homicide, the most natural and necessary inference is that he met with an accident which arose out of his duty in sleeping on the barge. ——S. 25—Scope—Mandatory nature of—Non-compliance—Effect—Order passed without taking evidence but after considering report of subordinate and statements not made on oath—Sustainability.

S. 25 of the Workmen's Compensation Act is mandatory and the provisions of that section and the preceding sections make it clear that the commissioner must hear evidence adduced by the parties and decide the dispute, whatever it may be, upon such evidence. The Act enjoins that he and he alone can decide the matters referred to in the Act, and there is nothing in Act which entitles him to delegate his powers and to order one of his subordinates to do the work for him or to make reports so as to make his work lighter and easier. He is constituted the tribunal under the Act to hear and determine the cases in the manner provided by the Act, and he is bound to do so and to follow the terms of the Act. If the commissioner fails to comply with the mandatory provisions of the Act and hears no evidence but only considers a report submitted by his subordinate or statements not taken on oath, there is no hearing of the case in the judicial sense and the order passed in such proceedings cannot be sustained (Harries, C.J. and Manohar Lall, J.) POWELL v. PANCHU MOKADAM. 21 Pat. 218=201 I.C. 309=8 B.R. 781=1942 P.W.N. 193= 15 R.P. 43=A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 453

ZAILDAR—Appointment—Lambardar and non-Lambardar belonging to predominant tribe—Preference.

It is not an inflexible rule that the Zaildar must necessarily belong to the largest and most predominant tribe in the Zail. This is only one of several matters which have to be taken into account in making an appointment of Zaildar. As between a lambardar candidate and a non-lambardar candidate belonging to the predominant tribe in the Zail, the former is to be preferred to the office of Zaildar. (Mitchell, F.C.) BOGHA v. RATAN SINGH. 21 L.L.T. 19.

——Appointment— Non-Lambardar candidate —If can appeal against Collector's order.

In a case of an appointment of Zaildar, a person who is not a lambardar and whose candidature has not been approved by the Commissioner has no locus standi to appeal to the Commissioner against the order of a Collector appointing as Zaildar a candidate who is either a lambardar or whose candidature has been duly approved by the Commissioner under Land Revenue Rule 4, as such a person has no locus standi to appear even before the Collector as a candidate for the appointment and his hearing by the Collector is a concession only. It is only when the circumstances of a case are exceptional that the Commissioner may give a hearing to a candidate who is not technically qualified, and at that hearing accord the necessary technical qualification if the circumstances call for such action. (Mitchell, F.C.)

HANMANT DAS v. HARI SINGH. 21 L.L.T. 8.

——Appointment—Principles—Preferential right of lambardars—Residence in Zail—If necessary

The field of selection for Zaildars should not be widened by the inclusion of non-lambardars without good reason, and the Commissioner should not accord approval, as a matter of course to a non-lambardar's candidature, but only after satisfying himself that none of the lambardar candidates are really suitable. No doubt a non-lambardar whose candidature has been sanctioned by the Commissioner has a right to be considered, but lambardars still have a preferential right to the appointment. It is clearly the intention of Land Revenue Rules 4 and 5 that a Zaildar should be resident of the Zail. Though this rule can be relaxed, there must be very special reasons for so doing. This is because, the principle underlying the rules is that the Zaildar should be the representative of the hereditary owners of the Zail by virtue (among other things) of being one of them, and it is undesirable to appoint a man whose ancestral home and primary claims as a Zaildar are in another Zail. ALIENS—Company incorporated and carrying on business territory since occupied by enemy—If enemy aliens—Right to continue arbitration proceedings previously stated in England—Effect on retainer of solicitor.

The modern rule of international law is that while the occupying power exercises a military authority over the occupied territory, it does not by the mere fact of occupation exercise sovereignty over it. The mere fact that a person or company is continuing to trade within territory (like Netherlands) occupied by the enemy does not impress that person with the character of an alien enemy at common law to the extent that British subjects may not lawfully have dealings with him and access to the Kings Courts is not denied to him. There may well be cases where the occupying enemy or some or all of the inhabitants of the occupied territory. To act that it may be a fair inference that all the inhabitants or some of them have acquired an enemy character and each case must be decided on the facts available to the Court. On the facts of the present case the company had not such an enemy character as to extend it from acting through solicitors in England or from presenting a claim as claimant in an arbitration or from appearing as "actor" in the Kings Courts. Re N. ARBITRATION ACT (1889), S. 4—Repudiation of contract containing arbitration clause—Suit for damages for breach of contract—Stay of—Right to at instance of repudiating party.

What is commonly called repudiation or total breach of contract, whether acquiesced in by the other party or not, does not abrogate a contract, though it may relieve the injured party of the duty of further fulfilling the obligations which he has by a contract undertaken to the repudiating party. The contract is not put out of existence though all further performance of the obligations undertaken by each party in favour of the other may cease. It survives for the purpose of measuring the claims arising out of the breach; and the arbitration clause survives for determining the mode of their settlement. The purposes of the contract have failed but the arbitration clause is not one of the purposes of the contract. The doctrine of approbate and reprobate does not apply to prevent a party to a contract who had declined to proceed further with the performance of his obligations to the other party from invoking an arbitration clause in the contract for the purpose of settling all questions to which his declinature has given rise. Accordingly where a suit is filed for damages for breach by repudiation of a contract containing an arbitration clause, the repudiating party can ask for the stay of the legal proceedings and take advantage of the arbitration clause. One of the parties after a reference to arbitration appointed his arbitrator and as the other party had failed to appoint an arbitrator on his behalf served on him a notice requiring him within seven days from the service of the notice to name an arbitrator to act on his behalf in the matters submitted, failing which the matter would stand referred to the arbitrator appointed by himself as the sole arbitrator. After the seven days had expired the arbitrator proceeded to act alone in the reference. On the question of the validity of the award by him,

Held, that the notice was a mere statement to the other party that, as a matter of law, the result will be that one arbitrator is a sole arbitrator and it is not an appointment as sole arbitrator under S. 6 (b) of the Arbitration Act the party giving the notice has to expressly appoint his arbitrator as sole arbitrator in the submission. On 8th January, 1941, the petitioning creditors recovered judgment against the debtor. On 21st January, 1941, a bankruptcy notice was served on the debtor which was not complied with and therefore the debtor committed an act of bankruptcy on 28th January. In the meantime on 22nd January, 1941, the debtor's mother had applied to the Court in lunacy for the appointment of a receiver. On 30th January, a bankruptcy petition was presented. On 18th February, an order was made in Lunacy appointing an ad interim receiver until the hearing of the mother's application. On 4th March, the Master in Lunacy made an order appointing a receiver and on 17th March, 1941, a receiving order was made. In an application to discharge the receiving order,

Held, (1) A lunatic not so found could be adjudicated bankrupt and without the concurrence of the Court in Lunacy, (ii) Although the trustees title would relate back to 28th January, the title of the trustees in bankruptcy to the property belonging to the debtor on that date is no better than the title of the debtor himself. The possession and control of the debtor's property given to the receiver in lunacy cannot be ousted by the trustee in bankruptcy. Re A DEBTOR (NO. I OF 1941). (1941) 3 All.E.R. 12 (Ch.D.).

quent order of discharge expressly continuing the order for monthly payment—Validity.

An order was made on 1st March, 1938. Under [S. 51 (1) of the Bankruptcy Act] that the sum of £5 monthly should be paid to the trustee out of the bankrupt's salary "during the bankruptcy" and "until the Court shall make an order to the contrary." On 10th March, 1938, the Court granted the debtor an immediate discharge but directed that the order under S. 51 (1) dated 1st March, 1938, be expressly continued on a special case stated to test the validity of the order continuing the appropriation out of the bankrupt's salary.

Held that, (1) orders made under S. 51 need not be limited to property vested in the trustee under the other provisions of the Bankruptcy Act. (2) The discharge of a bankrupt does not put an end to the bankruptcy and therefore it cannot be held that "during the bankruptcy" refer to a period which comes to an end the moment the bankrupt gets his discharge. (3) In any event what the Court did in effect by the order of March 10, whether or not it was entirely necessary was to impose on the discharge of the bankrupt the condition that the order of March 1 should continue in operation. (4) The order of March 10 was therefore valid and effective. Re A DEBTOR (NO. 6 OF 1934). (1941) 3 All E.R. 289 (Ch.D.).

BANKRUPTCY ACT (1914), S. 69—Surplus assets after payment in full to proving creditors—If can be subjected to a charging order in favour of creditors who did not prove.

The word "creditors" in S. 69 of the Bankruptcy Act must be read as meaning only creditors who have proved in the bankruptcy and not those who after notice do not come in and prove their debts in the bankruptcy. Therefore, on all the creditors who have proved in the bankruptcy being paid in full with interest and costs, the balance of assets in the hands of the trustee is held in trust for the bankrupt and consequently is a fund in respect of which a charging order can be made at the instance of a non-proving creditor who had obtained a judgment after the adjudication of the bankrupt. Re WARD. (1942) Ch. 294=(1942) 1 All. Held that in the absence of an express statement that the bills were payable "only at the place specified and not elsewhere" the acceptance was not a local acceptance. The currency in which the bills is payable and the place of payment specified on the face of the bill do not indicate that the parties intended payment to be made at the specified place and there only. COMPANIES—Directors' fiduciary capacity—Acquisition by directors of shares in subsidiary company—Profit made by resale of such shares—Liability to account for to the company.

The directors of the Regal (a company) with a view to the future development or sale of their company, were anxious to extend the sphere of its operations by the acquisition of other cinemas. In Hastings and St. Leonards there were two small ones called the Elite and Deluxe. Negotiations began both for their acquisition or control by lease or otherwise and for the disposal of Regal itself. A subsidiary company was created for the purpose with a capital of £5,000 in £1 shares. The directors were the same as those of Regal with the addition of one Garton. It was thought that only £2,000 of the capital was to be issued and that it would be subscribed by Regal who would control it. The five directors and a solicitor of the company subscribed 500 shares each and the capital of the new company was fully subscribed, the shares duly paid for and allotted. These shares were afterwards sold at substantial profits.

Held: At all material times the directors of the main company were in a fiduciary position and they used and acted upon their exclusive knowledge acquired as such directors. They sought no authority from the company and by reason of their position and action made large profits. Accordingly they are liable to account to the company for the profits so made. In 1935 H & Sons employed M as their architect in connection with an extension of the original building. The claim in the action was made by the sequels in title of S & B, who alleged that the buildings put up in accordance with M's plans, and the plans themselves, infringed the copyright vested in the plaintiffs both in the artistic design of the buildings for which S & B were responsible and in the relative plans. The main defence was that it was implicit in the transaction between H & Sons and S & B that H & Sons and any architect employed by them should stand authorised to do what in fact had been done.

Held, that (i) no such term can be implied in the original transaction on the facts of this case. (ii) An architectural plan finds its meaning and purpose in the use to which it is put and the copyright vests in the architect in regard to the building as well as the plans. The builder is only part of the machinery employed in the production of the structure which embodies the design and ideas of the architect. For copyright purposes, the author of the architectural work of art is the author of the plans and not the builder. (iii) Though the

In a charge of having carnal knowledge of a girl of eight the only evidence was that of the victim and by virtue of the proviso to S. 38 of the Children and Young Persons Act, 1933, it was essential as a matter of law that the evidence should be corroborated by other material evidence. The conduct of the accused in not denying the charges in the following circumstances was relied on as affording the necessary corroboration. The circumstances were:—The police inspector saw the prisoner in the street and cautioned him in the usual way. He told him that he was not bound to make any statement and that he had a warrant for his arrest for having had carnal knowledge of K aged 8 years. To that the prisoner replied "I know what you mean, but not likely. She plays with the Sawbridge girl." The same evening the warrant was again read over to the accused who having been told that he need say nothing answered, "I have got you. Nothing to say." Again at the hearing before the Magistrate, after being cautioned that he was not obliged to say anything and that whatever he said would be taken down and given as evidence in the trial, he said "I am not guilty. I am going to say nothing." Lastly at the trial before the Judge having had the advantage of counsel's advice, he did not go into the witness box to give evidence.

——Income-tax proceedings—Confession as a result of an inducement that no criminal proceedings will be instituted and production of documents—If can be used as evidence in subsequent prosecution in respect of the fraud perpetrated in making returns.

B was a chartered accountant employed by R an assessee in making his income-tax returns. An interview took place at which were present two representatives of the Inland Revenue making investigations as to certain irregularities in the returns and B and R were present. In the presence of B and R the following extract from the Hansard's Parliamentary Debates of 19th July, 1923, was read: "The question of fraud and evasion in connection with direct taxation is of course a matter of great importance to the Exchequer, but it is not desired that fraudulent taxpayers should be deterred by the fear of criminal proceedings from making spontaneous disclosure of their misdeeds and appropriate pecuniary restitution. I will circulate with the official report a statement of the practice which is followed by the Board of Revenue in the matter. The following is the statement referred to: 'Where the taxpayer takes the initiative and voluntarily discloses the fact of his past frauds and their full extent and is also prepared to facilitate investigation and to furnish full evidence (including not only the business books and records, but also private bank books) as may be required on behalf of the board, as to the amount of the correct liability, the board will not institute criminal proceedings, but will accept a pecuniary settlement..... .....'" This having been read and a copy put into the hands of both B and R, they produced to the inspectors. two ledgers which had been fraudulently brought into existence to mislead the Revenue authorities. The authorities not being satisfied, another interview took place a couple of months later when two more ledgers were produced, and there was also produced by B the working papers used in the course of preparing R's returns. These revealed the fraud perpetrated in the two ledgers produced at the first interview. At a third interview the Hansard extract was again read to them and they were again given further opportunity to make further disclosure. Even then there was no full disclosure. In a subsequent prosecution of B and R,

Held, that the first two ledgers and the working papers of B though discovered as a result of the confession cannot in the circumstances be admitted in evidence having regard to the wording of the extract from the Hansard. ——Murder—Prosecution for—Accused setting up self-defence but asking for reduction of crime to manslaughter—Facts disclosing a possible case of manslaughter—Summing up to the jury—Duty of Judge.

Although the accused's case at the trial for murder was in substance that he had been compelled to use his weapon in necessary self-defence—a defence which, if it had been accepted by the jury, would have resulted in his complete acquittal—it is the duty of the Judge in summing up to the jury, to deal adequately with any other view of the facts which might reasonably arise out of the evidence given, and which would reduce the crime from murder to manslaughter. The fact that a defending counsel does not stress an alternative case before the jury (which he may well feel it difficult to do without prejudicing the main defence) does not relieve the Judge from the duty of directing the jury to consider the alternative, if there is material before the jury which would justify a direction that they should consider it. But if the evidence before the jury at the end of the case does not contain material upon which a reasonable man could find a verdict of manslaughter instead of murder, it is no defect in the summing up that manslaughter is not dealt with. Where there is no evidence to raise the issue of provocation it is not the duty of the Judge to invite the jury to speculate as to provocative incidents from the evidence. MANCINI v. DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS. (1941) 3 All E.R. 272 (H.L.).

——Procedure—Admissibility of evidence—Objection to—When to be taken.

The counsel for prosecution in a murder trial had started his opening had stated a few facts to the jury and was proposing to open to the jury the circumstances in which a complete confession had been made by the accused, when counsel for defence informed him that there would be an objection to the admissibility of the confession. The jury was sent out and the question of admissibility was argued.

Held, the ordinary practice in such a case, if there is any objection on the part of counsel for the defence to the admissibility of a piece of evidence, is that he should inform the prosecution of that fact before hand, and that the piece of evidence should not be opened to the jury. But in cases like the present where it is convenient and in which it cannot possibly result in any harm in its being done a Judge can hear advance arguments as to the admissibility of evidence. But in most cases the ordinary rule should be adhered to and it would have been very much better if it had been followed. Counsel for the prosecution could have opened the facts as to the murder and various other matters, medical evidence and so forth, and then simply have told the jury that there was some other vital evidence which he was not in a position to mention to them at the moment, but that it would be tendered in evidence at the proper time and the objection to admissibility could have been taken then and decided. DEBTOR AND CREDITOR—Assignment of debtor's property for benefit of creditors—Covenant by creditors not to sue debtor—Rights against sureties reserved—Surety's right of indemnity against the debtor—Enforceability.

Where there is an assignment of the debtor's property for the benefit of his creditors although the provisions of the law of bankruptcy are to be imported into the deed for the purpose of ascertaining the manner and proportions in which the proceeds of sale of the property comprised in the deed are divisible among the creditors the extent of the protection obtained by the debtor by virtue of the covenant not to sue is dependent entirely on the wording of such covenant where the provisions of the law of bankruptcy are not expressly or by implication imported into the terms of the covenant. Accordingly where under the covenant the assenting creditors are not to sue on account of their debts but the deed is not to affect the rights and remedies of the creditors against any surety the covenant did not affect a surety's consequential right of indemnity against the debtor though the surety was among the assenting creditors. The reservation as between creditor and debtor of the rights against the surety imports the continuance unimpaired of the surety's right of indemnity against the debtor. DEFENCE (GENERAL) REGULATIONS (1939), Reg. 18-B—Imprisonment under—Onus of proof as to the validity of detention order—Claim for particulars of defence—Sustainability.

Defence (General) Regulations, Reg. 18-B is in the following terms :—"If the Secretary of State has reasonable cause to believe any person to have been or to be a member of or to have been or to be active in the furtherance of the objects of any such organisation as is hereinafter mentioned, and that it is necessary to exercise control over him, he may make an order against that person directing that he be detained." The plaintiff having been detained by an order made by the Home Secretary under the Defence (General) Regulations 1939, Reg. 18-B, as a person of hostile associations in an action for damages for false imprisonment raised the validity of the order of detention. The plaintiff sought to have certain particulars from the defendant (the Secretary for Home affairs) of the grounds for belief of existence of "reasonable cause"—which the Courts below refused to order.

Held (Lord Atkin dissenting) that the words in the regulation "If the Secretary of State has reasonable cause for the belief" in the context point simply to the belief of the Secretary of State founded on his view of there being reasonable cause for the belief which he entertains and not that there must be an external fact as to reasonable cause capable of being challenged in a Court of law. The deletion of a non-cohabitation clause from a separation and maintenance order after it had been in full force for many years cannot automatically reconstitute desertion. The principle laid down by the House of Lords in *Pratt v. Otherwise a great injustice might be done to a spouse who had been deserted for nearly three years if, at the eleventh hour when he was about to file a petition, he could be defeated by the stratagem of the offending spouse offering to return although not contrite or anxious to resume married life. On a construction of the rule,

On 17th June, A and H sent notices of assignment to C who did not receive them until 18th June. In the circumstances X and Y claimed that (1) the assignment to H was void and a fraud on them and other creditors; (2) alternatively that at the date on which their garnishee order became effective (i.e.) 17th June, 1940, H's title was incomplete, in that the assignment to him was only an equitable assignment until completed by notice to the debtor, and that, since it was given without consideration it was of no avail as against their rights under the garnishee order. In a proposal for insurance against liability to employees one of the questions asked was "are your machinery, plant and ways properly fenced and guarded and otherwise in good order and condition"? and the answer was "Yes". In the policy of insurance was inter alia a condition that "the assured shall take reasonable precautions to prevent accidents and to comply with all statutory obligations." The insured employed a foreman who was obviously a competent and skilled man. In an action for indemnity under the policy for liability to a workman by an accident due to a defective scaffolding subsequently set up, Held, (1) the question in the proposal form and the answer thereto merely relates to the moment of time at which the proposer is answering it and does not extend to the future condition of the machinery, plant and ways during the currency of the policy; (2) by entrusting to a competent foreman the task of providing suitable and safe material for scaffolding and by selecting suitable materials for the job the employers took the reasonable precautions imposed by the condition and the insured are not in breach of the condition if the foreman is in fact negligent in carrying out the task entrusted to him. ——Marine insurance policy—Clause exempting liability for frustration of voyage—Scuttling of German steamers carrying goods—Right to recover for constructive total loss of cargo insured under policy.

A marine insurance policy covered war risks as well as marine risks and the policy contained a 'frustration clause'. The policy was warranted free of any claim based upon loss of, or frustration of the insured voyage or venture caused by arrests, restraints or detriment of kings, princes, peoples, usurpers, or persons attempting to usurp power. The goods were being carried on German ships which were directed by the German Government on the outbreak of the war to take refuge in a neutral port or if possible return to Germany with the cargo or as a last resort to scuttle. The masters of the vessels ultimately scuttled the ships. In actions by the owners of the cargo against the under-writers,

Held, affirming the decision of the C. A. in (1940) 4 All. E.R. 395, that the insured in each case was entitled to recover under their respective policies as each of them had suffered a constructive total loss of the goods through the action of the German Government. The frustration clause afforded no defence to the underwriters and the deviation was not such as would prevent the assured from recovering under the policies.

——Misrepresentation or concealment of a material fact—Effect—Road Traffic Act (1934), S. 10.

Under the general law of insurance an insurer can avoid a policy if he proves that there has been misrepresentation or concealment of a material fact by the insured. What is material is that which would influence the mind of a prudent insurer in deciding whether to accept the risk or fix the premium. If this be proved, it is not necessary further to prove that the mind of the actual insurer was so affected. But under S. 10, Road Traffic Act (1934) the general law is modified and the insurer if he wishes to avoid the policy must establish (1) that the matter relied on was "material" in the sense that the mind of a prudent insurer would be affected by it, and (2) that in fact the underwriter's mind was so affected, and the policy was thereby obtained. ——Society given power by rules to institute legal proceedings on behalf of members—Failure to institute proceeding—Society when liable.

A society was established for the definite object of administering on behalf of its members the provisions of the National Health Insurance Act. A rule of the society provided that "the executive committee of the society shall have power to institute legal proceedings on behalf of members of the society in cases where it may deem it advisable so to do, and may direct the institution of any legal or other proceedings or inquiries which it may consider desirable in the interests of the society or its members." A member involved in a road accident suffered severe personal injuries. He claimed in an action against the society that the society had been guilty of negligence, in that it had assumed on his behalf responsibility for taking legal proceedings to recover damages against the other party to the accident —namely a County Council by one of its drivers—and in breach of its duty had omitted to commence those proceedings within the period of six months allowed by the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893. He claimed that as a result of that delay the chance of obtaining damages was lost to him.

Held, that the rule did not impose on the committee any obligation whatever to institute legal proceedings on behalf of members. It gave the committee power to do so only in cases where it may deem it advisable so to do. BUTLER v. ALCOCK. (1941) 3 All.E.R. 411 (C.A.).

LIMITATION— Acknowledgement—Debt mentioned by debtor in Inland revenue affidavit and statement by debtor's solicitor to trustee in bankruptcy of creditor—If acknowledgment.

In June, 1929, Mrs. B. H. repaid, out of the £10,000 lent to her, by her husband B. H. the sum of £ 1000. She died on March, 17, 1931 having by the will dated October 16, 1918 appointed her husband (B. H.) the defendant, her sole executor, and having after giving specific legacies and a pecuniary legacy, devised all the residue of her real and personal estate to the defendant absolutely. In his application for probate the defendant swore the usual Inland revenue affidavit in which he gave particulars of the estate of the deceased and in the list of debts due by the deceased was included the sum of £9000 due to B. H. (the defendant) Probate of the will was granted to the defendant on May 20. 1931, and on March 14, 1935 he was adjudicated a bankrupt. Thereupon this debt due to him from his wife vested in the trustee in bankruptcy. In June, 1936, the solicitors for B. H. acting in his capacity as executor wrote a letter to the trustee in bankruptcy mentioning along with a statement of account, that there was a possible claim for the £9,000 the balance of the loan he had made to the deceased. In an action by the trustee in bankruptcy,

Held, that the debt was time barred and neither the affidavit for probate nor the solicitor's letter constituted an acknowledgment of the debt as neither of them was made to the creditor or his agent nor did either of them constitute a promise to pay. MEDICAL COUNCIL— Erasure of name fram register on the ground that member was found by Court guilty of adultery—Council if bound to hear other evidence in the inquiry.

The Medical Act (1858), S. 29 required a "due inquiry" before the erasure of the name of a member from the register of the Medical Council. The Council on the finding of the Divorce Court that a member was guilty of adultery removed his name refusing to hear other evidence adduced by him.

Held, (Singleton, J. dissenting) that the refusal did not prevent there being "due inquiry as required by the Act. The Council was entitled to accept the finding arrived at after full investigation by a competent Court without any fresh hearing. A registered money-lender having lent money at an interest of 150 per cent. per annum and after making further advances at high rates of interest ultimately took a fresh promissory note for the consolidated amount due for principal and interest with interest at 25 per cent. per annum.

In an action to restrain the defendants from selling Gillette blades, manufactured by the plaintiffs under their patents, at less than certain regulated prices,

Held, that the burden lies upon the patentee to show inter alia that the defendant had the restrictive condition brought to his notice at the time when he acquired the patented goods and it is not sufficient to show that that condition came to his notice in the interval between his acquisition of the goods and his disposal of them. Columbia Graphophone Co., Ltd. v. Thomas, 41 R.P.C. 294, Expl.

PRACTICE—Appeal—Collisions at sea—Apportionment of liability between joint tort-feasors by trial Judge—Power of appellate Court to vary.

In deciding how much a ship is to blame for a collision, the Court has to decide a question which is just as much one of fact as is the question whether she is to blame at all. If an appellate Court is of opinion that the trial Judge has taken a wrong view of the respective degrees of blame to be attributed to the colliding vessels, it has not only the right but the duty to give effect to its opinion. ——Appeal—Order by Court below in the exercise of its discretion—Interference in appeal—When proper.

Appellate authorities ought not to reverse the order by a lower Court in its discretion merely because they would themselves have exercised the original discretion, had it attached to them, in a different way. But if the appellate tribunal reaches the clear conclusion that there has been a wrongful exercise of discretion in that no weight, or no sufficient weight, has been given to relevant considerations in the case then the reversal of the order on appeal may be justified. In an action by C and other persons injured in the accident, the Treasury Solicitor ultimately entered appearance for the defendant who was on active service abroad and asked for stay on the ground that the defendant and a material witness were out of jurisdiction on service.

Held, that the delay caused by such stay till return to England of the defendant and the witness will hold up the action indefinitely and was likely to cause grave injustice to the plaintiffs, and that accordingly such a stay should not be ordered. PRACTICE.

A soldier in His Majesty's army who has been taken prisoner during the war and is detained in enemy territory, is not an "enemy" in any sense of the word and therefore service of summons of an action against him cannot be dispensed with under the Rules of Supreme Court O. Where on an application for a stay of execution pending an appeal, a Judge has exercised his jurisdiction as to the amount of security which should be given and as to the time within which the security should be given and the order as to stay has been passed and entered, the Judge is functus officio and has no jurisdiction to vary the order. ———Judgment—Debt not immediately payable—Property of value proportionate to debt to be charged.

Even though a debt is not immediately payable the Court has jurisdiction to make a charging order in respect of it. But such jurisdiction must be exercised with the greatest care, as a charging order for a debt not immediately payable is a form of execution. It will not be a proper exercise of jurisdiction to lock up a disproportionate amount of property to satisfy a small debt by reason of the apprehended failure of defendant to satisfy the terms of a judgment. ———Particulars—Claim for special damages for wrongful dismissal—Particulars from plaintiff of other employment after dismissal and period of reasonable notice—When to be ordered before delivery of written statement—Rules of practice—If can affect discretion of Judges in special circumstances.

In an action for damages for wrongful dismissal the plaintiff claimed reasonable notice and averred special damage. Where a plaintiff alleges special damage he must give sufficient particulars of it. He must state either that he has not earned any remuneration in other employment during the relevant period or that he has done so and any form of pleading or any particulars given which do not bring to the clear knowledge of the defendant which of the two implicit statements he is going to rely on, is embarrassing. Also the defendant is entitled to have particulars of what the plaintiff claims to be reasonable notice. The ordering of such particulars before delivery of defence is desirable to enable defendants to decide whether they will pay money into Court and if so what amount and plead the same in defence. There is no rule of practice that particulars of special damages cannot be ordered. Rules of practice grow up and justify themselves as indicating that in the ordinary case judicial discretion will not be exercised in a particular way, but no such rule of practice can be binding where complete discretion is given, and if a Judge considers that an order should be made in the special circumstances of the case before him, he is certainly not bound to follow rules of practice of that kind. Sch. III of the Railways Act provided inter alia for compensation for existing officers and servants who suffer damage "by reason of an amalgamation of Railway companies." It was found that certain employees were dismissed after an amalgamation to reduce expenses and that they would have been dismissed even if there had been no amalgamation.

Held, on a construction of the relevant provisions of the schedule, that the employees were not entitled to compensation as they did not suffer damage by "reason of the amalgamation." BORMAN v. LONDON AND NORTH EASTERN RAILWAY CO. (1942) 1 All.E.R. 442 (K.B.D.).

———Libel—Borough council meeting—Agenda in notice containing copy of committee's report containing defamatory statements—Transmission to public libraries—Publication—Whether privileged.

After the discovery of a shortage of petrol at one of a Borough council's depots and the conviction of two employees for stealing the petrol, the council appointed a committee "to inquire into the circumstances relating to the loss of the petrol" and to report thereon. One of the convicted employees had during the trial made statements tending to implicate a number of his fellow employees and in their report the committee set out a list of the names of such employees including those of the plaintiffs. The committee stated that the accusations had been reiterated before them and that the employees concerned had emphatically denied the accusations. The report contained in terms no statement that the committee found the charges proved in whole or in part, but there was a recommendation that the employees named including the plaintiffs, should be removed from their existing positions and transferred to other positions. The town clerk sent a notice of a meeting of the council to consider inter alia the report of the committee. Copies of the notice containing a full copy of the committee's report were affixed near the door of the town hall where the council was to meet and were also sent to each of the public libraries in the Borough in accordance with long standing practice approved and authorised by the council. In an action against the town clerk mayor alderman and councillors by the plaintiffs for damages for libel alleging that the defendants meant that each of the plaintiffs had been a party to the stealing of the petrol, held, that the publication was not privileged as there was no duty or interest to make the communication to the rate payers at that stage. ———Negligence—Defective condition of lift—Liability of landlord for injury to visitor of tenant—Liability of repairer under limited contract of maintenance to users of lift.

The plaintiff, a solicitor's clerk, in the course of his professional affairs went to a block of flats owned by X in order to call on a tenant living there. Owing to the defective condition of the hydraulic lift the plaintiff was injured. In an action for damages against the owners and the engineers responsible for 'inspecting the lift every month, to adjust, clear and lubricate the mechanism of the lifts', it was found that the day before the accident the engineers attended and adjusted the mechanism and that the cause of the accident was the faulty repacking of the cylinder gland by the mechanic employed by the engineer.

Held, that (i) X having employed competent contractors was not liable to the plaintiff whether he was an invitee or a licensee. (ii) Per Scott and Goddard, L.JJ. (Clauson, L.J., dissenting).—The engineers were liable as the accident was due to their negligence in leaving the lift in a dangerous condition. Plaintiff ran out to save the child from being struck by the motor cycle. The defendant cleared the child but struck the plaintiff and injured her. In a claim for damages,

Held, in the circumstances, the initial wrong was on the defendant who was approaching the cross road at too great a speed and was in law solely responsible for the accident. What the plaintiff did was a natural and proper thing to do and there was no contributory negligence on her part. The plaintiff was therefore entitled to damages. ———Negligence—Master and servant—Petrol tanker delivering petrol at garage—Driver lighting cigarette and throwing away match which started a fire—If act in course of employment.

The respondents were insured by the appellant company against liability to third parties arising from damage to property caused by the use by them of a petrol tanker belonging to the respondents. On 2nd August, 1937, this tanker which was being driven by their employee, one D, had taken on board a consignment of 300 gallons of petrol at the Larne depot of Holmes, Ltd., for delivery into the storage tank of one Catherwood, a garage proprietor of Belfast. D drove the tanker to Belfast backed it into the Catherwood's garage, inserted the nozzle of the delivery hose-pipe into the manhole of Catherwood's tank and turned on the stopcock at the side of the tanker into the tank D, lighted a cigarette and threw away the lighted match. The match ignited some material on the floor of the garage and a fire was caused forthwith where the nozzle of the delivery hose was discharging into the tank. The tanker was destroyed by an explosion. An adjoining house and a car were also destroyed and respondents had to pay damages. In a claim on the insurance it was contended that D was the servant of Holmes & Co. and not of the respondents by virtue of an agreement between them which provided inter alia, that all the employees of the respondent engaged in or about the delivery of petrol should accept and obey the orders of Holmes & Co., regarding such delivery, the payments of accounts and all matters incidental thereto, and that the respondents should dismiss any employee disregarding or failing to obey such orders. In the clause there followed a proviso that nothing in the clause should be taken as implying that such employees were in any way the employees of Holmes & Co.

Held, (i) the terms of the contract between the respondents and Holmes & Co., did not involve the transfer of 'D' to the service of Holmes & Co.; (ii) the negligent act of D which caused the fire was done in the course of his employment by the respondents; and (iii) the respondents were accordingly entitled to claim from the appellants under their policy. ——Negligence—Radiographer in hospital by error of judgment not applying sufficient screen while applying X-ray—Injury to patient's face—Hospital if liable.

The duty which the law implies in the relation of the hospital authority to a patient and the corresponding liability are limited. The Governors of a public hospital, by their admission of the patient to enjoy in the hospital the gratuitous benefits of its care, undertake that the patient whilst there shall be treated only by experts, whether surgeons, physicians or nurses, of whose professional competence the Governors have taken reasonable care to assure themselves; and, further that those experts shall have at their disposal, for the care and treatment of the patient, fit and proper apparatus and appliances. But the hospital authority does not make itself liable in damages, if members of its professional staff, of whose competence there is no question, act negligently towards the petient in some matter of professional care of skill, or neglect to use, or use negligently in his treatment the apparatus or appliances at their disposal. Accordingly where a patient's face was injured by reason of the inadequate screening due to an error of judgment while a radiologist was giving X-ray treatment for removal of warts the hospital authority is not liable for damages for the negligence. ——Executors—Liability for loss to estate by delay in realising and paying debts.

Apart from any provisions contained in the will of a testator which expressly or impliedly deal with the payment of the debts, it is the duty of executors as a matter of due administration of the estate to pay the debts of their testator with due diligence having regard to the assets in their hands which are properly applicable for that purpose, and, in determining whether due diligence has been shown, regard must be had to all the circumstances of the case. The duty is owed not only to the creditors but also to the beneficiaries, for, the ultimate object of administration of an estate is to place the beneficiaries in possession of their interest, and that object cannot be fully achieved unless all debts are satisfied. There is no rule of law that it is the duty of executors to pay debts within one year. The duty is to pay with due diligence and if debts are not paid within one year the onus is thrown upon the executors to justify the delay. As beneficiaries take under the provisions of the will full effect has to be given to the terms giving the executors power to retain assets. Where the estate is saddled with speculative assets like shares the executor has a discretion to give the speculation a fair run. If by reason of the delay the shares fall in value and result in loss, the executors are not liable as their power of retention has been properly exercised. Re TANKARD, TANKARD v. MIDLAND BANK EXECUTOR AND TRUSTEE CO., LTD. (1942) 1 Ch. 69=(1941) 3 All. A soldier, a territorial, was mobilised on 1st September, 1939. On the same day he gave his solicitor instructions for his will, but he never actually executed the will. In August, 1940, his battalion was in camp at a spot in Great Britain and on 5th August, 1940, while he was in camp, he said to a comrade of his: "I wish my wife to have all I have in case I get killed". On 7th August, 1940, enemy aircraft dropped bombs on the camp and he received a wound from which he died on the following day. In a motion by his widow to admit the oral will to probate,

Held, that the will is entitled to be admitted to probate as having been made on 5th August, 1940, by the deceased while a soldier in actual military service under the Wills Act (1837), S. 11. Re SPARK. (1941) 2 All. E.R. 782 (P.D.A.).

——'Offender' in S. 186 of Customs Consolidation Act, 1876—If includes accused suspected of having committed offence—Arrest of person suspected to be harbouring uncustomed goods—Accused acquitted by Magistrate—Action for false imprisonment—Maintainability.

Two Customs Preventive Officers arrested the respondent for alleged breaches of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, S. 186. He was brought before a Magistrate charged with knowingly harbouring uncustomed goods but was acquitted. He then brought an action for damages for false imprisonment. S. 186 of the Customs Act provided that "Every person who shall . . . . knowingly harbour . . . . any . . . . uncustomed goods . . . . . shall for each such offence forfeit either treble the value of the goods, including the duty payable thereon or £100 at the election of the Commissioners of Customs; and the offender may either be detained or proceeded against by summons." On a construction of the wording of the section, Held, though the prima facie meaning of the word 'offender' is 'one who has committed an offence' the word is capable also of meaning an alleged offender and as the arrest was permitted by the statute the plaintiff's action must fail. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION — Fracture of ankle of workmen—Refusal of workmen to submit to operation—Reasonableness of refusal a question of fact unassailable in Court of appeal.

The question whether a workman was unreasonable in refusing to undergo an operation is a question of fact and where the arbitrator arrived at a finding on proper evidence that the workman was not unreasonable in refusing to undergo an operation the decision is unassailable in a Court of appeal. ——Refusal of workman to have injured leg amputated—Reasonableness—Effect on liability of employer.

A workman's foot was crushed in an accident and after the removal of some bones which left him, though still suffering considerable pain, able to walk two miles slowly with a stick. The employers on their doctors advice wanted the workman to have his foot amputated which he refused to undergo under the advice of an other eminent surgeon.

Held, the refusal was not unreasonable in the circumstances. The employers can succeed only if they can establish that the man unreasonably refused to accept the offer to have an artificial foot supplied to him for the rest of his life in place of the injured natural foot which he was asked to get amputated.
